GOP Hit As Veto-Happy

NEW YORK (AP) — At the biggest show off Broadway, Democrats approved Jimmy Carter's campaign platform early Wednesday and denounced Republicans as veto-happy modern Tories, while the nominee-in-waiting considered a vice presidential choice to complete his cast.

The platform was approved by voice vote, just as the Democratic National Convention script said it would be. It was presented in a succession of speeches that assumed filibuster proportions, to delegates and reporters who milled about the floor, crowded the aisles and kept talking among themselves.

By midnight, many of the delegates had drifted away, leaving rows of empty seats on the floor of Madison Square Garden.

With the platform, the Democrats vowed a drive against unemployment, a start on federal programs of health insurance and guaranteed minimum income, and an effort to reform and streamline the government. They also said they would try to save money and would cut defense spending by $5 billion to $7 billion.

Before the platform was adopted, Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, the platform chairman, added an unofficial endorsement of the Israeli commando raid that rescued more than 100 hostages from Palestinian terrorists in Uganda.

A Democratic congressional leader reported, and a Carter spokesman denied, that the former Georgia governor had decided that either Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine or Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota would be his running mate.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said the list of vice presidential prospects is still six senators long. That stirred skepticism, but Powell insisted it was so.

At the convention's marathon second session, nearly nine hours long, the party's last two presidential nominees, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, took turns assailing the Republicans who defeated them.

Two of the vice presidential prospects, Muskie and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, were among the party leaders who spoke on platform planks. Both drew cheers centered in their state delegations, and there were chants of "We want Church" after his denunciation of Republican foreign policy.

Humphrey said the voters will throw out the "Republican Tories" and make Carter president. McGovern called for the kind of Democratic unity his 1972 ticket was denied, and said America cannot afford four more years of an administration in which the veto has been used "53 times . . . to paralyze the elected representatives of the American people."

Then came platform time, but it was a show, not a debate, a succession of speeches by party leaders on each section of the document that was set in advance.

That brought Muskie to the microphone, to accuse President Ford of saying no, no and no again, to economic and jobs programs Americans need. "We need not government by veto but government by inspired leadership," he said.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace was chosen to speak of government reform, which is covered in the platform with a plank pledging the kind of overhaul and consolidation for which Carter has campaigned.

Wallace put his own stamp on the issue, and in a line he used from a hundred platforms in his own quests for the presidency, told the convention: "Some of these bureaucratic briefcase toters ought to have their briefcases thrown in the Potomac River because the American people would be better off."

Wallace said Carter and a Democratic Congress will see to it that tax money is spent for purposes more productive than bureaucracy and red tape. "The average citizen of this country from one end to the other wants the bureaucracy to get off his back an out of his pocketbook," Wallace said from his wheelchair.

As if to underscore the harmony mood, the convention's second session quickly ratified the no-contests report of its credentials committee, settling an item that produced party-rending fights four years ago.

"Our business here is not to fight over credentials," said Sen. Alan Cranston of California, reporting for the credentials committee. " . . . Our task is to nominate our nation's next president and vice president."

The main business of the convention was one night away: the call of the roll that will nominate a candidate for the White House. The name is Carter.

Three others arranged to have their names entered for their last hurrahs of 1976. Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona will be nominated by former Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox. The name of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California will be presented by farm union organizer Caesar Chavez, with seconding speeches by Rep. Yvonne Burke of California and Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana. And Ellen McCormack, the antiabortion candidate from suburban Long Island, is to be placed in nomination, too.

Malpractice Dispute . . . Advice On Law Irks Legislators

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

A legislative panel Tuesday debated and attacked what members said amounts to authority of the Nebraska attorney general and state agencies to block implementation of state law.

The Unicameral's Public Health and Welfare Committee considered suing the State Insurance Department for refusing to put into effect last Saturday the medical malpractice law.

The Hospital-Medical Liability Act was approved by the 1976 Legislature as LB434. In an opinion requested by Insurance Director E. Benjamin Nelson, Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas said last week the act is "constitutionally suspect."

Douglas thus advised Nelson not to spend public money or use state personnel to implement LB434 until "its provisions can be constitutionally reviewed" by the courts.

Legal Course Rejected

Because the Health Committee itself has no power to sue Nelson's department, as Grand Island Sen. Ralph Kelly suggested, he moved to ask the Legislature Executive Board to investigate initiating a lawsuit. That also was rejected.

But the committee agreed to hold a hearing in early August to air the entire malpractice question for possible reconsideration by the full 1977 Legislature.

Meanwhile, Kelly questioned how there can be "a void" as LB434 is put "on hold," negating legislative function. He said that means a state agency in effect "can violate the law with impunity."

Kelly and Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh, one of four legislators who voted against LB434, put Douglas and Insurance Department general counsel M. Berri Balka through the wringer about derivation of power to declare legislation temporarily inoperative.

Doesn't Have Power

Douglas said, "I don't have any power to stop legislation." If asked for an opinion and he finds a law "is just flagrantly unconstitutional," Douglas said he would be shirking his duty to say otherwise; and the opinion could've been ignored.

Cavanaugh said because he "couldn't be more revulsed by its (LB434) effects," he's "happy" and agreed with Douglas' opinion the malpractice law might not hold up. But he added, "I think this approach is extremely dangerous."

It holds the possibility that "the public judgment of the Legislature can be thwarted in secret," Cavanaugh said of Douglas' advice, objecting further that the attorney general didn't notify the Legislature of his action.

Douglas said he believes the Legislature's interest in a law ceases after senators and the governor approve it. No matter when LB434 goes into effect, it is the law on the books unless overturned by the courts.

Douglas said he expects the Nebraska Medical Association will file suit — possibly this week — in district court to test the malpractice law, on grounds of delay.

Advice To Be Heeded

Balka told the committee the Insurance Department will continue to follow Douglas' advice, and has no alternatives ready despite a diminishing but continuing malpractice problem.

Douglas said he met earlier with attorneys for the medical and trial attorneys associations, anesthetists and Banking Department. "Everyone involved" indicated questions about LB434 and favored "bringing it to a head" quickly.

Under questioning, Douglas said his opinion wasn't affected by any outside interests. He didn't seek a court determination himself because "I didn't know how to bring suit," given the ambiguity of interested parties to name.

Had he advised Nelson to implement LB434, Douglas said he couldn't then have sued the Insurance Department for abiding by the law. And he wouldn't recommend starting up a law standing on possibly shaky legal stilts.

Would Have Problem

Asked who will represent the state in court, Douglas said, "I would have a problem defending it (LB434)." He said his office will represent Nelson "as to why he didn't implement it."

Douglas also opposed letting parts of the law go into effect, saying the "guts" of it — a medical review panel and dollar limit on claims — are at issue.

If the medical association weren't prepared to file suit, Douglas said he would've found a way but had no ready means to pursue resolving the points in doubt.

Yet even if there were no willing litigant, that's no basis to find in favor of LB434, he added. The district court can take up substantive issues laying a grid for any later Supreme Court test — November at the earliest.

Were the high court to take first jurisdiction, it might answer the constitutional question "without solving the problem," he said.

Health Committee Chairman Thomas Kennedy of Newman Grove said during a break it'd be a waste of tax money to implement LB434 if it's soon found defective. Douglas said the Illinois Supreme ruled unconstitutional a malpractice law with provisions almost identical to Nebraska's.

Reagan Spent Most Money On Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's presidential primary campaign has taken in more money and spent more than President Ford's, campaign finance reports on file at the Federal Elections Commission showed Tuesday.

Reagan's forces for the six months ending June 30 collected almost $13.2 million, mostly in contributions and federal matching funds, the reports show. The campaign has spent about $13.1 million for the six months period.

Ford's campaign for the same period has attracted slightly more than $11 million, again mostly in contributions and federal matching funds. The President's committee has spent $10.9 million.

The figures include some receipts from campaign items sold to generate additional income but the amounts in both cases are a small portion of the totals.

These latest figures were contained in campaign reports due July 10 for the month of June. The cumulative year-to-date totals are provided with the monthly figures.

For June, Regan outspent Ford, with $2 million in expenses compared to the Ford committee's $1.5 million. Not accounted for in the reports are the trips Ford has taken as President, and not as a candidate.

The exposure that President Ford gets on official presidential trips, such as the ones he took over the July 4th weekend to celebrate the nation's Bicentennial, also help Ford the candidate but the expenses do not have to be counted against primary campaign spending limits.

Ford took in slightly more money in June than Reagan, $1.5 million to $1.4 million.

In other campaign reports on file,the committee for Sen. Frank Church D-Idaho, reported receipts of $1.47 million and expenses of $1.49 million for the first six months of the year.

For the month of June, Church's committee reported receipts of $421,000 and expenses of $349,000.

The committee for Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., reported receipts of $3.2 million and expenses of $4 million for the six months, and receipts of $152,000 and expenses of $199,000 for the month of June.

The committee for Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., reported receiving $3.1 million and spending $3 million for the six-month period. It said it received slightly less than $345,000 and spent about $246,000 in June.

Figures for the campaign of Jimmy Carter, which were available Monday, showed receipts for about $9 million and expenses of $8.9 million as of June 30. For the month of June, the report showed receipts of $3.07 million and expenses of $3.064 million.

Church Doesn't Expect VP Nod

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

New York — Content with himself and his future, Frank Church Tuesday said he does not expect to be chosen as Jimmy Carter's running mate.

"I somehow doubt that it will be anyone who was active in the campaign against him," the relaxed Idaho senator said in an interview in his fourth floor suite at the Biltmore.

"We've had cordial relations. There are no personal problems (resulting) from the campaign.

"I just think that in the end he is more likely to choose someone who was not a competitor."

Ready For Surprise

However, Church grinned, "I'm prepared to be surprised."

Carter met with Church for an hour and a half Monday to discuss the vice presidency, but gave the senator no indication as to whether he is likely or unlikely to win the nod.

In any event, Church said, he has been pleased with the results of his entry into presidential politics this year — and he credited Nebraska with being "the key" to his successes.

"Had I failed to win in Nebraska, I never could have made a breakthrough at all," he said. "It was critical . . . it allowed me to attract a great deal of support that otherwise would not have come to me."

Church nipped Carter in the May 11 Nebraska primary, then moved on to three more primary victories.

"It gave me a running start in Oregon," and earned him serious attention in the national press, Church said.

National Recognition

The end result was to "establish me nationally as no experience in the Senate could match," he noted.

A presidential candidacy is "a great test to take," he said. "It is the ultimate test in politics.

"I have done it, and I can tell you there is nothing like it."

In their conversation, Church said, Carter "indicated he wants his vice president to be a more important figure than is usually the case.

Said Before

"I realize that others have said this before, and it hasn't happened. But he intends it to happen in his administration."

Church believes a vice president should be used in a number of roles, including assignments on special missions abroad and heading up task forces on domestic questions.

"I think it should be a moveable feast."

As for a Carter presidency, Church has high hopes.

"I think he will restore public confidence in the integrity of government," he said.

"I think he will return it to legitimacy by the example he sets himself.

"That really is the single most important thing he can do with respect to the political agenda for the future.

Confidence Is Key

"Unless confidence is restored, the future of freedom is not assured."

The next administration must deal with "the terrible wreckage left in the wake of Watergate," Church said.

As for himself, the senator noted, he is pleased to have found that he could conduct a successful campaign on a national basis.

"We won four of five primaries" in which he was able to conduct a substantial campaign, he said. The big states at the end — Ohio and California — were beyond his resources, he said.

"I look back with no regrets."

No Backlash Seen

Church said he sensed no backlash at all from his activities probing the federal investigatory agencies.

"If there had been any," he suggested, "it would not have been possible to win in Nebraska, which is a conservative state.

"That ought to have been the place where public resentment would have presented itself. But it was not an issue in Nebraska."

Earlier at a reception for Church delegates, the senator urged them to vote for Carter in the presidential balloting Wednesday.

"Carter won his right to the nomination. He went to the people. He won it in his own right.

"I hope you will all honor my wishes," he said.

Most of the 14 Church delegates from Nebraska attended the meeting.

Landing Site Picked

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — America's unmanned landing on Mars will be attempted July 20 in a low, dry basin, mission officials said Tuesday after weeks of searching for a safe landing site.

The landing zone for the three-legged robot experimental package is about 460 miles northwest of the site originally chosen for a landing on July 4. That landing was called off when the terrain was found to be surprisingly rough.

The landing will come 11 months to the day after Viking blasted off from earth on man's first search for life on another planet.

Viking officials said the landing area is about 2 miles below "sea-level" on Mars — although the planet is presently so dry that this is a term relating strictly to atmospheric pressure.

Anti-Terrorism Treaty Proposed

Brussels, Belgium (UPI) — European Common Market heads of state moved Tuesday to draw up a common treaty to provide prosecution or extradition of terrorists who take hostages in any member country.

In a thrice-yearly summit meeting, the leaders promised to take measures to "eradicate and prevent international terrorism, kidnapings and hijackings."

The recent hijacking of an Air France plane to Uganda gave impetus to the decision.

The leaders called on their justice ministers to draw up a treaty providing for automatic prosecution or extradition of any hostage-taker in any Common Market country.

"By one means or another, it is our intention to suppress the right of asylum for terrorists inside the community in any way and to endeavor to get agreement on a worldwide basis, although we recognize that, given the different politics of the world, this will take much longer," British Prime Minister James Callaghan said.

The ministers said they consider "completely unacceptable the inhuman practice of taking hostages for the purpose of exerting pressure on governments."

Methodists Elect Only One Bishop

By HARRY JACKSON
Star Staff Writer

A conference of the South Central Jurisdiction of the United Methodist Church, meeting here this week, managed to elect only one of four bishops Tuesday night after six ballots.

The conference also failed to elect the first Nebraskan to a bishop's post. That selection still is a possibility.

The only bishop chosen during the elections was Dr. Kenneth J. Shamblin, minister of a Houston, Tex., church.

The Nebraska hopeful, the Rev. Kenneth W. Hicks, minister of the Trinity Methodist Church of Grand Island, was among the top four vote-getters in each of the ballots.

He led the races for the first three ballots before slipping to second behind Dr. Shamblin who is from the powerful Texas Conference.

Church officials took a seventh ballot late Tuesday evening during the conference but said it would be sealed and counted Wednesday.

In the sixth ballot, Rev. Hicks gained 186 of 358 valid votes by conference delegates, short of the 215 needed to win.

He took second on the sixth ballot to the Rev. Monk Bryan, minister of a Columbia, Mo., Church. Rev. Bryan received 194 votes.

This conference meeting gained a uniqueness by being the first to allow open politicking and conventional vote bartering between ballots.

The main task of the quadrennial conference is to replace four bishops, three who are retiring — including Nebraska Conference Bishop Don W. Holter — and another who died in 1973.

Twenty-eight delegates are representing the Nebraska Conference, including two Lincoln lay persons, John H. Frey, and Mrs. Mary Jane Stewart.

Wednesday's activities will include the election of the remaining three bishops in addition to receiving several routine reports.

The conference ends Thursday with the consecration of the four new conference bishops.

During Tuesday's activities, Former Chancellor of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Dr. James H. Zumberge, gave a brief four-year review of Southern Methodist University where he currently is serving as president. He has held that job since October of 1975.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, 27 new trustees of Southern Methodist University, including one from Lincoln, were elected by delegates to the United Methodists' South Central Jurisdictional Conference.

Dr. Clarence J. Forsberg, pastor of St. Paul United Methodist Church in Lincoln, was elected to the position in an action that provides replacements for all but four of 31 persons who are rotating off SMU's 83-member Board of Trustees.

When finally elected, the bishops will occupy the other four positions.

GOP Hit As Veto-Happy

NEW YORK (AP) — At the biggest show off Broadway, Democrats approved Jimmy Carter's campaign platform early Wednesday and denounced Republicans as veto-happy modern Tories, while the nominee-in-waiting considered a vice presidential choice to complete his cast.

The platform was approved by voice vote, just as the Democratic National Convention script said it would be. It was presented in a succession of speeches that assumed filibuster proportions, to delegates and reporters who milled about the floor, crowded the aisles and kept talking among themselves.

By midnight, many of the delegates had drifted away, leaving rows of empty seats on the floor of Madison Square Garden.

With the platform, the Democrats vowed a drive against unemployment, a start on federal programs of health insurance and guaranteed minimum income, and an effort to reform and streamline the government. They also said they would try to save money and would cut defense spending by $5 billion to $7 billion.

Before the platform was adopted, Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, the platform chairman, added an unofficial endorsement of the Israeli commando raid that rescued more than 100 hostages from Palestinian terrorists in Uganda.

A Democratic congressional leader reported, and a Carter spokesman denied, that the former Georgia governor had decided that either Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine or Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota would be his running mate.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said the list of vice presidential prospects is still six senators long. That stirred skepticism, but Powell insisted it was so.

At the convention's marathon second session, nearly nine hours long, the party's last two presidential nominees, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, took turns assailing the Republicans who defeated them.

Two of the vice presidential prospects, Muskie and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, were among the party leaders who spoke on platform planks. Both drew cheers centered in their state delegations, and there were chants of "We want Church" after his denunciation of Republican foreign policy.

Humphrey said the voters will throw out the "Republican Tories" and make Carter president. McGovern called for the kind of Democratic unity his 1972 ticket was denied, and said America cannot afford four more years of an administration in which the veto has been used "53 times . . . to paralyze the elected representatives of the American people."

Then came platform time, but it was a show, not a debate, a succession of speeches by party leaders on each section of the document that was set in advance.

That brought Muskie to the microphone, to accuse President Ford of saying no, no and no again, to economic and jobs programs Americans need. "We need not government by veto but government by inspired leadership," he said.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace was chosen to speak of government reform, which is covered in the platform with a plank pledging the kind of overhaul and consolidation for which Carter has campaigned.

Wallace put his own stamp on the issue, and in a line he used from a hundred platforms in his own quests for the presidency, told the convention: "Some of these bureaucratic briefcase toters ought to have their briefcases thrown in the Potomac River because the American people would be better off."

Wallace said Carter and a Democratic Congress will see to it that tax money is spent for purposes more productive than bureaucracy and red tape. "The average citizen of this country from one end to the other wants the bureaucracy to get off his back an out of his pocketbook," Wallace said from his wheelchair.

As if to underscore the harmony mood, the convention's second session quickly ratified the no-contests report of its credentials committee, settling an item that produced party-rending fights four years ago.

"Our business here is not to fight over credentials," said Sen. Alan Cranston of California, reporting for the credentials committee. " . . . Our task is to nominate our nation's next president and vice president."

The main business of the convention was one night away: the call of the roll that will nominate a candidate for the White House. The name is Carter.

Three others arranged to have their names entered for their last hurrahs of 1976. Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona will be nominated by former Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox. The name of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California will be presented by farm union organizer Caesar Chavez, with seconding speeches by Rep. Yvonne Burke of California and Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana. And Ellen McCormack, the antiabortion candidate from suburban Long Island, is to be placed in nomination, too.

Malpractice Dispute . . . Advice On Law Irks Legislators

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

A legislative panel Tuesday debated and attacked what members said amounts to authority of the Nebraska attorney general and state agencies to block implementation of state law.

The Unicameral's Public Health and Welfare Committee considered suing the State Insurance Department for refusing to put into effect last Saturday the medical malpractice law.

The Hospital-Medical Liability Act was approved by the 1976 Legislature as LB434. In an opinion requested by Insurance Director E. Benjamin Nelson, Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas said last week the act is "constitutionally suspect."

Douglas thus advised Nelson not to spend public money or use state personnel to implement LB434 until "its provisions can be constitutionally reviewed" by the courts.

Legal Course Rejected

Because the Health Committee itself has no power to sue Nelson's department, as Grand Island Sen. Ralph Kelly suggested, he moved to ask the Legislature Executive Board to investigate initiating a lawsuit. That also was rejected.

But the committee agreed to hold a hearing in early August to air the entire malpractice question for possible reconsideration by the full 1977 Legislature.

Meanwhile, Kelly questioned how there can be "a void" as LB434 is put "on hold," negating legislative function. He said that means a state agency in effect "can violate the law with impunity."

Kelly and Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh, one of four legislators who voted against LB434, put Douglas and Insurance Department general counsel M. Berri Balka through the wringer about derivation of power to declare legislation temporarily inoperative.

Doesn't Have Power

Douglas said, "I don't have any power to stop legislation." If asked for an opinion and he finds a law "is just flagrantly unconstitutional," Douglas said he would be shirking his duty to say otherwise; and the opinion could've been ignored.

Cavanaugh said because he "couldn't be more revulsed by its (LB434) effects," he's "happy" and agreed with Douglas' opinion the malpractice law might not hold up. But he added, "I think this approach is extremely dangerous."

It holds the possibility that "the public judgment of the Legislature can be thwarted in secret," Cavanaugh said of Douglas' advice, objecting further that the attorney general didn't notify the Legislature of his action.

Douglas said he believes the Legislature's interest in a law ceases after senators and the governor approve it. No matter when LB434 goes into effect, it is the law on the books unless overturned by the courts.

Douglas said he expects the Nebraska Medical Association will file suit — possibly this week — in district court to test the malpractice law, on grounds of delay.

Advice To Be Heeded

Balka told the committee the Insurance Department will continue to follow Douglas' advice, and has no alternatives ready despite a diminishing but continuing malpractice problem.

Douglas said he met earlier with attorneys for the medical and trial attorneys associations, anesthetists and Banking Department. "Everyone involved" indicated questions about LB434 and favored "bringing it to a head" quickly.

Under questioning, Douglas said his opinion wasn't affected by any outside interests. He didn't seek a court determination himself because "I didn't know how to bring suit," given the ambiguity of interested parties to name.

Had he advised Nelson to implement LB434, Douglas said he couldn't then have sued the Insurance Department for abiding by the law. And he wouldn't recommend starting up a law standing on possibly shaky legal stilts.

Would Have Problem

Asked who will represent the state in court, Douglas said, "I would have a problem defending it (LB434)." He said his office will represent Nelson "as to why he didn't implement it."

Douglas also opposed letting parts of the law go into effect, saying the "guts" of it — a medical review panel and dollar limit on claims — are at issue.

If the medical association weren't prepared to file suit, Douglas said he would've found a way but had no ready means to pursue resolving the points in doubt.

Yet even if there were no willing litigant, that's no basis to find in favor of LB434, he added. The district court can take up substantive issues laying a grid for any later Supreme Court test — November at the earliest.

Were the high court to take first jurisdiction, it might answer the constitutional question "without solving the problem," he said.

Health Committee Chairman Thomas Kennedy of Newman Grove said during a break it'd be a waste of tax money to implement LB434 if it's soon found defective. Douglas said the Illinois Supreme ruled unconstitutional a malpractice law with provisions almost identical to Nebraska's.

Reagan Spent Most Money On Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's presidential primary campaign has taken in more money and spent more than President Ford's, campaign finance reports on file at the Federal Elections Commission showed Tuesday.

Reagan's forces for the six months ending June 30 collected almost $13.2 million, mostly in contributions and federal matching funds, the reports show. The campaign has spent about $13.1 million for the six months period.

Ford's campaign for the same period has attracted slightly more than $11 million, again mostly in contributions and federal matching funds. The President's committee has spent $10.9 million.

The figures include some receipts from campaign items sold to generate additional income but the amounts in both cases are a small portion of the totals.

These latest figures were contained in campaign reports due July 10 for the month of June. The cumulative year-to-date totals are provided with the monthly figures.

For June, Regan outspent Ford, with $2 million in expenses compared to the Ford committee's $1.5 million. Not accounted for in the reports are the trips Ford has taken as President, and not as a candidate.

The exposure that President Ford gets on official presidential trips, such as the ones he took over the July 4th weekend to celebrate the nation's Bicentennial, also help Ford the candidate but the expenses do not have to be counted against primary campaign spending limits.

Ford took in slightly more money in June than Reagan, $1.5 million to $1.4 million.

In other campaign reports on file,the committee for Sen. Frank Church D-Idaho, reported receipts of $1.47 million and expenses of $1.49 million for the first six months of the year.

For the month of June, Church's committee reported receipts of $421,000 and expenses of $349,000.

The committee for Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., reported receipts of $3.2 million and expenses of $4 million for the six months, and receipts of $152,000 and expenses of $199,000 for the month of June.

The committee for Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., reported receiving $3.1 million and spending $3 million for the six-month period. It said it received slightly less than $345,000 and spent about $246,000 in June.

Figures for the campaign of Jimmy Carter, which were available Monday, showed receipts for about $9 million and expenses of $8.9 million as of June 30. For the month of June, the report showed receipts of $3.07 million and expenses of $3.064 million.

Church Doesn't Expect VP Nod

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

New York — Content with himself and his future, Frank Church Tuesday said he does not expect to be chosen as Jimmy Carter's running mate.

"I somehow doubt that it will be anyone who was active in the campaign against him," the relaxed Idaho senator said in an interview in his fourth floor suite at the Biltmore.

"We've had cordial relations. There are no personal problems (resulting) from the campaign.

"I just think that in the end he is more likely to choose someone who was not a competitor."

Ready For Surprise

However, Church grinned, "I'm prepared to be surprised."

In any event, Church said, he has been pleased with the results of his entry into presidential politics this year — and he credited Nebraska with being "the key" to his successes.

"Had I failed to win in Nebraska, I never could have made a breakthrough at all," he said. "It was critical . . . it allowed me to attract a great deal of support that otherwise would not have come to me."

Church nipped Carter in the May 11 Nebraska primary, then moved on to three more primary victories.

"It gave me a running start in Oregon," and earned him serious attention in the national press, Church said.

National Recognition

The end result was to "establish me nationally as no experience in the Senate could match," he noted.

A presidential candidacy is "a great test to take," he said. "It is the ultimate test in politics.

"I have done it, and I can tell you there is nothing like it."

Said Before

"I realize that others have said this before, and it hasn't happened. But he intends it to happen in his administration."

Church believes a vice president should be used in a number of roles, including assignments on special missions abroad and heading up task forces on domestic questions.

"I think it should be a moveable feast."

As for a Carter presidency, Church has high hopes.

"I think he will restore public confidence in the integrity of government," he said.

"I think he will return it to legitimacy by the example he sets himself.

"That really is the single most important thing he can do with respect to the political agenda for the future.

Confidence Is Key

"Unless confidence is restored, the future of freedom is not assured."

The next administration must deal with "the terrible wreckage left in the wake of Watergate," Church said.

As for himself, the senator noted, he is pleased to have found that he could conduct a successful campaign on a national basis.

"We won four of five primaries" in which he was able to conduct a substantial campaign, he said. The big states at the end — Ohio and California — were beyond his resources, he said.

"I look back with no regrets."

No Backlash Seen

Church said he sensed no backlash at all from his activities probing the federal investigatory agencies.

"If there had been any," he suggested, "it would not have been possible to win in Nebraska, which is a conservative state.

"That ought to have been the place where public resentment would have presented itself. But it was not an issue in Nebraska."

Earlier at a reception for Church delegates, the senator urged them to vote for Carter in the presidential balloting Wednesday.

"Carter won his right to the nomination. He went to the people. He won it in his own right.

"I hope you will all honor my wishes," he said.

Landing Site Picked

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — America's unmanned landing on Mars will be attempted July 20 in a low, dry basin, mission officials said Tuesday after weeks of searching for a safe landing site.

The landing zone for the three-legged robot experimental package is about 460 miles northwest of the site originally chosen for a landing on July 4. That landing was called off when the terrain was found to be surprisingly rough.

The landing will come 11 months to the day after Viking blasted off from earth on man's first search for life on another planet.

Viking officials said the landing area is about 2 miles below "sea-level" on Mars — although the planet is presently so dry that this is a term relating strictly to atmospheric pressure.

Anti-Terrorism Treaty Proposed

Brussels, Belgium (UPI) — European Common Market heads of state moved Tuesday to draw up a common treaty to provide prosecution or extradition of terrorists who take hostages in any member country.

In a thrice-yearly summit meeting, the leaders promised to take measures to "eradicate and prevent international terrorism, kidnapings and hijackings."

The recent hijacking of an Air France plane to Uganda gave impetus to the decision.

The leaders called on their justice ministers to draw up a treaty providing for automatic prosecution or extradition of any hostage-taker in any Common Market country.

"By one means or another, it is our intention to suppress the right of asylum for terrorists inside the community in any way and to endeavor to get agreement on a worldwide basis, although we recognize that, given the different politics of the world, this will take much longer," British Prime Minister James Callaghan said.

The ministers said they consider "completely unacceptable the inhuman practice of taking hostages for the purpose of exerting pressure on governments."

Methodists Elect Only One Bishop

By HARRY JACKSON
Star Staff Writer

A conference of the South Central Jurisdiction of the United Methodist Church, meeting here this week, managed to elect only one of four bishops Tuesday night after six ballots.

The conference also failed to elect the first Nebraskan to a bishop's post. That selection still is a possibility.

The only bishop chosen during the elections was Dr. Kenneth J. Shamblin, minister of a Houston, Tex., church.

The Nebraska hopeful, the Rev. Kenneth W. Hicks, minister of the Trinity Methodist Church of Grand Island, was among the top four vote-getters in each of the ballots.

He led the races for the first three ballots before slipping to second behind Dr. Shamblin who is from the powerful Texas Conference.

Church officials took a seventh ballot late Tuesday evening during the conference but said it would be sealed and counted Wednesday.

In the sixth ballot, Rev. Hicks gained 188 of 358 valid votes by conference delegates, short of the 215 needed to win.

He took second on the sixth ballot to the Rev. Monk Bryan, minister of a Columbia, Mo., Church. Rev. Bryan received 194 votes.

This conference meeting gained a uniqueness by being the first to allow open politicking and conventional vote bartering between ballots.

The main task of the quadrennial conference is to replace four bishops, three who are retiring — including Nebraska Conference Bishop Don W. Holter — and another who died in 1973.

Twenty-eight delegates are representing the Nebraska Conference, including two Lincoln lay persons, John H. Frey, and Mrs. Mary Jane Stewart.

Wednesday's activities will include the election of the remaining three bishops in addition to receiving several routine reports.

The conference ends Thursday with the consecration of the four new conference bishops.

During Tuesday's activities, Former Chancellor of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Dr. James H. Zumberge, gave a brief four-year review of Southern Methodist University where he currently is serving as president. He has held that job since October of 1975.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, 27 new trustees of Southern Methodist University, including one from Lincoln, were elected by delegates to the United Methodists' South Central Jurisdictional Conference.

Dr. Clarence J. Forsberg, pastor of St. Paul United Methodist Church in Lincoln, was elected to the position in an action that provides replacements for all but four of 31 persons who are rotating off SMU's 83-member Board of Trustees.

When finally elected, the bishops will occupy the other four positions.

Pentagon Denies U.S. Spying On Border

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The presence of a U.S. Navy plane in Kenya prompted diplomatic reports Tuesday that it is flying reconnaissance missions to survey a reported military buildup in neighboring Uganda.

But in Washington the Defense Department denied that the P3 patrol plane had flown along the Kenya-Uganda border and said the stop in Kenya was only to give the crew a rest after a long over-water flight. A Pentagon spokesman said, "The only flying it does is when it arrives at Nairobi and when it leaves."

Diplomats in Nairobi said the patrol plane was flying along the Kenya-Uganda border after arriving here Saturday from the American military base on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia. The plane is expected to be here for an indefinite period, the diplomats said.

'Not Connected'

The U.S. Defense Department said Saturday that a Navy plane and a frigate had arrived in Kenya for routine stopovers but said they were not connected with the tension between the two East African nations.

In Washington Asst. Defense Secretary William Greener said he did not expect a Navy task force headed by the carrier Ranger, which is now in the Indian Ocean, to visit Kenya. He declined to characterize the voyage of the task force other than to say that U.S. task forces "from time to time" enter the Indian Ocean.

Other administration officials, however, seemed pleased that the presence of the task force in the area and the arrival of the frigate Beary in Mombasa Monday were interpreted by some as indicating U.S. support for Kenya in its dispute with Uganda.

Kenya Makes Charge

At the United Nations in New York, Kenya charged that Uganda's military authorities have killed hundreds of Kenyan residents of Uganda in the past week. Kenyan Foreign Minister Munyua Waiyaki said in a letter to the president of the Security Council that his government "can no longer sit idle in the face of these atrocities and provocations.

Relations between Kenya and Uganda, tense for months, have deteriorated sharply since Israel's July 4 rescue of more than 100 air hijack hostages at Uganda's Entebbe Airport. Uganda accused Kenya of helping the Israelis, and Kenya denied it. Some of the Israeli planes stopped in Nairobi on the way home from the raid.

Since then, Kenya and Uganda have accused each other of moving troop reinforcements to their common border. Uganda also charged that Israeli and American military personnel have moved into Kenya, which has friendlier relations with Washington than most black African nations.

Just A 'Bean Bag War'

One diplomat, however, described the situation as a "bean bag war, a lot of talk, a newspaper confrontation."

The U.S. frigate Beary arrived Monday at Kenya's Indian Ocean port of Mombasa for what was described by harbor sources as "a normal operational visit" of five days. The Beary, with 250 officers and crew under Cmdr. Robert Cotton, forms part of the U.S. Indian Ocean fleet.

Five ships of the U.S. 7th Fleet led by the aircraft carrier Ranger left the Pacific and entered the Indian Ocean on Sunday. Sources here believe they may also head for Mombasa although the U.S. Defense Department said a Kenyan port call was not scheduled.

Kenya is a normal port of call for U.S. vessels in the Indian Ocean. The aircraft carriers Kitty Hawk and Enterprise have been previous callers.

Briton Leaves Uganda

British diplomat Peter Chandley, second secretary in the High Commission (embassy) in Kampala, arrived here and slipped out of sight. President Idi Amin's government had ordered him out of Uganda by Tuesday night. It was Chandley who reported to the Foreign Office in London that he saw missing hijack hostage Mrs. Dora Bloch in a Kampala hospital a few hours after the Israeli raid.

The British government says it believes Mrs. Bloch, who had dual British and Israeli citizenship, is dead. She was reported hospitalized with an illness before the rescue raid and was left behind when the Israelis spirited the other hostages out of the airport.

A Nairobi newspaper, the Daily Nation, quoted an unnamed Ugandan who arived here Monday as saying he had seen Mrs. Bloch's partly burned body in a forest where bodies of people killed by the Ugandan army are often dumped.

Uganda has denied responsibility for Mrs. Bloch.

Amin Called Barbarian

In Jerusalem, Foreign Minister Yigal Allon accused Amin of barbarity toward Mrs. Bloch and told Parliament he refrained from saying she was dead only because Jewish tradition frowned on pronouncing missing persons dead.

The entire house, with the exception of two small Communist factions, approved a resolution condemning Amin and holding Uganda responsible for Mrs. Bloch.

In London, British Conservative lawmaker Julian Amery said there is a "real danger" that the efforts of Ugandan President Amin to "retrieve his shattered prestige" over the Israeli raid "may lead him into war with Kenya."

Leftist Moslems Claim Russians May Intervene

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Leftist Lebanese Moslems claimed on Tuesday the Soviet Union was getting ready for "urgent action" to prevent the defeat of the leftist and Palestinian side by Christians and Syrian troops in the Lebanese civil war.

Syrian troops with tanks were reported to have stormed the town of Baalbek, site of impressive Roman ruins 24 miles northest of Beirut.

The Moslems' Beirut radio said Alexander Soldatov, the Soviet ambassador to Lebanon, conveyed the Kremlin decision to Palestinian chief Yasir Arafat and Kamal Jumblatt, the Lebanese leftist warlord. It did not say what kind of action was contemplated.

A Libyan officer serving with an Arab League peace unit in Lebanon said Syrian forces had begn to withdraw from positions above the southern port of Sidon as part of a deal arranged by Libya to prevent more clashes between Syria and Palestinian guerrillas. Palestinian sources said they had not been able to confirm the report.

The Palestinian guerrilla command said fighting was raging in the streets of Baalbek and that the Syrians moved in after shelling that caused heavy casualties.

There was no immediate word on whether the fighting ranged over the ruins. Baalbek is where the Phoenicians built their temple to the sun god Baal, later identified by the Romans with Jupiter. Baalbek is astride the main north-south road along the Beqaa Valley. Syria needs the road to guarantee easy communications between its forces in north, east and south Lebanon.

The Moslem radio said Soldatov told Arafat and Jumblatt the Soviet Union had asked Syrian President Hafez Assad to withdraw from Lebanon the 13,000 troops and 450 tanks he has sent here over the past six weeks to try to force the leftists to stop fighting and negotiate with the Christians.

There was no independent confirmation of the report. The Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow had no immediate comment. It was not known whether Soviet action might mean a direct move or merely pressure on Syria, which receives the bulk of its arms from Moscow.

The Moslems' Beirut radio also reported that Arafat had sent a cable to the Arab foreign ministers at their meeting in Cairo saying "our non-Arab friends abroad will come to our rescue if Arab countries fail to help us." However, a Palestinian spokesman in Cairo denied that Arafat had sent such a cable.

The Libyan officer did not mention a Syrian withdrawal from the entire country but said Libya was trying to get the Syrians to pull away from the guerrilla strongholds of west Beirut and Tripoli in addition to Sidon. Palestinians are demanding this in addition to the 22-day-old Christian siege of the Tal Zaatar refugee camp and guerrilla base in east Beirut.

Arafat's representative at the Cairo meeting, Said Kamal, told reporters Syrian President Assad promised Libyan Premier Abdel Salam Jalloud to pull his forces back by Wednesday from three Lebanese cities: Tripoli, Sofar on the Beirut-Damascus highway, and Sidon.

There were unconfirmed reports of various secret mediation meetings between representatives of the guerrillas, leftists and Christians. But fighting continued, with dozens killed on long-time war fronts around an 800-square-mile Christian enclave north of Beirut.

The Christians' Amchit radio said William Hawi, a leader of the Phalange party that fields the largest Christian private army in the war, was killed in the Tal Zaatar fighting.

Hawi was supervising the surrender of a group of Moslems who had held out in a school building and "as the armed men filed out of the building to lay down arms, one of them drew a gun and shot Hawi in the head," the radio said.

Christian leader Pierre Gemayel said peace in Lebanon can be restored only if the Syrian troops stay to enforce a cease-fire.

10 States In Mexico Hard Hit By Rains

Mexico City (UPI) — The government said Tuesday thousands of square miles in 10 states were under water from torrential rains that sent rivers over their banks, drowned two persons and swept away bridges, roads and crops.

The hydraulics resources secretariat said the areas hardest hit were in the states of San Luis Potosi, Tamaulipas, Veracruz and Guanajuato.

Also inundated were parts of Jalisco, Colima, Nuevo Leon, Hidalgo, and sections around Mexico City.

In San Francisco del Rincon, in the state of Guanajuato, 25,000 persons were "totally cut off" late Monday, surrounded by waters more than six feet deep from the Santiago River.

The hydraulics secretariat said two persons drowned in San Francisco del Rincon and telephone communications were cut.

"For the moment it's impossible to help from the outside," the agency said.

Near San Felipe, Guanajuato, the San Bartolo Reservoir overflowed, flooding crops and washing away the highway linking the town with neighboring Villa Rey.

The secretariat said it had sent five launches to the River Panuco basin to rescue hundreds of stranded farmers and their families.

"There are several communal farms completely out of contact because of the bad state of the roads and the high levels of rivers," a secretariat spokesman said.

He said the Guayalejo River was higher than in 1966, when Hurricane Ines struck.

Three hundred families were evacuated from Puente Grande, Jalisco, when the Jalosotitlan River overflowed its banks, flooding fields.

Ceiling Announced

Caracas, Venezuela (AP) — Venezuela's oil production will be held at the current average of 2.2 million barrels a day for at least the next five years, says Mines and Hydrocarbons Minister Valentine Hernandez.

In San Francisco del Rincon, in the state of Guanajuato, 25,000 persons were "totally cut off" late Monday, surrounded by waters more than six feet deep from the Santiago River.

The hydraulics secretariat said two persons drowned in San Francisco del Rincon and telephone communications were cut.

"For the moment it's impossible to help from the outside," the agency said.

Near San Felipe, Guanajuato, the San Bartolo Reservoir overflowed, flooding crops and washing away the highway linking the town with neighboring Villa Rey.

The secretariat said it had sent five launches to the River Panuco basin to rescue hundreds of stranded farmers and their families.

"There are several communal farms completely out of contact because of the bad state of the roads and the high levels of rivers," a secretariat spokesman said.

He said the Guayalejo River was higher than in 1966, when Hurricane Ines struck.

Three hundred families were evacuated from Puente Grande, Jalisco, when the Jalosotitlan River overflowed its banks, flooding fields.

Ceiling Announced

Caracas, Venezuela (AP) — Venezuela's oil production will be held at the current average of 2.2 million barrels a day for at least the next five years, says Mines and Hydrocarbons Minister Valentine Hernandez.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An ient Patricik Hearst emerged the star character in the lliam and Emily Harris trial esday, described as a pale, wildered gunwoman firing kily at a sporting goods store The first witness at the Harris ial, store owner Carroll lliam Huett, described the trange" person he saw firing a achine gun on May 16, 1974 ss Hearst has admitted she is the assailant

'It had large sunglasses, a ry white face," Huett recalled, very strange face and this big 'o style hairdo None of it oked like it belonged to one rson "

Huett recalled the confused ene when he and other store nployes wrestled with the rrises, whom they suspected of shoplifting, and Miss Hearst opened fire from across the street

"There were shots being fired at us," Huett recalled "They sounded strange because there was traffic on the street that kind of muffled them

" . Mr. Harris said, 'You'd better get out of here She's shooting at you' . . . We started running in the store and there was another burst of fire "

Under questioning by Deputy Dist Atty Sam Mayerson, Huett spoke of Miss Hearst's role, without mentioning her name

"On the first burst of fire I looked up and saw the person The left door of a van was open and they were outside the van looking through the framework of the window "

Moments later, he said, he saw the Harrises "beating it across the street "

Huett and another store employe, Gary Mason, said they never heard the Harrises call for help from Miss Hearst nor signal her to shoot.

The Harrises, charged with kidnaping, assault and robbery, claim they had no part in the newspaper heiress' decision to open fire and rescue them

The 22-year-old Miss Hearst, indicted with the Harrises, is awaiting sentencing on a San Francisco bank robbery conviction and will be tried separately

Mrs Harris, who delivered her own opening statement Monday, told how Miss Hearst decided to "go along for the ride" on their shopping trip to test her ability to disguise herself She was then the nation's most famous fugitive

Huett revealed that Miss Hearst's shots came close to causing death

One employe, he said, was struck in a shirt pocket over his heart, but a pen deflected the bullet "His pocket was ripped and his pen was bent all out of shape "

Huett said his wife, who was at the cash register, was bleeding from superficial wounds to the face and he was hit in the arm by bullet fragments, also superficially

When the shooting stopped, the witness said, the scene inside Mel's Sporting Goods Store was "like Ringling Brothers Circus It was complete pantomime (sic), confusion," he declared "There were thousands of people

"Three front windows were broken. There were bullet holes all across the top of the store There's still some in the woodwork "

Huett said he became involved when store clerk Anthony Shepard tried to grab Harris for shoplifting During a melee in the street, Huett said he realized Harris had a gun and wrestled it out of his hand

Mrs Harris, he said, leaped on Shepard's back and said, "Leave him alone, leave him alone "

Mason, who pulled Mrs Harris away, testified that he let her go when he heard the machine gun fire

"I released my hold on Mrs Harris and retreated back into the store," Mason said " You could hear the bullets hitting the concrete There were windows shattered As soon as I released Mrs Harris, she bolted across the street "

Someday Pacemaker May Be Permanent

By The Associated Press

Conventional cardiac pacemakers, which depend on batteries for their energy, someday may be replaced by a permanent model, powered by the body's own energy

Scientists at the University of Missouri-Columbia and Massachusetts General Hospital say the new system, if perfected, would eliminate the need for repeated and often costly surgery to replace the standard artificial batteries

The new device is expected to cost no more than a conventional pacemaker, about $1,500, and would weigh about half as much

Allen Hahn, a biomedical engineer at Missouri, says although the model probably won't be ready for human experimentation for another five years, animal tests have proven successful

"I would say probably another set of long-term animal experiments is needed before human transplantation can be considered," Hahn said in a recent interview

About 300,000 persons in the world are being kept alive by artificial pacemakers attached to the walls of their hearts, statistics show The vast majority of those using pacemakers require additional surgery to replace the worn out batteries

The new device, called a hybrid biogalvanic cell, would eliminate the need for the second and sometimes third operation for battery replacement, Hahn said

The principle behind the new pacemaker turns the body into a human battery Two electrodes, one zinc and the other platinum, create a chemical reaction within the body

The platinum reacts with the body's natural chemicals, which in turn causes oxygen to move from one electrode to the other That movement creates electrical current

Everyone has a natural pacemaker, an area of tissue in the upper right portion of the heart When it fails to send impulses at consistent intervals and at sufficiently powerful levels, an artificial pacemaker is needed

The current created by the chemical reaction in the new device imitates nature's pacemaker and sends new, regular impulses to the heart through tiny wires

New developments in longer-lasting batteries and the advent of nuclear pacemakers have taken some of the edge off the biogalvanic cell, Hahn said However, the nuclear-driven pacemakers have the drawback of being expensive, they can cost up to $20,000

Hahn believes the cost of his device and its weight, two ounces compared to the four of the conventional pacemaker, will help its acceptance

"Two or four ounces isn't all that much, but when you're talking about a device hanging on the wall of your heart, everything counts," Hahn said.

What Works Will Win

Mayor Harvey Sloan of Louisville has said that those attending the National Conference of Mayors are pleased with the Democratic Party platform proposal which calls for universal, mandatory and comprehensive national health insurance.

Maybe that does please the mayors, as they are a part of the political system and they tend to think in terms of programs. But program proposals alone will not do much for the Democratic Party.

To begin with, a proposal for national health insurance will probably not win the party many votes in November. The fact is that the entire platform of both parties will not win or lose many votes for either of them.

The voters at this time do not appear to be looking so much at proposals as they are the capacity of candidates to produce an effective, efficient and honest government. National health insurance would be acceptable, we believe, to the majority of people only on one condition — that it could be administered efficiently and fairly.

So many of the problems of the nation in recent years have not involved concepts so much as they have execution. There is no real argument in this country, for instance, with a welfare program. The argument comes with a program that is wasteful and out of control.

Much of the same is found in the matter of full employment. There is, in this area, a conceptual difference between Democratic and Republican philosophy.

The Ford administration and many Republicans believe that any program of full employment would light the fires of inflation while Democrats believe that full employment would produce higher tax revenues that would help balance the budget and thereby curtail inflation.

But beyond that, the debate goes to what would work and what would not. A full employment program heavy with government rules and regulations and endless red tape would not be welcome.

A national health insurance program of the same nature would not be welcome. Any such program that eroded the free choice of individuals and the rights of physicians to practice as they see fit would not end up a political plus for the Democrats.

This is why Jimmy Carter is about to be nominated by the Democrats — not because of his specific programs, but because he has managed to convey to voters a confidence in his overall integrity and determination to do things better.

Why Not A Beer Garden?

One doubts that the City Council decision to allow outside beer gardens will meet with very widespread resistance. The decision could result in a rather nice addition to the overall atmosphere of the city.

But the City Council will need to define a beer garden and the public should know what it is. We would not expect it to mean the same thing it means in some other cities and countries.

We do not anticipate open sidewalk areas where one can drink in full view of the passing parade. This is not necessarily to condemn such an operation, but merely to observe that Lincoln is not ready for it, not equipped for it and has no real need for it.

What we anticipate by way of a beer garden, in which mixed drinks would also be served, is an enclosed area adjacent to the premises of the licensee. The area could have access only through the inside of the premises, with no direct access to the street.

To insure this, the garden would have to be surrounded by a structure sufficient to insure its privacy. But the area could still let the air and sunshine in. The area could still be developed with grass, trees, flowers, shrubs or whatever, as the licensee saw fit.

This kind of operation would surely invite a great many new and innovative schemes on the part of taverns, restaurants, bars and lounges to provide unique and attractive customer areas.

Certainly, Lincoln could get along quite nicely without this kind of thing. But it does offer something, it seems, to enhance the so-called night life of the city.

In the process, we fail to see how it can result in anything derogatory for the city. We fail to see how it would contribute any additional problems to those that already exist regarding the serving of alcoholic beverages.

The big problem concerning alcohol is one of abuse and, for the most part, that is a personal matter over which government has not been able to exercise much control. In such cases, government can only attempt to deal with the consequences.

We don't view the matter as any overwhelming issue one way or another but had we been given a vote on the question, it would have been cast on the affirmative side.

TOM. WICKER

The Game Plan

NEW YORK — This city is full of smiling Democrats, eating peanuts and trying to guess who'll get the No. 2 spot on the Carter ticket. Unity is thicker than the humidity and almost as oppressive, and no one would be much surprised if the band played "Hail to the Chief" just before Jimmy Carter's acceptance speech.

Carter knows, however, that there's a campaign out there waiting to be fought. Bob Strauss, the party chairman, may be right that "every state is conceivably carryable" but the candidate himself has not been one to leave things to fate. And he and Strauss may have a little something extra going for them this year.

Ordinarily, presidential-year "registration drives" are ho-hum affairs, underfunded, overpublicized, haphazard and ill-managed, either by enthusiastic amateurs or bored pros. But 1976 may well be different, for three very good reasons, the first of which is money.

This year, federal funds will finance the actual campaigns of the Republican and Democratic nominees, which means that a lot of eager private contributors are looking for a place to send their checks. The law permits them to contribute to the national party committees, however, and the Democrats have budgeted about $9 million for party matters such as registration drives. Democratic officials are estimating that $3 to $4 million can be available for that purpose and for getting out the vote on election day. That compares, for example, with about $1.3 million for the same purposes that George McGovern was able to divert from campaign funds in 1972.

Another reason this year's projected registration drive could be unusually significant is its sophistication. Since August, 1975, the Democrats have been pouring data into a computer, with the result that they now have elaborate voter and resident lists for 92,000 of the more than 170,000 precincts in the country. The others are mostly Republican or of low Democratic potential.

The lists have led to a plan for concentrating the drive in ten target states — California, Ohio, Florida, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Texas — where the biggest Democratic gains might be made. State parties, labor organizations and the like will be asked to conduct the registration drive, and funding from the national committee will be on the basis of each state's planning and its demonstration of practical ability to carry out the plans.

A third reason for optimism is that in California, the most populous state — and one that could be crucial if Ronald Reagan is the Republican nominee — a new postcard registration law will make it far easier than ever before to register new voters. The best estimate is that there are at least 4.5 million, and perhaps more than 6 million, unregistered persons of voting age in California; and although registered Democrats outnumber registered Republicans in California by 4.7 million to 3 million, California Democrats are notorious for voting Republican in general elections.

Yet, Hubert Humphrey lost the state to Richard Nixon in 1968 by only about a quarter-million votes. A big new wave of Democratic registrants there could be of vital importance in 1976, and on the basis of polls and past registration drives, Democratic officials believe that about two of every three unregistered persons, throughout the nation as in California, would vote Democratic if they registered and went to the polls next November.

The potential is startling, since there are estimated to be at least 55 million unregistered persons of voting age in the United States — only a few under the number who actually voted in 1972. Nearly half of the unregistered — about 25 million persons — are in the ten largest states, of which seven are on the Democratic target list.

The targeting program has discovered, moreover, that with the exception of suburban liberal areas, the more heavily Democratic a precinct votes, the more unregistered persons are likely to live in it. The best potential for new Democratic voters appears to be among blacks, Chicanos, those of low education levels, the young and the old.

Registration drives have fizzled before, of course, and they can't win elections by themselves. But this time around, the planning looks good, the money is there, and Carter himself is said to be giving the plan strong support. He is not, the record shows, much given to impractical schemes.

Prodding The Political Enigma That Is Carter

By BOB SCHREPF
Star Editorial Writer

NEW YORK CITY — As a former nominee of the party, Hubert Horatio Humphrey was guaranteed a place on the convention program.

His Tuesday night speech, although not nearly the high point his legions of supporters had hoped for — it was not an acceptance speech — was for him the only chance to grab center stage at the Carter convention.

But his arrival in New York two nights earlier told more about Humphrey, the total politician, and his life.

A cab, not a limousine this time, stopped in front of the Statler-Hilton, convention headquarters for the VIPs, and out jumped HHH and his wife, Muriel.

Mrs. Humphrey, in a blue pantsuit and carrying two handbags, looked radiant and at peace with herself. And quickly alone.

The senator was engaging in his favorite pastime — meeting people and talking.

"Well," said the woman who came within a whisker of being First Lady, "I guess I'll just wait in the lobby." How many times, one wonders, has she had to settle for waiting in the lobby over the years?

Humbert Humphrey was doing his thing. To say hello or evidence any interest in the man is like pulling the cord on a lawnmower engine. Humphrey, like the engine, is sparked into life and soon is running full throttle.

There was no organized welcome for the former vice president and party standard-bearer, but he is the most recognizable Democrat in the nation and people have warm feelings toward him. There was scattered applause and a few cheers in front of the Statler-Hilton. People turned and offered their hands and more than once a voice could be heard saying, "We wish you were running."

HUMPHREY
. . . an engine sparked into full throttle . . .

The engine hummed: "Well, thank you very much. So nice to be here. So nice to see you. Sure, I'll sign an autograph. Where's a pen and paper? Thanks so very much. Nice to be here. Nice to see you. You bet I remember your dad. He's one of my favorite people. Isn't this great? Isn't this wonderful? Thanks for being here. Thank you very much . . . thankyouvery muchthankyouverymuchthankyou."

The stream of patter is endless. The smile never fades. The enthusiasm for pressing flesh never wanes. The people keep coming up.

Muriel waits in the lobby.

Long before the Democrats arrived here and long after they leave — for generations, perhaps — the mystery of Jimmy Carter's phenomenal rise to political power in such a short time will be discussed and analyzed.

The men in the Kremlin, in Peking and in the allied capitals don't know much about him and they're worried and curious because it looks as if he will be the next president of the United States.

They are not alone. Those feelings are shared.

Ask a cab driver here:

"Sure, I'll vote for him. I hope he's good enough to be president."

That feeling of lingering doubt bothering much of Carter's soft support is not enough to deny him the nomination and it probably will not deny him the election.

But it accentuates the mystery of his ascending to the top.

An old friend of mine, a Georgia newsman who has covered Carter since before he was governor, is not surprised at the master strokes which will gain Carter the nomination.

He has healthy respect for Carter's abilities, ambition and political instinct, and he likes him. But he concedes that many other Georgians are as surprised at the Carter phenomenon and as curious about what makes Carter run as those men in the Kremlin.

☆ ☆ ☆

Observations and opinions by someone close to the former governor and the Georgia political scene:

—Carter could not have won the Georgia presidential primary six or seven months ago. Wallace would have won it.

MRS. HUMPHREY
. . . it's been hotel lobbies for a long time . . .

—All the other candidates were babes in the woods when it came to organizing for a campaign, however. That is the central and most obvious factor underlying Carter's success.

He wanted it; he planned in depth for it; he worked for it and now he is about to receive it. But all that work and concentration were not so evident to Georgians until recently.

—Carter is an ambitious, iron-willed man who would not be satisfied unless reaching for the outer limits of his capabilities. He is not power-hungry, in the narrow sense, but despises people not having the aggressiveness to try to acquire what is within reach.

—Carter is a liberal, and has so demonstrated. His political credo, expressed many times along the road, is that it is the first order of government to help the disadvantaged.

—But in shouldering social concerns, Carter curiously is not very sympathetic toward an individual in need. Lester Maddox of axe-handle fame did not believe in government programs to help the poor or undereducated or social misfits. But he could respond movingly to the plight of one particular individual. Carter, on the other hand, would more likely ignore the plight of one individual to concentrate on solving problems on a comprehensive basis. He looks at the larger picture and thus, in this view, would naturally be a more effective leader in the long-run.

—Carter is not a closet racist, and has so demonstrated. He has on a number of occasions upbraided the white middle and upper-class base of his support for governor for footdragging in race relations.

—Contrary to popular belief, Carter has a self-deprecating sense of humor and does not take himself too seriously. But he was much more loose in the statehouse days than he has been on the White House campaign trail.

—Carter was not popular as governor; neither was he particularly unpopular. He probably could not have won another term, however, if the Georgia constitution would have allowed it. But when Carter caught on across the nation, he caught on in Georgia. They are flattered by his success.

This is only one view, and much of it has been expressed in one form or another before. But it is an inside view, and another insight into the most remarkable political success in decades.

Remember President Dewey In 1948?

NEW YORK — Jimmy Carter has gone about the vice presidential business the wrong way so far. First of all, there was that idea for calling in several of the more elegant Democratic senators to sit for job interviews. It made splashy headlines during an otherwise dull period in the news from Georgia. Too splashy.

Now that everybody knows who was interviewed, everybody is also going to know who was found wanting, as soon as Carter announces the winner. He makes one man happy and leaves all the others embarrassed about having their deficiencies publicly advertised.

This would spell political trouble even if the rejects were third-raters, which Carter's applicants decidedly are not. They are all United States senators, a class of humanity in which pride marches hand-in-hand with arrogance. Presidents humble them at their peril, and when they are senators as glossy and influential as those on Carter's job list, presidents labor to avoid letting the air out of their dignity.

Having to apply publicly for the vice presidency is embarrassing to a senator. Senators are supposed to be too august to be interested in such nonsense, and though many covet the office secretly, it is considered faintly degrading for one to confess it. When they are forced to go publicly, hat in hand, to be interviewed for the job, they can be sure that their colleagues will not soon forget it, although the smiles will be seen only when their backs have turned.

So Carter now faces the danger that several of the Senate's most astute and influential men will mark down their public rejections as scores to be settled at leisure if he arrives in Washington. A small matter, to be sure, in a short campaign but presidents afterward have four years to suffer the Senate.

When President Kennedy's program was being dismantled in Congress in 1961, I asked Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, who had publicly confessed to vice presidential ambition and been rejected, why the President was having such difficulty at the Capitol. "You have to remember," he said, "that a lot of us up here still remember Jack as a young senator who sat in the back row."

With Senators Humphrey and Kennedy already among senators decidedly cool, Carter doesn't need Muskie, Glenn, Mondale, Jackson and Church nursing memories that he cost them a loss of dignity.

It may be, of course, that he is aware of the danger and planning something else entirely. He could skirt it by announcing that having interviewed the lot, he is prepared to certify all of them well-fitted for the vice presidency, and leave it to the convention to take its choice. This would show a properly respectful care for this wretchedly abused office and, at the same time, give the party an inspiring chance to engage in democratic process.

☆ ☆ ☆

The wisdom of politics, of course, has it that candidates in Carter's position can be hurt only by a vice presidential candidate, whoever it be. Like Eisenhower in the 1950's, Johnson in 1964 and Nixon in 1972, Carter is so far ahead in the polls that adding another name to the ticket can only dilute his strength.

In the polls, in fact, Carter was elected president four weeks ago, easily overwhelming both Ford and Reagan, and without any vice presidential assistance at all. It was the earliest election of a non-incumbent since President Dewey was elected in the spring of 1948. Such men do not need vice presidents. Did Augustus need a Vice Caesar? Not until he took Earl Warren for vice president was President Dewey defeated.

Carter's success in this year of the outsider seems to rest on his refusal to traffic with either Washington or the Democratic Party. Yet, in taking on the vice presidential question, he has involved himself in both.

It cannot do much for his polls to appear in public now as a man who, in his first big decision, restricts his choices to old-line Democratic regulars based in Washington. This raises the question whether Carter is truly the new political man he appeared to be in the primaries.

A genuinely new political man would surely have washed his hands of the vice presidency weeks ago and perhaps not even have bothered to show up for the convention. The convention could then have been left to nominate its own choice for the vice presidency, which would have left Carter politically untouchable by his enemies.

If the choice had been peculiarly grotesque, he could easily have repudiated the convention's vice presidential candidates (pointing out that it showed how dreadful the old political parties had become) and urged everybody to vote for Carter as a man too sensible to have anything to do with them.

Under these conditions, a vice presidential candidate might have strengthened Carter's ticket by giving him opportunity to illustrate his famous penchant for honesty by campaigning on the slogan: "If elected, I shall ignore the vice president."

Reclamation Act

Omaha, Neb.

A few Nebraska land-owners are about to receive half to three quarters of a million dollars each in subsidies, courtesy of the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation.

The Bureau has authority to construct the O'Neill Unit on the Niobrara River. The river can be dammed and water taken to irrigate 77,000 acres near Springview and O'Neill.

Are the land-owners poor farmers struggling to eke out a living on the land? Hardly. The entire package is controlled by about 300 owners. Over half the land in the project area is owned by corporations or absentee investors.

Federal irrigation projects are governed or should be governed by the Reclamation Act passed by Congress in 1902. The key provisions of the act limit the ownership of land to 160 acres for one land-owner, or 320 acres in joint ownership, and require that the land-owner must be a bonafide resident on the land. In an attempt to control speculation, Congress later passed an extension to the act which required land-owners to sell all land in excess of 160 acres, or 320 owned jointly, at pre-irrigation or pre-project prices. The Bureau's enforcement of these provisions has been completely lacking.

The National Farmers Union, an organization dedicated to promoting and preserving family farms, has documented the history of the Bureau's non-enforcement of the Reclamation Act. Instead of the act's providing homes as expressly intended by Congress and President Theodore Roosevelt, it has become a haven for corporate and tax shelter investment at the expense of the taxpaying public.

Completely ignored are the residency requirements. Divesting of excess land is a farce. The Bureau allows excess land to be irrigated with free water for 10 years after the project has been completed and then sold at current market prices reflecting the value of subsidized irrigation water. Sales are quite often made to corporate representatives and family members.

Bureau and irrigation officials piously tell us they are going to enforce the 160-acre rule on the O'Neill Unit. If the rule is enforced, it won't be in keeping with their past performance. If the residency requirement were enforced, half the project land in the O'Neill Unit would not qualify.

These welfare excesses, courtesy of the Bureau, have the enthusiastic endorsement of the Nebraska congressional delegation in Washington.

Eight Dollars Plus Tip

Lincoln, Neb.

In regard to tipping — what makes these people so special? My husband and I both work at jobs, and no one tips us. Some of these "nice" restaurants (which we've gone to for years) are going to price themselves right out of business.

If a person has to pay eight dollars for a good steak and then pay "the help," who needs it? We'll have our steak at home!

Appeal To Immigration

Fremont, Neb.

We, the American people, have just finished celebrating our 200th birthday — a joyous occasion, indeed. But a matter has come to my attention that rather displeases me about this country. The matter concerns a good friend of mine and the immigration laws.

This friend of mine came to America from Israel in 1972 to study at Midland College. He acquired friends exceptionally fast and made his place well known in the Fremont community. He immediately took a job at Sambo's Restaurant and became a familiar face there. He recently obtained his B.A. from Midland College and was working into the management training program for Sambo's. With the possibility of a $25,000-a-year job in the making, he has found out that the immigration people will not honor his visa because he is no longer a student.

This friend of mine is Ramzi Totari.

I am appealing to other Americans, especially businessmen and ACLU members, to help Ramzi secure at least a temporary visa to complete his training program, which will last about six months. At the end of this program, Ramzi will have his own restaurant and will meet some of the standards set by immigration officials to obtain permanent residency: (1) He will have a good job and a reasonable income; (2) No possibility of bankruptcy because Sambo's will back Ramzi all the way, so we will not have to worry about a foreigner running amok in the streets of this great country.

Time is running out! Immigration officials have given Ramzi only two weeks before he has to leave. Write or call our congressmen. Let's give a chance to at least one guy who wants to make a honest living in this great country of ours.

Assistance Appreciated

Lincoln, Neb.

My husand and I would like to thank the members of the Lancaster County Veterans Service Center for giving us financial assistance in paying medical debts incurred in the birth of our son in December. We give special thanks to Mr. Densmore Dawson and his fine staff who worked so hard to obtain this financial aid.

We also appreciate the assistance from the local American Legion and Jack Ritchie, director of the University of Nebraska Office of Financial Aids and Scholarships. Local people should be more aware of the fine people in Lincoln who are doing a tremendous job in this field.

Concerned individuals and groups can work together to improve conditions for veterans, students and their families. This help has been especially meaningful to us in this Bicentennial year.

What Works Will Win

Mayor Harvey Sloan of Louisville has said that those attending the National Conference of Mayors are pleased with the Democratic Party platform proposal which calls for universal, mandatory and comprehensive national health insurance.

Maybe that does please the mayors, as they are a part of the political system and they tend to think in terms of programs. But program proposals alone will not do much for the Democratic Party.

To begin with, a proposal for national health insurance will probably not win the party many votes in November. The fact is that the entire platform of both parties will not win or lose many votes for either of them.

The voters at this time do not appear to be looking so much at proposals as they are the capacity of candidates to produce an effective, efficient and honest government. National health insurance would be acceptable, we believe, to the majority of people only on one condition — that it could be administered efficiently and fairly.

So many of the problems of the nation in recent years have not involved concepts so much as they have execution. There is no real argument in this country, for instance, with a welfare program. The argument comes with a program that is wasteful and out of control.

Much of the same is found in the matter of full employment. There is, in this area, a conceptual difference between Democratic and Republican philosophy.

The Ford administration and many Republicans believe that any program of full employment would light the fires of inflation while Democrats believe that full employment would produce higher tax revenues that would help balance the budget and thereby curtail inflation.

But beyond that, the debate goes to what would work and what would not. A full employment program heavy with government rules and regulations and endless red tape would not be welcome.

A national health insurance program of the same nature would not be welcome. Any such program that eroded the free choice of individuals and the rights of physicians to practice as they see fit would not end up a political plus for the Democrats.

This is why Jimmy Carter is about to be nominated by the Democrats — not because of his specific programs, but because he has managed to convey to voters a confidence in his overall integrity and determination to do things better.

Why Not A Beer Garden?

One doubts that the City Council decision to allow outside beer gardens will meet with very widespread resistance. The decision could result in a rather nice addition to the overall atmosphere of the city.

But the City Council will need to define a beer garden and the public should know what it is. We would not expect it to mean the same thing it means in some other cities and countries.

We do not anticipate open sidewalk areas where one can drink in full view of the passing parade. This is not necessarily to condemn such an operation, but merely to observe that Lincoln is not ready for it, not equipped for it and has no real need for it.

What we anticipate by way of a beer garden, in which mixed drinks would also be served, is an enclosed area adjacent to the premises of the licensee. The area could have access only through the inside of the premises, with no direct access to the street.

To insure this, the garden would have to be surrounded by a structure sufficient to insure its privacy. But the area could still let the air and sunshine in. The area could still be developed with grass, trees, flowers, shrubs or whatever, as the licensee saw fit.

This kind of operation would surely invite a great many new and innovative schemes on the part of taverns, restaurants, bars and lounges to provide unique and attractive customer areas.

Certainly, Lincoln could get along quite nicely without this kind of thing. But it does offer something, it seems, to enhance the so-called night life of the city.

In the process, we fail to see how it can result in anything derogatory for the city. We fail to see how it would contribute any additional problems to those that already exist regarding the serving of alcoholic beverages.

The big problem concerning alcohol is one of abuse and, for the most part, that is a personal matter over which government has not been able to exercise much control. In such cases, government can only attempt to deal with the consequences.

We don't view the matter as any overwhelming issue one way or another but had we been given a vote on the question, it would have been cast on the affirmative side.

The Game Plan

NEW YORK — This city is full of smiling Democrats, eating peanuts and trying to guess who'll get the No. 2 spot on the Carter ticket. Unity is thicker than the humidity and almost as oppressive, and no one would be much surprised if the band played "Hail to the Chief" just before Jimmy Carter's acceptance speech.

Carter knows, however, that there's a campaign out there waiting to be fought. Bob Strauss, the party chairman, may be right that "every state is conceivably carryable" but the candidate himself has not been one to leave things to fate. And he and Strauss may have a little something extra going for them this year.

Ordinarily, presidential-year "registration drives" are ho-hum affairs, underfunded, overpublicized, haphazard and ill-managed, either by enthusiastic amateurs or bored pros. But 1976 may well be different, for three very good reasons, the first of which is money.

This year, federal funds will finance the actual campaigns of the Republican and Democratic nominees, which means that a lot of eager private contributors are looking for a place to send their checks. The law permits them to contribute to the national party committees, however, and the Democrats have budgeted about $9 million for party matters such as registration drives. Democratic officials are estimating that $3 to $4 million can be available for that purpose and for getting out the vote on election day. That compares, for example, with about $1.3 million for the same purposes that George McGovern was able to divert from campaign funds in 1972.

Another reason this year's projected registration drive could be unusually significant is its sophistication. Since August, 1975, the Democrats have been pouring data into a computer, with the result that they now have elaborate voter and resident lists for 92,000 of the more than 170,000 precincts in the country. It may be, of course, that he is aware of the danger and planning something else entirely. He could skirt it by announcing that having interviewed the lot, he is prepared to certify all of them well-fitted for the vice presidency, and leave it to the convention to take its choice. This would show a properly respectful care for this wretchedly abused office and, at the same time, give the party an inspiring chance to engage in democratic process.

The wisdom of politics, of course, has it that candidates in Carter's position can be hurt only by a vice presidential candidate, whoever it be. Like Eisenhower in the 1950's, Johnson in 1964 and Nixon in 1972, Carter is so far ahead in the polls that adding another name to the ticket can only dilute his strength.

In the polls, in fact, Carter was elected president four weeks ago, easily overwhelming both Ford and Reagan, and without any vice presidential assistance at all. It was the earliest election of a non-incumbent since President Dewey was elected in the spring of 1948. Such men do not need vice presidents. Did Augustus need a Vice Caesar? Not until he took Earl Warren for vice president was President Dewey defeated.

Carter's success in this year of the outsider seems to rest on his refusal to traffic with either Washington or the Democratic Party. Yet, in taking on the vice presidential question, he has involved himself in both.

It cannot do much for his polls to appear in public now as a man who, in his first big decision, restricts his choices to old-line Democratic regulars based in Washington. This raises the question whether Carter is truly the new political man he appeared to be in the primaries.

A genuinely new political man would surely have washed his hands of the vice presidency weeks ago and perhaps not even have bothered to show up for the convention. The convention could then have been left to nominate its own choice for the vice presidency, which would have left Carter politically untouchable by his enemies.

If the choice had been peculiarly grotesque, he could easily have repudiated the convention's vice presidential candidates (pointing out that it showed how dreadful the old political parties had become) and urged everybody to vote for Carter as a man too sensible to have anything to do with them.

Under these conditions, a vice presidential candidate might have strengthened Carter's ticket by giving him opportunity to illustrate his famous penchant for honesty by campaigning on the slogan: "If elected, I shall ignore the vice president."

Reclamation Act

Omaha, Neb.

A few Nebraska land-owners are about to receive half to three quarters of a million dollars each in subsidies, courtesy of the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation.

The Bureau has authority to construct the O'Neill Unit on the Niobrara River. The river can be dammed and water taken to irrigate 77,000 acres near Springview and O'Neill.

Are the land-owners poor farmers struggling to eke out a living on the land? Hardly. The entire package is controlled by about 300 owners. Over half the land in the project area is owned by corporations or absentee investors.

Federal irrigation projects are governed or should be governed by the Reclamation Act passed by Congress in 1902. The key provisions of the act limit the ownership of land to 160 acres for one land-owner, or 320 acres in joint ownership, and require that the land-owner must be a bonafide resident on the land. In an attempt to control speculation, Congress later passed an extension to the act which required land-owners to sell all land in excess of 160 acres, or 320 owned jointly, at pre-irrigation or pre-project prices. The Bureau's enforcement of these provisions has been completely lacking.

The National Farmers Union, an organization dedicated to promoting and preserving family farms, has documented the history of the Bureau's non-enforcement of the Reclamation Act. Instead of the act's providing homes as expressly intended by Congress and President Theodore Roosevelt, it has become a haven for corporate and tax shelter investment at the expense of the taxpaying public.

Completely ignored are the residency requirements. Divesting of excess land is a farce. The Bureau allows excess land to be irrigated with free water for 10 years after the project has been completed and then sold at current market prices reflecting the value of subsidized irrigation water. Sales are quite often made to corporate representatives and family members.

Bureau and irrigation officials piously tell us they are going to enforce the 160-acre rule on the O'Neill Unit. If the rule is enforced, it won't be in keeping with their past performance. If the residency requirement were enforced, half the project land in the O'Neill Unit would not qualify.

These welfare excesses, courtesy of the Bureau, have the enthusiastic endorsement of the Nebraska congressional delegation in Washington.

Eight Dollars Plus Tip

Lincoln, Neb.

In regard to tipping — what makes these people so special? My husband and I both work at jobs, and no one tips us. Some of these "nice" restaurants (which we've gone to for years) are going to price themselves right out of business.

If a person has to pay eight dollars for a good steak and then pay "the help," who needs it? We'll have our steak at home!

Appeal To Immigration

Fremont, Neb.

We, the American people, have just finished celebrating our 200th birthday — a joyous occasion, indeed. But a matter has come to my attention that rather displeases me about this country. The matter concerns a good friend of mine and the immigration laws.

This friend of mine came to America from Israel in 1972 to study at Midland College. He acquired friends exceptionally fast and made his place well known in the Fremont community. He immediately took a job at Sambo's Restaurant and became a familiar face there. He recently obtained his B.A. from Midland College and was working into the management training program for Sambo's. With the possibility of a $25,000-a-year job in the making, he has found out that the immigration people will not honor his visa because he is no longer a student.

This friend of mine is Ramzi Totari.

I am appealing to other Americans, especially businessmen and ACLU members, to help Ramzi secure at least a temporary visa to complete his training program, which will last about six months. At the end of this program, Ramzi will have his own restaurant and will meet some of the standards set by immigration officials to obtain permanent residency: (1) He will have a good job and a reasonable income; (2) No possibility of bankruptcy because Sambo's will back Ramzi all the way, so we will not have to worry about a foreigner running amok in the streets of this great country.

Time is running out! Immigration officials have given Ramzi only two weeks before he has to leave. Write or call our congressmen. Let's give a chance to at least one guy who wants to make a honest living in this great country of ours.

Assistance Appreciated

Lincoln, Neb.

My husand and I would like to thank the members of the Lancaster County Veterans Service Center for giving us financial assistance in paying medical debts incurred in the birth of our son in December. We give special thanks to Mr. Densmore Dawson and his fine staff who worked so hard to obtain this financial aid.

We also appreciate the assistance from the local American Legion and Jack Ritchie, director of the University of Nebraska Office of Financial Aids and Scholarships. Local people should be more aware of the fine people in Lincoln who are doing a tremendous job in this field.

Concerned individuals and groups can work together to improve conditions for veterans, students and their families. This help has been especially meaningful to us in this Bicentennial year.

Demo Delegates Ignoring City's Sex Delights

NEW YORK (AP) — For months before the Democrats came to town, police and prosecutors tried to knock the city's sex industry off its platform heels. Now it turns out the Democrats are largely ignoring Gotham and Gomorrah.

The topless bars are far from crowded. Trade at the massage parlors, which are only veiled bordellos, is off.

And the streetwalkers — police guess there are 3,000 of them — say they're jittery about approaching "Johns" because too many policemen are on the street acting like lustful delegates.

Damon Runyon once tagged it "sinful Times Square," and if anything has changed since his day, it's only that the sinfulness ranges farther afield. Times Square has blocks of strip joints, porn movies, peep shows, gay follies, nude studios and even one establishment with the telling name "Pleasure Seekers Club."

And it's not just on the square. Police figure there are some 100 sex-for-sale shops in the flesh market that starts on the uptown side of Madison Square Garden and stretches for 15 blocks, mingling with fancy hotels and chipping away at New York's prized theater district.

All around the area, if not all around the town, business was said to be off. Around the Garden, the lads from the vice squad have scared away many of the streetwalkers. Farther away, there were fears of "delegates" who carry badges different from conventioneers.

'Carter button or no Carter button . . . I still say you gotta get off the street!'

But the higher-priced prostitutes still work the hotel bars — like the lady in the purple dress at the Americana's Jockey Bar.

Looking to be in her 20s, she couldn't seem to slide onto barstools without brushing her knee against the guy next door. Then she landed a live one — he had silver hair, wore a string tie and used a cane.

And a bartender at the Americana, who asked to remain nameless, offered another view of where delegates may be seeking unconventional pleasures: "When these convention guys come to town they bring phone numbers. The East Side is full of call girls, real classy."

Back at the more obvious haunts, the mood was less than gay.

"These Democrats are a weird bunch. They're staying away," said Michelle Andrews, a hostess at the "49er," a midtown spot where drinks cost $3 and the dancers wear little more than earrings.

"So where's the business?" complained Bruno Treet, manager-bouncer of a massage parlor just steps from Broadway. "We've had nothing but our steady customers."

Karen, a 22-year-old lady of the streets, says, "Who can work? The cops are busting everybody."

Police deny they've been sweeping up the local talent. But they are enforcing what on Sunday became New York's latest statute against the world's oldest profession.

The law makes it illegal to loiter for the purpose of prostitution and is aimed at both the gal and the guy. The burden of determining "purpose of prostitution" is left to the arresting officer.

The law is scoffed at by the New York Civil Liberties Union, which distributed pamphlets telling how to skirt the statute. Apparently, though, not all the ladies have gotten the pamphlets.

"It can make things tough," admits Sheila, an Eighth Avenue hooker. "We're afraid of the law, and I think the convention people are too. Somebody told them to avoid us."

Dellums Seeks Protest VP Nod

New York (UPI) — Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., said Tuesday the Democratic National Convention has been "Carterized . . . prepackaged and prepared" and Dellums' name will be put into nomination for vice president to discuss issues of concern to blacks.

Dellums said he has postponed asking the black delegates' caucus to endorse him, because a similar effort may be made in behalf of Barbara Jordan, the black Democratic representative from Houston who gave the convention its emotional high Monday night.

Dellums said his supporters got the necessary names on a petition to put his name formally in nomination — 50 names from at least three states.

When the black delegates were meeting with their steering committee, the plans concerning Jordan were still undecided.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., said black delegates may merely propose a resolution commending Jordan and declaring their feeling about her qualifications for vice president.

"The name of Barbara Jordan is floating. The name of Ron Dellums is floating," Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., told reporters after the black caucus meeting.

Dellums said the effort in his behalf, led by Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., is a symbolic move made necessary by the convention's failure to address itself to "progressive issues."

"The platform has been carterized. The rules have been carterized," Dellums said. "So only the vice presidential process allows speaking on some issues other than what has been prepackaged and prepared."

He said neither Carter nor the platform examines the issues of emerging nations, African policy, racism, sexism and the poor thoroughly enough.

Women's Caucus Takes Carter's Offer

New York (UPI) — A rowdy caucus of more than 1,000 women Democratic convention delegates voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to abandon their demand for 50% representation by 1980 and accept a compromise promised by Jimmy Carter.

Persuaded by a succession of rousing, militant speeches by the nation's leading Democratic women — including Betty Friedan and Reps. Bella Abzug, Yvonne Burke, Shirley Chisolm and Elizabeth Holtzman — the caucus voted specifically to accept Carter's proposed compromise for delegate equality.

The compromise, which Carter sweetened with a list of extra promises for women, eliminated the prospect of an embarrassing convention floor fight over women's rights. It will be presented Wednesday to the rules committee, which was expected to recommend it to the convention.

The women originally wanted to "require" a 50-50 division between men and women at the 1980 convention. The compromise will "promote" equality in state delegations beginning at the 1978 midterm convention, and provide enforcement by the national party.

Karen DeCrow, president of the National Organization for Women and a registered independent, lead a vocal minority that wanted to insist on the 50-50 rule.

"If God can ordain equal representation of women and men, can the Democratic Party do less?" she asked.

But the party's leading women, many of whom had participated in negotiations with Carter, argued instead that compromise represented a victory for women. They also acknowledged that they could not win the issue on the convention floor.

Betty Friedan, founder of NOW and the modern feminist movement, drew wild applause with a fiery speech opposing Ms. DeCrow.

"I bow to no woman in this room in my passion for equality for women," she said.

She argued that quotas too often are used to persecute people.

"Fifty-fifty is not real, is not power, is not political," she said. "I want representation of women equal to their activity in the Democratic Party."

Ms. Friedan said women had come a long way since 1968 when they tried unsuccessfully to get the Democratic Party to recognize these issues. "Our power is that Jimmy Carter and the Democratic Party cannot win this election without women," she said.

Rep. Abzug argued that women can achieve equality in the Democratic Party without a quota, and Rep. Chisolm called on the women to look at the issue from a "pragmatic, political point of view."

Jackie Given Standing Ovation At Convention

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis attended a Democratic National Convention on Tuesday night for the first time since the assassination of the late President Kennedy.

She received a standing ovation during an evening of memories for Democrats.

They recalled the tragic death of her husband as well as the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr., and the shooting that left George Wallace paralyzed. Both Wallace and Coretta Scott King, King's widow, spoke to delegates.

Sixteen years after John F. Kennedy received his party's nomination and went on to win the presidency, the twice-widowed Mrs. Onassis was introduced to the convention by party chairman Robert Strauss.

She rose as the crowd stood applauding, smiled radiantly and waved to the delegates. She rose once again at Strauss' urging as the ovation continued.

Prior to that, she had heard Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine tell the convention that the country under her late husband had recovered from economic troubles and put people back to work.

Ten minutes later, as Gov. George C. Wallace was finishing a presentation of part of the party's platform, Mrs. Onassis and her party began to file out of the convention arena, 80 minutes after arriving.

On the way out, she spoke to well wishers, including Lynda Byrd Johnson Robb, daughter of Lyndon B. Johnson, the man who succeeded to the presidency when John Kennedy was assassinated.

Then, Mrs. Kennedy left the Garden with Mrs. Strauss.

"I'm going to the convention like anyone else," the 46-year-old Mrs. Onassis said in her Fifth Avenue apartment just before departing for Madison Square Garden.

They Got The Grits

New York (AP) — The Alabama Democratic National Convention delegation's arrangements chairman did a little extra arranging today.

The delegation is staying at the Summit Hotel. When it sat down to breakfast Tuesday morning, something was missing from the usual Southern fare — grits.

So, Polly Conradi of Birmingham made five calls to the hotel's French chef and arranged for the delegation to get a down-home start to the day.

Delegation Chairman Robert Vance said Mrs. Conradi told the chef if grits were not served "she'd kill him.

"And I think he began to believe her on the third call," Vance said. He added it was the first time in the hotel's history that the Southern delicacy had been served.

Carter Works Alone

NEW YORK (AP) - Jimmy Carter worked alone Tuesday to narrow the list of men he was considering as running mates, leaving the speculation and the statements to the women members of his family.

His wife, Rosalynn, said he hadn't made up his mind. His mother, Lillian, said she wasn't in on any secret choice — and didn't want to be. His daughter, Amy, indicated she was tired of reporters and wanted to read.

Carter, who is virtually assured of receiving the Democratic presidential nomination at the convention session Wednesday night, made only one public appearance on Tuesday. He asked for support from uncommitted members of the New Jersey delegation and got in a few swipes at the Republican party.

The wife of the former Georgia governor said Tuesday morning that her husband had not made a final choice and had not whittled down the list of six potential vice-presidential candidates.

"He might have done it in his mind," she said. "He might have an idea of one or two. But he is still going over the records and considering every single one of them. He's doing that in the room right now."

Earlier in the day, Carter told the New Jersey delegates that although the Republicans are now split, with a nomination battle between President Ford and Ronald Reagan, "it is to their advantage to heal their wounds and protect their privileged status in the economic, social and political life of the country. We have a good prospect to win this fall, but it is certainly not a sure thing."

He said the Republicans "are a party of strong, influential special interest groups."

On Monday, Carter wound up a series of interviews with seven possible running mates. One of them — U.S. Rep. Peter Rodino of New Jersey — asked that his name be removed from consideration. That left six — Sens. Frank Church of Idaho, Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, John Glenn of Ohio, Adlai E. Stevenson III of Illinois and Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

Mrs. Carter also met the contenders. "I looked for some of Jimmy's characteristics in them," she said. And she talked, as well, with the wives of the possible nominees. "I especially wanted to see how I liked them. I didn't find one I didn't like."

She said that the time Carter has had to research the backgrounds of the men under consideration has been invaluable. "I don't know how you can possibly decide in a day like some of the nominees have had to do," she said. "I can see how mistakes can be made. I think the nominee should choose. But it really seems to me there should be a waiting period in there."

Carter's mother, known as Miss Lillian, said she wanted to know who her son picked, but was afraid she might leak the news.

"I kind of told him I wanted to know, but I also said, "Don't tell me because I have so many close friends.

"I have never told a secret that he has told me . . . But this time there's so much pressure from you all. I'm just afraid I'll give out a clue," she told reporters.

Carter's 8-year-old daughter, meanwhile, was in Central Park where she climbed into the lap of a bronze statue of Hans Christian Anderson.

"Look up, Amy," called a photographer.

"I want to read," she replied, looking down at the opening word's of Anderson's, "The Ugly Duckling," inscribed on a book in the statue's hands.

"She has been very good with news people until the last two or three weeks," said her mother. "She just got tired of it."

"And I think he began to believe her on the third call," Vance said. He added it was the first time in the hotel's history that the Southern delicacy had been served.

Carter Works Alone

NEW YORK (AP) - Jimmy Carter worked alone Tuesday to narrow the list of men he was considering as running mates, leaving the speculation and the statements to the women members of his family.

His wife, Rosalynn, said he hadn't made up his mind. His mother, Lillian, said she wasn't in on any secret choice — and didn't want to be. His daughter, Amy, indicated she was tired of reporters and wanted to read.

Carter, who is virtually assured of receiving the Democratic presidential nomination at the convention session Wednesday night, made only one public appearance on Tuesday. He asked for support from uncommitted members of the New Jersey delegation and got in a few swipes at the Republican party.

The wife of the former Georgia governor said Tuesday morning that her husband had not made a final choice and had not whittled down the list of six potential vice-presidential candidates.

"He might have done it in his mind," she said. "He might have an idea of one or two. But he is still going over the records and considering every single one of them. He's doing that in the room right now."

Earlier in the day, Carter told the New Jersey delegates that although the Republicans are now split, with a nomination battle between President Ford and Ronald Reagan, "it is to their advantage to heal their wounds and protect their privileged status in the economic, social and political life of the country. We have a good prospect to win this fall, but it is certainly not a sure thing."

He said the Republicans "are a party of strong, influential special interest groups."

On Monday, Carter wound up a series of interviews with seven possible running mates. One of them — U.S. Rep. Peter Rodino of New Jersey — asked that his name be removed from consideration. That left six — Sens. Frank Church of Idaho, Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, John Glenn of Ohio, Adlai E. Stevenson III of Illinois and Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

Mrs. Carter also met the contenders. "I looked for some of Jimmy's characteristics in them," she said. And she talked, as well, with the wives of the possible nominees. "I especially wanted to see how I liked them. I didn't find one I didn't like."

She said that the time Carter has had to research the backgrounds of the men under consideration has been invaluable. "I don't know how you can possibly decide in a day like some of the nominees have had to do," she said. "I can see how mistakes can be made. I think the nominee should choose. But it really seems to me there should be a waiting period in there."

Carter's mother, known as Miss Lillian, said she wanted to know who her son picked, but was afraid she might leak the news.

"I kind of told him I wanted to know, but I also said, "Don't tell me because I have so many close friends.

"I have never told a secret that he has told me . . . But this time there's so much pressure from you all. I'm just afraid I'll give out a clue," she told reporters.

Carter's 8-year-old daughter, meanwhile, was in Central Park where she climbed into the lap of a bronze statue of Hans Christian Anderson.

"Look up, Amy," called a photographer.

"I want to read," she replied, looking down at the opening word's of Anderson's, "The Ugly Duckling," inscribed on a book in the statue's hands.

"She has been very good with news people until the last two or three weeks," said her mother. "She just got tired of it."

Schools To Ask Congress To Combat Student Crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's public schools, plagued by crime and vandalism of staggering proportion, soon will ask Congress for $300 million to escalate what has been a losing battle, security officials said Tuesday.

"We're talking about violence of the type never before experienced by schools and property losses in public schools of more than $600 million in 1975 alone," said Lucius Burton, security chief for the Alexandria, Va., school system. "The federal government has a definite role here."

More than 300 security experts and school superintendents from 30 states are meeting in suburban Alexandria this week to discuss, in a conference sponsored by the National Association of School Security Directors, new ways of combatting school crime.

But more money is seen as the ultimate weapon.

"Many of the school systems hit by student crime, arson, vandalism and burglary can't afford to handle the problem," association President Joseph Grealy of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said in an interview. "We need more federal money for training and hardware."

Grealy said that security officials this week are considering all sizes of school systems, "drawing up programs to fit a school system of that size — but many systems just don't have the money to implement the programs."

Congress already has heard about the growing problem of school violence.

After hearing testimony by students and educators last summer of gangs shooting up classrooms, teachers assaulted and extortions carried out by fourth-graders, Congress asked the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to help wipe out such crimes.

The LEAA, participating in this week's sessions, has pledged a $12 million program to eliminate such violence.

"We think we'll get congressional backing, although there may be some revision on the money figure," Burton said of the planned request. "Our main concern has been a presidential veto."

With statistics not yet compiled for 1975, Burton pointed to 1974 figures which showed $594 million in public school property losses:

—$102 million lost to vandalism.
—$243 million lost to burglary.
—$109 million lost to arson.
—$140 million in other losses.

Suit Charges School With Religious Bias

Washington (UPI) — The Department of Justice Tuesday filed its first religious discrimination suit against a school district, which fired a teacher who took several days off to observe religious holidays.

The suit charged a Bridgeport, Wash., high school teacher was illegally fired for taking eight days off in 1974 to observe religious holidays of the World Wide Church of God. It asked that the teacher be reinstated with back pay.

The suit said Richard L. Davis, a mathematics and science teacher, was fired for observing holy days that are not observed by society at large. They are Sept. 17, Sept. 26, Oct. 1 through Oct. 4, and Oct. 7-8.

Davis notified officials of Bridgeport School District 75 in advance that he must observe those holy days and offered to supply materials so his classes could continue during his absence, the department said.

The suit asked U.S. District Court in Spokane, Wash., to issue an injunction forbidding any employment practice that discriminates on the basis of religion and order it to reinstate Davis with back pay.

The Supreme Court has agreed to review next term a challenge to a 1972 law requiring employers to make "reasonable accommodations" to the religious needs of their workers unless "undue hardship" to the business would result.

The case could decide whether the law is an unconstitutional breach of the wall between church and state. If not, the court could establish some guidelines for lower court judges on what "undue hardship" is.

New Museum Treated Gingerly

Charleston, W. Va. (AP) — West Virginians were nearly as tidy as they were curious when the $14 million state Science and Culture Center opened this week.

"More than 30,000 people went through the museum Sunday and when the cleaning-up started only one cigarette butt was found," said Norman Fagan, the center director. "This is even more impressive because there aren't any 'No Smoking' signs. We didn't even find a fingerprint on the glass-enclosed exhibits."

Fagan said he's convinced the people were looking on the new building as their own and "are treating it that way."

Grain Stocks Reportedly Will Rise Despite Exports

Washington (UPI) — Agriculture Department analysts Tuesday reaffirmed earlier forecasts that reserve stocks of major American grains will rise during the coming year, despite overseas demand caused by drought in Western Europe.

The analysis was issued in a new supply-demand projection following a Monday survey which estimated the 1976 corn crop at a record 6.553 billion bushels and the wheat harvest at a near-record 2.040 billion bushels.

The new report indicated that practically all of the gain in the corn forecast would be offset by increased export demand particularly in Western Europe, where crops are being shriveled by one of the worst droughts in history.

In a related development, the Agriculture Department reported that the Soviet Union has purchased another 200,000 metric tons of American corn.

Experts said in the supply-demand analysis that they now expect reserve carryover stocks of corn to go to 313 million bushels this fall, and then up to 817 million bushels in the fall of 1977.

American reserve stocks of wheat are now expected to go from 665 million bushels on June 1 to 922 million bushels next June — the third consecutive annual increase.

Number 3 in a series designed to help you save money

1. Shop the specials, but make your list at home and stick to it. Make your own list of current food prices in a notebook you can carry around to make sure specials are really specials.
2. Spend some time comparing brands and reading labels. Give house brands a try as higher price is not always synonomous with higher quality. And, don't let an attractive package fool you into thinking you're getting more.
3. Some things are cheaper to buy prepared: Frozen orange juice, frozen or canned lima beans, peas, cherries, instant coffee, pork and beans, chocolate frosting mix, some cake mixes (yellow and Devil's food) and brownie mix.
4. Convenience foods save meal planning and cooking from scratch, but are the costs really worth it to you? With just a little extra effort, you can make a double recipe and freeze for later. Spending some time cooking and freezing for the following week can save your family a lot of money in this way alone.
5. Buy large or medium sizes for yourself and share the cost of case lots with agreeable neighbors.
6. Plan your meals around food that's in season, but be flexible so you can substitute an item when you see the price is right.
7. At the end of a supermarket day, you can get bargains on items like bar-b-qued chicken, high quality aged meats and bread.
8. About meat: It's cheaper to buy one large chicken than two small ones. Fish is a much better buy when not breaded or prepared in any other way. Beef is highest in July and August the big months for summer cookouts. Buy a couple of months ahead of time and freeze. Steaks will keep for one year, hamburger for 3 months.
9. Buy the lower grades of canned fruits and vegetables if they're going to be used in cooking and not eaten right from the can.
10. Experiment with inexpensive foreign cooking. Dishes from the Orient, Mexico, Italy, Spain and Greece are especially suited to a budget.
11. Leave children at home if at all possible. They not only increase impulse buying, but energetic children can be a distraction from watching as the checker totals up your groceries.

These guidelines to spending can save you a lot of money. Money saved on things you need is money saved for things you want.

Energy Blowing In The Wind

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Remember the last time you cursed the wind for throwing dirt in your eyes, ruffling your clothes and hair, blowing papers out of your hands?

Well, that seemingly never ending, frustrating wind may one day be an inexpensive source of energy.

The Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District (CNPPD) currently is making plans for harnessing the wind to produce energy at Kingsley Dam near Ogallala.

"Wind energy is available to us at all times," said Ed Hamilton of Holdrege, CNPPD chief engineer. "That doesn't mean we expect it to blow at normal velocity at all times.

"But the source of energy is available to us, if we can develop an economical way of producing it."

Sort Of Windmill

One of 17 in the nation, the wind turbine at the Kingsley Dam testing site is a windmill of sorts.

But it is unlike any windmills Nebraskans have seen before.

The wind turbine was designed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), under the Energy Research and Development Administration's (ERD) wind energy project.

Mounted on a 150-foot tower, the wind turbine has only two slender blades which can measure up to 200 feet long from tip to tip. The Kingsley Dam turbine will probably be regulated to turn at 40 revolutions per minute or approximately 200 to 300 miles per hour at the tip of the blades, depending on their length.

Blades Adjust

"The blades are adjustable so they can take advantage of the various wind velocities and can be oriented to the wind direction," Hamilton said.

The various wind turbines will generate from 125 to 1,500 kilowatts of power, he said. It takes approximately one kilowatt to operate a toaster.

Since power from even the largest wind turbine would supply only enough power for a very, very small town, Hamilton said, "the wind turbine has been designed to be tied into a big system."

"It is going to take all forms of energy to meet the needs of the future. Everything is pointing to that," said Dr. Don Edwards, associate dean of the University of Nebraska College of Engineering.

"The question is, are they (wind turbines) practical," Edwards added. "By the time all the technical problems are worked out they should be economically feasible."

He indicated that nuclear power still probably will be the primary source of energy in the future. It would take about 770 wind turbines, nearly four every mile for 200 miles, to replace an 1,150 megawatt nuclear power plant planned for 1983, Edwards said. Therefore, it is only logical that wind turbines would be used as supplemental energy sources.

Useful For Pumping

For example, one way wind turbine energy might be utilized in cities like Lincoln would be at city pumping stations to pump water into holding reservoirs. Energy from the main power plant not drained by the pumping stations could be used in other areas.

Experts in the area agree that using wind as an ancillary energy source has its advantages. There is no real cost for fuel because the turbines "virtually" run on their own. Wind is a nondepletable source of energy and through its use natural resources can be conserved.

However, there are some problems that need to be worked out.

Currently, one flaw in the wind turbine program is that the wind cannot be depended upon to blow consistently at the required velocity for producing energy.

Storage Studied

Studies are being conducted to determine ways of storing extra energy for use later. Among them, Hamilton said, is using wind energy to pump water from a lower elevation to a higher elevation. When necessary, the water could be released to produce additional energy.

"Another type of storage is pumping compressed air into caverns to be released through air turbines later to create energy," he added. "But I don't believe we have that type of cavern in our area."

The first method seems to be the most feasible, Hamilton said. But since wind turbine testing is just beginning, no storage system has been proven.

"If someone could come up with a successful way of storing the energy of the wind and sun, he could take a blank check and add as many zeros as he wants," Edwards said.

Phil Euler of the Lincoln Electric System (LES), which submitted a proposal for a testing site southwest of Lincoln, said, "one of the main disadvantages is that technology about wind energy is not available today. That is why NASA is involved in the project."

'Haven't Given Up'

The LES site was not accepted by the ERD for the testing project, Euler said, "but we haven't given up on wind energy yet."

Still, it may be difficult "locating sites where there is an adequate amount of wind energy available," he said. "Also, these sites might not be where the greatest needs are."

He added that throughout the project ERD also will be looking at the aesthetic impact and citizen response to the wind turbine.

"I have seen the wind turbine being tested at Sandusky, Ohio, and it is a very graceful, majestic looking thing," he explained. "We may find it will be something the American public would not be adverse to."

The testing may also aid in determining the environmental impact, such as in the area of bird migrations, Euler said.

Wind Serves Purpose

"The wind is there for a purpose," he continued. "It moves our weather and aids in the pollination of crops. When you use the wind turbines you are extracting energy from the wind.

"If you do that, will you be interfering with what it would have been doing five miles down the road?"

Time will tell.

Wind turbines will never replace large energy sources such as nuclear power plants, the three indicated. And, "wind energy at the present time is not economical," Hamilton said. "But with the development of the proper equipment it may become an economical source."

Homeowners Prefer To Select Appliances

New York (AP) — Appliances installed in new homes by builders are more prone to problems than the homeowners' own appliances, a builders' survey shows.

"The stove window broke and the oven door fell off," wrote one homeowner. Another complained: "The dishwasher mulches up tiny food particles and throws them on the dishes in the final rinse."

Other low marks went to built-in trash compactors and central air conditioners, while higher ratings were given to the refrigerators, washers and dryers homeowners chose themselves or brought with them.

The survey of 500 families who moved into their newly-constructed houses in 1975 was taken this summer by the National Association of Home Builders, mostly to give builders an idea of what home appliances gave their customers the most trouble.

New houses today normally come with it a dishwaster, range, disposal, heating and hot water system, and central air conditioning, according to the appliance survey.

But some new homes also come elaborately equipped with unusual time savers like a central vacuum system, intercom, and smoke detectors. All of these sources of consumer complaints and in the survey.

"One night, when the smoke detector failed to go off, our dog saved us," wrote one of the homeowners.

The new homeowners often blamed the appliance manufacturers for making products that didn't do the job-including dishwashers that did not wash dishes and food disposals that did not dispose of the food they ground up.

Others blamed builders for poorly planned installations — such as placing dishwashers or refrigerators in corners, making it difficult to open the door.

Homeowners were happiest with the products they picked out themselves or brought from their old homes.

Committee Says Let Women Be Catholic Priests

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force on women set up by a Roman Catholic bishops' committee has concluded that women should be admitted to the priesthood.

The group of four nuns and two laywomen, formed by a bishops' ad hoc committee on women in society, was chaired by Sister Margaret Brennan, former superior general of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The report of its study said:

"Concrete steps . . . should be set in motion to insure the admission of women to all forms of ministry in the church, including the diaconate and ordained priesthood."

Meanwhile, at the Vatican, the Pontifical Biblical Commission has voted 12-to-5 that Holy Scripture alone does not provide sufficient grounds "to exclude the possibility" of ordaining women. The majority of the organization of Bible scholars said the Church would not be contradicting Christ's intentions if it opened the priesthood to women.

"If you do that, will you be interfering with what it would have been doing five miles down the road?"

Time will tell.

Wind turbines will never replace large energy sources such as nuclear power plants, the three indicated. And, "wind energy at the present time is not economical," Hamilton said. "But with the development of the proper equipment it may become an economical source."

Homeowners Prefer To Select Appliances

New York (AP) — Appliances installed in new homes by builders are more prone to problems than the homeowners' own appliances, a builders' survey shows.

"The stove window broke and the oven door fell off," wrote one homeowner. Another complained: "The dishwasher mulches up tiny food particles and throws them on the dishes in the final rinse."

Other low marks went to built-in trash compactors and central air conditioners, while higher ratings were given to the refrigerators, washers and dryers homeowners chose themselves or brought with them.

The survey of 500 families who moved into their newly-constructed houses in 1975 was taken this summer by the National Association of Home Builders, mostly to give builders an idea of what home appliances gave their customers the most trouble.

New houses today normally come with it a dishwaster, range, disposal, heating and hot water system, and central air conditioning, according to the appliance survey.

But some new homes also come elaborately equipped with unusual time savers like a central vacuum system, intercom, and smoke detectors. All of these sources of consumer complaints and in the survey.

"One night, when the smoke detector failed to go off, our dog saved us," wrote one of the homeowners.

The new homeowners often blamed the appliance manufacturers for making products that didn't do the job-including dishwashers that did not wash dishes and food disposals that did not dispose of the food they ground up.

Others blamed builders for poorly planned installations — such as placing dishwashers or refrigerators in corners, making it difficult to open the door.

Homeowners were happiest with the products they picked out themselves or brought from their old homes.

Committee Says Let Women Be Catholic Priests

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force on women set up by a Roman Catholic bishops' committee has concluded that women should be admitted to the priesthood.

The group of four nuns and two laywomen, formed by a bishops' ad hoc committee on women in society, was chaired by Sister Margaret Brennan, former superior general of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The report of its study said:

"Concrete steps . . . should be set in motion to insure the admission of women to all forms of ministry in the church, including the diaconate and ordained priesthood."

Meanwhile, at the Vatican, the Pontifical Biblical Commission has voted 12-to-5 that Holy Scripture alone does not provide sufficient grounds "to exclude the possibility" of ordaining women. The majority of the organization of Bible scholars said the Church would not be contradicting Christ's intentions if it opened the priesthood to women.

'Just Another Dish' Valued at $1750.00.

NORTHBROOK, Ill.—A major art exchange here reports that a man who found several "dishes" in his attic was amazed to learn that one was valued at $1750.00.

The exchange says that, while this price is unusually high, exceptional collector's plates have been appreciating quickly on the market.

To aid investors, the exchange offers a free report on what to look for, when to buy, what to pay and much more, including opportunities in promising plates still at low prices.

To get your free report with no obligation, just send your name, address, and zip code to the Bradford Exchange, 56226 Bradford Place, Northbrook, Illinois 60062. A postcard will do. To be sure of receiving your free copy, please mail your request before July 24, 1976.

Metal Exhibit Overwhelming

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Piece by piece, the exhibit of contemporary metalcraft at Sheldon Art Gallery is commendable.

The quality of the craftsmanship is unquestionably high; the variety indicates the extent to which metal craftsmen are able to experiment with different forms.

But, taken as a whole, it is not what you'd call an exciting exhibit.

Perhaps that's because the exhibit is so large.

Viewer Overwhelmed

When confronted with more than 125 piece of metalcraft, the casual viewer is, to a large extent, overwhelmed by sheer numbers.

To do the exhibit justice, it would be necessary to spend more time viewing it than most people are inclined to allow.

In addition, there are no pieces in the exhibit which really dominate the show.

In and of itself, this is not necessarily bad. However, when added to the numbers problem, the absence of a "piece de resistance" makes it hard to get a handle on the show, to remember a week later what you saw, or how it was different from what you've seen before.

Materials Combined

The show's main strength is in its demonstration of the effectiveness that can be achieved when metal and other materials — both natural and synthetic — are combined in one piece.

A lovely necklace by Merle Zirkle is an example. Using bronze, silver, agate, ceramic and coffee beans, Ms. Zirkle has fashioned a piece of jewelry that is richly understated.

Two necklaces by Lynda Watson stand in contrast to the other jewelry in the show.

Whereas most of the necklaces, pins and bracelets on exhibit are solid-looking, abstract pieces, Ms. Watson's are delicately filigreed.

Enameled detail adds just a touch of color to her finely-wrought works.

The most unusual — though hardly the most appealing — pieces in the exhibit are a series of entomology pins made by Jan Loyd. Bugs — yup, the kind you might find crawling across your floor at night — are incorporated into the brooches along with metals, glass and feathers, and the effect is, well, interesting.

Items 'Interesting'

Also "interesting" are several items done by Harlan Butt: a circular box containing a hawk's skull, a pin which incorporates a blacksnake skull and a rattle fashioned of copper, feathers and a hawk's foot.

Two coffee pots by Humphrey Gilbert and a pewter pitcher by Fred Fenster are sleekly elegant, as are the several goblets and chalices included in the showing.

On the whimsical side, there's an appealing steel weathervane done by Robert Griffith, and a number of smaller pieces including a couple of "executive" puzzles.

The metalcraft exhibit will be on display through Aug. 31.

Zimmerwoman Could Start Whole New Naming Trend

Glen Burnie, Md. (UPI) — Toni Louise Zimmerwoman thinks she may start a new style of naming.

And in order to carry on her heritage, she's thinking about naming her first daughter Toni Louise Zimmerwoman Jr.

When Toni was born 18 years ago, she was given her father's name, Zimmerman. But since then she discovered her identity and is in the process of legally changing her last name to Zimmerwoman.

"Woman is a matriarchal suffix," the Anne Arundel Community College student said. "And, now, at 18, I have become a woman.

"I am a feminist. I am totally into human liberation — liberation for both men and women."

Toni said she has been using the suffix "woman" on her last name for four years. It has appeared on magazine subscriptions, homework papers, published articles and she uses it on the air at the college radio station. But not until the judge approves the change will she use it on legal documents.

When asked why she didn't change it to Zimmerperson, she said, "Even person has a patriarchal suffix — 'son.' "

Toni's mother, Mil, said she thinks the name "is very catchy."

"In this day of age of women coming into their own, it's giving her her identity.

"It takes a certain type of person to do this," said Mrs. Zimmerman, who added she isn't thinking of changing her name. "It takes a strong personality and there's been so much controversy over the change.

"But after all, we change our name when we get married — we take our husband's identity."

Toni doesn't plan to replace Zimmerwoman with her husband's name. In fact she would like to see her husband take her name.

And her children — well, of course, they'd take her name.

"I would definitely have a junior," she said. "The family tree would start with me."

History Repeats Itself

Today's contributor to "Write On" describes herself as "nothing unusual." She is a Friend housewife, the mother of four and grandmother of 12.

By Mrs. Walter Rasplicka

Does history repeat itself. Some times it seems like it must. For instance, take this happening.

Almost fifty years ago I was at my sister's helping her get ready for threshing.

One day while waiting for the dough to rise my 2-year-old nephew got cranky and miserable. My sister decided that he must be hungry. Little stomachs do not like to wait for bread to rise, so my sister told me to make some simple cookies.

Well and good. I got out the ingredients. The sugar was kept in a large jar. There did not seem to be enough of it. That was in the good old days when sugar was bought by the 100 pounds.

I knew that there was sugar in the built-in bin which was full. I noticed that the sugar was rather lumpy and was about to ask my sister about it when I noticed she had gone out. So I dipped in my measuring cup.

I mixed my batter and rolled and cut the cookies. With a cob and wood stove the cookies were supposed to bake.

Something was wrong. Although the cookies raised nice and plump, they would not brown. We kept filling the stove and little Leonard was getting crankier and crankier.

In desperation we pulled the cookies out of the oven and cooled one for the baby. Neither my sister nor I tasted the cookie. Leonard toddled into the bathroom and almost as fast came out.

My sister said, "He couldn't have eaten that cookie that fast. I wonder what he did with it." There on the bathroom floor was the crumbled, uneaten cookie. Why didn't the child eat it?

My sister took a bite and without a word handed it to me. The lumpy sugar I had dumped into the batter was salt. This accounted for the pale look and the uneaten mess.

Many years passed and Easter 1976 rolled around. My oldest granddaughter had been in 4-H just a year. Her project was apple crisp, which she proudly brought to Easter dinner. I had a rhubarb crisp and the desserts looked so much alike.

My son-in-law took the first bite of apple crisp. He sputted and raced for a drink. "You put too much salt in this."

I reached for a fork and took a bite of the dessert. It took a while to penetrate my poor sense of taste. Then it was my turn to reach for the water.

Poor Cindy. This was an important project but she wants to try again.

As for me, my most frequent baking is cookies. My supply of sugar comes out of 10-pound bags and my salt is not lumpy.

Does history repeat itself? I would vote a great big yes.

'Old Codger' Feels Guilty

DEAR ABBY: Can you help me? I have a problem with my thoughts. Because we needed the income, my wife and I rented our spare room to a young woman. I never would have done it had I known how it would affect me.

This young lady has her own friends and regards me as an "old codger," but I must confess that I have been having some very impure and indecent thoughts about her.

Isn't there some medicine I can take to clear away unwanted thoughts? How about the tiny electric shocks they give rapists? (Like from two penlight batteries?)

I hope you won't think I am an evil-minded old man. There must be other men past 75 with my problem. I might add, my wife cannot respond to me.

DEEP DOWN

DEAR DEEP: I admire your honesty and integrity. I consulted a psychiatrist about your problem, and he said that under similar circumstances, he might be proud and pleased to have such healthy masculine feelings at your age — which is nothing to be ashamed of.

But since this young woman's presence makes you feel guilty and ashamed, why not rent the room to another "old codger"?

The psychiatrist recommends that you forget about electric shock and says there is no medicine that will abolish sexual fantasies — short of a general anesthetic.

DEAR ABBY: What do you give a man who has everything?

I.M. SERIOUS

DEAR SERIOUS: If I were with the Internal Revenue Department, I'd give him an audit!

DEAR ABBY: I plan to be married soon. We both have grown children by previous marriages.

I have some property, savings, etc., that I want my children to have, and I do not wish any of it shared with the children of my spouse-to-be.

Assuming that I die first, how can this be accomplished and still allow my spouse the use of my assets during her lifetime?

Are prenuptial agreements legally binding? Or should another written document be prepared and notarized?

Could my wishes as stated in a properly executed will be ignored? Sign me . . .

"IN LOVE AND IN DOUBT"

DEAR IN: Unless you want to add "IN TROUBLE" to your signature, I urge you to have all of your questions answered by your lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: Last week on the way home from work, my husband and I saw a little girl on the side of the road who had just been hit by a truck. That was bad enough, but when the ambulance arrived they found no identification on the girl, and no one knew who or where her parents were, so all they could do was take her to the hospital. At the hospital they couldn't do anything without parental consent because she was a minor.

If that child had been wearing an I.D. bracelet or necklace her parents could have been easily located and treatment could have been started sooner.

We make sure our pets have tags because they can't tell people where they live, but a child who is unconscious can't talk either. Please print this.

J.L.E.

DEAR J.L.E.: Pets are tagged because it's required by law, but you make a good point. An I.D. bracelet or necklace would make an ideal gift for a child's birthday or Christmas. And include the child's blood type. It would be a life-saver. Think about it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FOURTEEN AND WORRIED STIFF": Tell you mother today. I promise you she will not kick you out of the house. If you just can't tell her, please send me your name and address. I think I can help you.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

A player who opens the bidding with one notrump announces he has 16 to 18 points, notrump distribution and high-card strength in at least three suits.

This is a lot of information to be able to pass to partner with one bid, but at the same time the opening notrump bid has its disadvantages. The enemy also have their ears tuned in on the bid, and sometimes they can put this information to very good use.

That's exactly what happened in this deal where South was in four hearts. When dummy came down, declarer realized at once that West had all the missing 16 high-card points and that there might conceivably be two losing trump tricks as well as two clubs.

So, to combat this possibility, South adopted special measures that had a good chance of leading to a successful endplay if West had all the missing trumps. He won the opening diamond lead with the ace, ruffed a diamond, played a low spade to the ace, and ruffed dummy's last diamond. Then, after cashing the K-Q of spades, he exited with a low trump.

West went up with the queen but found himself endplayed. He could not afford a trump return, which would surely cost him a trick. Nor could he afford a spade return, which would allow South to discard a club from dummy as he ruffed the spade in his hand.

So West returned the ace of clubs, making South's king a trick, and the outcome was that declarer wound up making the contract. He lost two trump tricks, but only one club trick, as a reward for having taken advantage of West's highly descriptive opening bid of one notrump.

I mixed my batter and rolled and cut the cookies. With a cob and wood stove the cookies were supposed to bake.

Something was wrong. Although the cookies raised nice and plump, they would not brown. We kept filling the stove and little Leonard was getting crankier and crankier.

In desperation we pulled the cookies out of the oven and cooled one for the baby. Neither my sister nor I tasted the cookie. Leonard toddled into the bathroom and almost as fast came out.

My sister said, "He couldn't have eaten that cookie that fast. I wonder what he did with it." There on the bathroom floor was the crumbled, uneaten cookie. Why didn't the child eat it?

My sister took a bite and without a word handed it to me. The lumpy sugar I had dumped into the batter was salt. This accounted for the pale look and the uneaten mess.

Many years passed and Easter 1976 rolled around. My oldest granddaughter had been in 4-H just a year. Her project was apple crisp, which she proudly brought to Easter dinner. I had a rhubarb crisp and the desserts looked so much alike.

My son-in-law took the first bite of apple crisp. He sputted and raced for a drink. "You put too much salt in this."

I reached for a fork and took a bite of the dessert. It took a while to penetrate my poor sense of taste. Then it was my turn to reach for the water.

Poor Cindy. This was an important project but she wants to try again.

As for me, my most frequent baking is cookies. My supply of sugar comes out of 10-pound bags and my salt is not lumpy.

Does history repeat itself? I would vote a great big yes.

'Old Codger' Feels Guilty

DEAR ABBY: Can you help me? I have a problem with my thoughts. Because we needed the income, my wife and I rented our spare room to a young woman. I never would have done it had I known how it would affect me.

This young lady has her own friends and regards me as an "old codger," but I must confess that I have been having some very impure and indecent thoughts about her.

Isn't there some medicine I can take to clear away unwanted thoughts? How about the tiny electric shocks they give rapists? (Like from two penlight batteries?)

I hope you won't think I am an evil-minded old man. There must be other men past 75 with my problem. I might add, my wife cannot respond to me.

DEEP DOWN

DEAR DEEP: I admire your honesty and integrity. I consulted a psychiatrist about your problem, and he said that under similar circumstances, he might be proud and pleased to have such healthy masculine feelings at your age — which is nothing to be ashamed of.

But since this young woman's presence makes you feel guilty and ashamed, why not rent the room to another "old codger"?

The psychiatrist recommends that you forget about electric shock and says there is no medicine that will abolish sexual fantasies — short of a general anesthetic.

DEAR ABBY: What do you give a man who has everything?

I.M. SERIOUS

DEAR SERIOUS: If I were with the Internal Revenue Department, I'd give him an audit!

DEAR ABBY: I plan to be married soon. We both have grown children by previous marriages.

I have some property, savings, etc., that I want my children to have, and I do not wish any of it shared with the children of my spouse-to-be.

Assuming that I die first, how can this be accomplished and still allow my spouse the use of my assets during her lifetime?

Are prenuptial agreements legally binding? Or should another written document be prepared and notarized?

Could my wishes as stated in a properly executed will be ignored? Sign me . . .

"IN LOVE AND IN DOUBT"

DEAR IN: Unless you want to add "IN TROUBLE" to your signature, I urge you to have all of your questions answered by your lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: Last week on the way home from work, my husband and I saw a little girl on the side of the road who had just been hit by a truck. That was bad enough, but when the ambulance arrived they found no identification on the girl, and no one knew who or where her parents were, so all they could do was take her to the hospital. At the hospital they couldn't do anything without parental consent because she was a minor.

If that child had been wearing an I.D. bracelet or necklace her parents could have been easily located and treatment could have been started sooner.

We make sure our pets have tags because they can't tell people where they live, but a child who is unconscious can't talk either. Please print this.

J.L.E.

DEAR J.L.E.: Pets are tagged because it's required by law, but you make a good point. An I.D. bracelet or necklace would make an ideal gift for a child's birthday or Christmas. And include the child's blood type. It would be a life-saver. Think about it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FOURTEEN AND WORRIED STIFF": Tell you mother today. I promise you she will not kick you out of the house. If you just can't tell her, please send me your name and address. I think I can help you.

The bidding:

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

A player who opens the bidding with one notrump announces he has 16 to 18 points, notrump distribution and high-card strength in at least three suits.

This is a lot of information to be able to pass to partner with one bid, but at the same time the opening notrump bid has its disadvantages. The enemy also have their ears tuned in on the bid, and sometimes they can put this information to very good use.

That's exactly what happened in this deal where South was in four hearts. When dummy came down, declarer realized at once that West had all the missing 16 high-card points and that there might conceivably be two losing trump tricks as well as two clubs.

So, to combat this possibility, South adopted special measures that had a good chance of leading to a successful endplay if West had all the missing trumps. He won the opening diamond lead with the ace, ruffed a diamond, played a low spade to the ace, and ruffed dummy's last diamond. Then, after cashing the K-Q of spades, he exited with a low trump.

West went up with the queen but found himself endplayed. He could not afford a trump return, which would surely cost him a trick. Nor could he afford a spade return, which would allow South to discard a club from dummy as he ruffed the spade in his hand.

So West returned the ace of clubs, making South's king a trick, and the outcome was that declarer wound up making the contract. He lost two trump tricks, but only one club trick, as a reward for having taken advantage of West's highly descriptive opening bid of one notrump.

Schmidt Listens To Mrs. Schmidt During Chess

Bonn, West Germany (AP) — Betty Ford may be able to influence her husband with "pillow talk," but Hannelore Schmidt says she finds it more convenient to talk to her husband during their evening chess game.

Mrs. Schmidt, 57, said her husband, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, gets ready for bed by reading. "That is the only opportunity for him to read books."

She was asked in an interview about Betty Ford saying she had been able to occasionally change President Ford's attitude on certain issues with chats before they fell asleep.

When Schmidt wants her opinion on an issue, she said, he will ask her during their evening chess games. "Sometimes there are such important questions that my husband wants to speak with different persons about them," she said. "And I am one of those persons."

Pro-Western Man Chosen To Lead Italy

ROME (AP) — Giulio Andreotti, a pro-American with close ties to the Vatican, was tapped Tuesday night to form Italy's 36th postwar government.

Andreotti, 57, a Christian Democrat who has been premier twice, will try to put together a government following parliamentary elections last month in which his party maintained its dominant role in the face of big Communist gains.

The premier-designate served as budget minister in the government of Aldo Moro, which fell in April to bring on the elections. President Giovanni Leone gave him the task of forming the new cabinet.

The try could take weeks. While the Christian Democrats held on in the elections as Italy's No. 1 party, they lack a majority to rule by themselves.

The Roman Catholic church-backed party has asked the Socialists, Italy's third largest party, to join them in a coalition excluding the Communists, who won a third of the votes in the June 20-21 elections.

The Socialist party, which has been demanding a voice for the Communists, is in turmoil itself following election losses. Party leader Francesco de Martino, under fire for the setback, resigned Tuesday.

Andreotti maintains good relations with the Socialists.

Fugitive SS Major Is Nabbed

Bonn, West Germany (AP) — A fugitive SS major who allegedly printed most of Nazi Germany's counterfeit money was caught when he failed to pay a $24 hotel bill, police reported Tuesday.

Authorities had searched 17 years for Friedrich Schwend, 69, who was charged in Munich in 1959 with killing an Italian prisoner at the Sachsenhausen concentration camp in 1944. An Italian court tried him in absentia in 1965, found him guilty of manslaughter and sentenced him to 21 years in prison.

"Where and how he managed to disappear remains unsolved at this stage," police said. "However, in 1974 a court in Lima, Peru, sentenced him to two years in prison for fraud and other offenses."

When he completed his sentence, he was deported. Five days later, a Bonn hotel owner called the police about an unpaid bill, and the police, on checking, identified Schwend.

Police said he would be taken to Munich to answer to the 1959 charge.

Schwend allegedly ran a shop in the Sachsenhausen camp that produced counterfeit foreign money which the Nazis used to pay their spies. The production included 100 million British pounds which Hitler planned to drop on Britain in an effort to ruin the British economy. But the plan was never carried out.

Foster Powers NL To Victory

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Booed by the fans when he was introduced in the pre-game ceremonies, Cincinnati's George Foster turned the jeers into cheers Tuesday night with three runs-batted-in that enabled the National League to continue its' dominance over the American League by sparking a 7-1 romp in the 47th All-Star game.

Although personally praised by President Ford before the game, Foster and his Cincinnati teammates were the targets of the famed Philadelphia boobirds when they were introduced. But it took only three innings for the Veterans Stadium record crowd of 63,974 fans to cheer wildly as the NL whipped the AL for the fifth year in a row and the 13th time in the last 14 games. The NL now leads the overall series 2818-1.

Foster, the major league's leader in RBI's with 72, walked away with most valuable player honors by driving in a first inning run with a groundout, then unloading a 400-foot two-run homer off Jim "Catfish" Hunter of the New York Yankees in the third inning.

"I don't think it was anything really critical," said Foster, referring to the pre-game razz given by the fans to the Reds' players. "It just shows the fans are partial to their own club. We understand that. I'm happy the Phillies get that kind of support. These fans are for the Phillies and nobody else.

"There were five of us (Reds) in the lineup and we all got hits. The fans voted us All-Stars, and we wanted to show everybody we were All-Stars. We're the world champions and we have to uphold our reputation. We have to keep proving it every time we go out on the field."

Houston's Cesar Cedeno and five pitchers, led by baseball's top winner, Randy Jones of San Diego, also shared in the glory of the National League's easy All-Star triumph. Cedeno hit a two-run homer to cap a three-run eighth inning off California's Frank Tanana while National League pitchers stymied the American League on only five hits.

Jones, a 16-game winner in just half a season, started for the NL and received credit for the win by pitching three scoreless innings. The 26-year old southpaw tantalized the AL batters with an assortment of sinkers and sliders and had them completely baffled.

Jones allowed two hits and issued a rare walk to Kansas City's George Brett in the second inning, but kept the ball down and had the opposition beating the ball into the ground. Jones got six of his nine outs on ground balls and one of the hits, a single to Detroit's Ron LeFlore in the first, also was a ground ball that skipped through the hard Astroturf infield.

Jones, who earlier this year tied Christy Mathewson's National League record for most consecutive innings without a walk, admitted to being nervous in his first All-Star start but, oddly enough, said the walk to Brett loosened him up.

"That was the first walk I issued all year on four pitches," said Jones. "I felt very tense at the start but after I walked Brett, the tenseness left me. Then I did what I expected to do—give up a few hits, a lot of groundouts and no runs."

Tom Seaver of New York, John Montefusco of San Francisco, Rich Rhoden of Los Angeles and Ken Forsch of Houston also pitched for the National League and allowed only two hits over the last five innings.

Seaver who followed Jones on the mound for the NL, gave up the lone run, a booming home run by Boston's Fred Lynn in the fourth inning. The American League got only one runner as far as second base and managed just two more hits. Rod Carew of Minnesota reached second in the sixth when he was walked by San Francisco's Montefusco and stole second. Montefusco, however, retired Brett on a fly to center and got Carlton Fisk on a foul pop to the catcher to end the inning.

The only other baserunners for the AL over the last four innings, were rookie Butch Wynegar of Minnesota, who walked with two outs in the seventh and New York's Mickey Rivers, who beat out an infield hit in the eighth.

Montefusco lived up to a pregame boast that he would show the American League, "who the best pitcher in the National League is" by not allowing a hit in his two inning stint. "The Count" had publicly challenged Brett and Carew to hit him and he made his boast come true by striking out two and allowing only two walks.

While Jones and Montefusco performed superbly, rookie sensation Mark Fidrych of Detroit had his troubles. Fidrych, only the second first year pitcher ever to start an All-Star game, was charged with the loss after being pelted for two runs and four hits in two innings. He might have fared better, however, if Detroit teammate Rusty Staub had not misplayed Steve Garvey's hit into a triple in the first inning.

Cincinnati's Pete Rose led off the first with a single to center and Garvey then hit a soft line drive to right field which bounced in front of the slowfooted Staub and kicked away from him to the wall. When he tried to retrieve it, he slipped and fell and by the time he recovered, Rose had scored and Garvey was on third with a triple. Foster then scored Garvey with a grounder to second and the National League was ahead to stay.

"I knew the ball was going to bounce and I tried to jump up," said Staub. "I touched it but I couldn't get it. I wanted to knock it down to keep the guy from scoring but this field is like glass. I did get a couple of hits though. In a game like this, that's pretty good."

Perhaps the crowning indignity to the American League occured in the eighth at the expense of Tanana. With Ken Griffey of the Reds on first base and two out, Tanana worked the count to 3-1 on Cedeno. The Houston centerfielder then glanced into the National Leaguers' dugout where he picked up Montefusco's gaze upon him and he called to the Giants' pitcher, "I got him—watch this!!"

Reds Pave Way For 5th In Row

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The All-Star game was a lot like any other game for National League manager Sparky Anderson — Pete Rose sparked the first inning rally, George Foster drove in three runs, three other Cincinnati players got hits and Anderson's team won.

"We brought seven players," Anderson said Tuesday night after the National League beat the American League stars 7-1, "I think we showed we deserved to bring seven."

The crowd of 63,947 appeared to have some doubts before the game. Starters Pete Rose and Johnny Bench were roundly booed when they were introduced at Veteran Memorial Stadium, home of the Phillies. Many of the fans felt that Mike Schmidt deserved the starting nomination for third base and that Bob Boone should have been the starting catcher.

Rose didn't waste any time silencing the boos. He led off the NL first with a line single to center and came home on Steve Garvey's triple. Garvey scored one out later on Foster's groundout.

Foster gave the NL stars some breathing room in the third inning with a towering two-run homer to left-center field.

"The fans voted us as All-Stars," Foster said. "And we wanted to show everybody we are All-Stars.

We're the World Champions and we have to uphold our reputation," Foster added.

"The boos didn't bother me a bit," Rose said. "I expected it."

"I think its great," Anderson said. "They (the Phillies) have the best record in baseball and if we were playing in Cincinnati the fans would boo them."

The game was not completely a Cincinnati show however.

Slow-balling southpaw Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres, baseball's winningest pitcher, threw three shutout innings and picked up the victory after he got over a little first inning tenseness.

"Yeah, I was really tense, really nervous when I first went out there," Jones said. He said he settled down after giving up a four-pitch walk to George Brett. "After that I was okay, I had a great sinker tonight."

Sasse Turns Injury Into Tourney Edge

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

What was to be Rennie Sasse's Lincoln men's city golf handicap is quickly becoming a great asset for the defending champion.

Just 3½ weeks after surgery to remove 10 bone chips from his elbow, and only five days following removal of a restrictive cast, Sasse fired an even-par round of 72 at Hillcrest Country Club in Tuesday's first round to hold a one-stroke lead over Daryl VandeHoef.

Although somewhat surprised with his first day's success, Sasse credited the healing elbow for some of the consistency that helped him to nine-hole splits of 37-35.

"Not being completely recovered really helped me on a lot of holes," Sasse said. "Especially those into the wind. I was able to keep the ball lower since I couldn't go all out on the swing.

"When I did try to crunch it, it was disastrous," he added. "I tried to take a full swing on No. 10 and barely got the ball off the ground. And on 15, I hit it about 100 yards to the right."

Sasse was able to recover after his drive on No. 10 and began a string of birdies that put him in the driver's seat.

After missing the green with a short second shot, Sasse chipped in from about 40 feet for a birdie. He then reached the par-five 11th hole in two and two-outted for his second birdie.

If that wasn't enough, he knocked his tee shot on the par-three 12th hole four feet past the cup and made two to go two-under-par for the day.

Before the tournament, Sasse had predicted if he could swing the club, he could shoot par, at Holmes and maybe at Lincoln Country Club.

"I really didn't think the surgery would bother me that much since I was playing well before I had it done," he added. "My mental attitude is much better just being back on the course."

Sasse's attempt at two straight titles so shortly after his surgery drew praise from his nearest competitor.

"I really admire a guy like that," VandeHoef said after watching Sasse putt out on No. 18 to take the lead. "That's remarkable to come back out of a cast so soon."

VandeHoef remained in contention with the help of a borrowed putter from Mike Schuchart, who qualified for the men's city after winning the junior tournament.

"It's unusual for me, but I've been putting real good," VandeHoef said. "I only had 32 putts today and if I can keep it somewhere around 30 each day, I should stay near the top."

The members of the senior division weren't content to play second fiddle to the younger set as five golfers are tied for the divisional lead at 74.

Lincoln East High golf coach Dale Wismer, a member of Hillcrest who is one of the five tied for the lead, took the assault one step further.

Wismer scored a remarkable double eagle (three under par) two on the par-five 11th hole.

"I hit a good drive, probably about 250 yards," Wismer said of his tee shot on the 544 yard hole. "And I took out a four wood and just caught it perfect. It bounced up on the green, rolled by the guys on the green and two of them started motioning that the ball had gone in.

"It shook me up so much, I didn't stop shaking for three more holes," he added.

Wismer was tied for the lead with three other Hillcrest members, Ed Smith, Larry Rowan and Cliff Orcutt and Chuck Taylor who also shot 74.

Lynn Says Loss Is Embarrassing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — No one in the American League locker room had that snake-bit feeling after Tuesday night's 7-1 All-Star loss to the National League. It's just that the NL seems to come up with all the hits.

"It's a little embarrassing," said Boston's Fred Lynn, who provided the only offense for the losers with a solo home run off Tom Seaver in the fourth inning.

"Any game you go into, you think you can win," said the second-year center fielder. "When you go in with the attitude that you're snake-bit, chances are you are going to lose."

Lynn said the big difference was the NL bats.

"They hit," he said. "And they hit the long ball, too. They have a bit more power than we do."

Ford Hits Canada Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokesman for President Ford hit directly at the Canadian government Tuesday for its efforts to bar athletes from Taiwan from entering the Montreal Olympics under the flag of the Republic of China.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen told reporters that it was "the American position, the White House position" that the International Olympic Committee should have sole jurisdiction over which athletes participate in the international competition.

Taiwan Gets Chance

MONTREAL (UPI) — The persuasive powers of America's Philip O. Krumm and other international sports leaders Tuesday caused the Republic of China team to soften its stand on the matter of being called Taiwan. They may now decide to compete in the Olympic Games, but without a name.

This was announced by IOC president Lord Killanin at the end of the first day of the 78th session of the annual congress of the 76 members.

Killanin said the Taiwanese would use no name—neither the Republic of China nor Taiwan— and would march in the opening parade behind the Olympic flag and use the Olympic anthem at flag-raising ceremonies.

Krumm, the U.S. Olympic Committee president, said, "hopefully we can now resolve this dispute so the athletes, all of whom have trained so hard, can compete in the Games."

It is understood the Taiwanese delegation will continue discussions through the night before reporting back to the congress session.

Sources said international sports leaders, who have no voting rights at congress where new members are elected by the existing membership, had insisted they get the Canadian government's approval of the compromise before it was presented to the Taiwanese.

"We did not want them to lose face again by getting them to agree to a compromise and then have the government reject it," a source said. "We insisted the IOC first got government approval before we made the proposal to our Taiwanese friends."

New Zealand Is Optimistic

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — The New Zealand government expressed optimism Tuesday that the country will not be excluded from the Montreal Olympic Games despite the protest by African countries over its sport policies.

Tanzania has withdrawn from the games in protest against a New Zealand rugby team's tour of South Africa.

Taiwan Protest

Los Angeles (UPI) — Twelve Taiwanese nationals carrying a coffin demonstrated in front of the Canadian consulate Tuesday protesting that government's decision not to allow Taiwanese athletes to compete in the Olympics under the banner of the Republic of China.

James Chen, a spokesman for the group, said the games should be boycotted.

©The New York Times

New York — The New York Times said in an editorial on Tuesday:

The cynical calculation of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau that the International Olympic Committee was a paper tiger has proved correct. On the ground it had "no other alternative," the executive board of the committee has bowed to Canada's decision to bar the Republic of China team that comes from Taiwan.

It would be unfair to the other athletes and to the City of Montreal to withdraw Olympic sanction from the games at this late date, the president of the Committee lamely argued in justifying his surrender. Once again principle is abandoned in favor of expediency just as the Canadian Government no doubt thought would happen when it decided to curry favor with Peking by striking at the Taiwanese athletes who up to that moment had been duly recognized competitors in the Olympic Games.

If Canada gets away with this flagrant political abuse and misuse of the Olympics, a far-reaching precedent will have been set that could destroy the modern Olympic Games altogether. Four years from now, the summer Olympics are scheduled to be held in the Soviet Union. Moscow has not before it a precise model of the way to proceed to bar any country it dislikes or does not recognize from participating in the 1980 games.

President Ford Monday urged American officials to seek a reversal of the IOC executive board's decision to surrender. This is the very least that should be done; but if the IOC persists in accepting the Canadian fait accompli, United States participation in the Olympics should be reconsidered even at this late date, on the ground that the games have now been totally corrupted by a politicization that reduces this international sports contest to a mockery of the Olympic ideal and to a mere sideshow in the ideological wars.

U.S. Blacks Eye Walkout

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The Sacramento Bee reported today that American black athletes will be asked to withdraw from the Olympic games by a group of African nations opposing participation by New Zealand.

Quoting an anonymous informed source, the Bee said the Supreme Council for Sports in Africa will approach American athletes "individually in an attempt to promote a pullout."

In a story by Don Bloom, the Bee said American blacks will be asked to join African nations in protesting a tour by an all-black New Zealand rugby team to South Africa.

Dr. Abraham Ordia, president of the council, posed the threat of a black boycott of the games unless New Zealand is barred from the games by the International Olympic Committee.

Ordia accused New Zealand of supporting apartheid in sport even if it did not support apartheid in general.

New Zealand Foreign Minsiter Brian Talboys denied the charge, declaring his nation is "totally opposed to apartheid in sport and in every other social activity."

Luck 'Retires' From Browns

By DAVE SITTLER

Time and luck, two items Terry Luck chased his entire football career at Nebraska, have once again eluded the popular former Cornhusker.

After suffering a knee strain during workouts Saturday with the Cleveland Browns, Luck saw his fling at professional football end Monday when the Browns' trainer informed him the knee would need at least a week's rest.

After discussing his chances of making the squad with Browns coach Forrest Gregg after missing a week of practice, Luck decided to permit the Browns to place him on the retirement waiver list and accepted an assistant coaching position at North Texas State.

It was a tough decision for the gritty Luck, who overcame the adversity of several knee operations to co-captain and quarterback the Huskers last season.

"I'm no quitter, never have been," Luck said Tuesday morning after arriving in Lincoln late Monday from the Browns training camp in Kent, Ohio.

"They (Cleveland) couldn't cut me while I was injured," continued Luck, who signed a free-agent contract with Cleveland. "But coach Gregg said my chances of making the team wouldn't be too good if I had to miss a week of practice."

Ironically, Luck injured his right knee during a non-contact drill Saturday. It was the same type of drill when he injured the knee for the first time five years ago as a Nebraska sophomore after a brilliant freshman campaign.

The Cleveland workout was conducted during a rainstorm, and Luck strained his knee when he caught his cleats in the mud while spinning around to make a handoff.

"I just strained a ligament and it would have been alright with some rest," Luck said. "I had a very expensive physical when I first went to camp and the doctors said my knee was fine. I had a little swelling but that was normal."

Sitting in his Lincoln apartment, Luck admitted he was "in sort of a daze at the moment.

"One day I'm busting my butt to make the team and it looks like I had a good shot and the next day I'm sitting at home doing nothing."

Luck said he planned to start packing his belongings, make the rounds to say a few goodbyes and then head for Denton, Tex., where he will coach the quarterbacks and receivers for Coach Hayden Fry at North Texas State.

One of the major disappointments by the change of events Luck said was that he would not be able to return to Lincoln with the Browns when Cleveland faces Baltimore in an exhibition game at Memorial Stadium, July 31.

"I think a lot of people were looking forward to seeing some of us guys come back," Luck said. "I know I was really looking forward to it."

Professional football isn't completely out of the question for Luck. The retirement waiver means the Browns have the rights to him if he decides to give it a shot next season.

He was one of eight quarterbacks in the Browns camp, and coaches said he was in the battle for a reserve role.

"I don't know if I'll try again or not," Luck said. "It depends on what happens. Maybe it isn't in the cards for me to play football.

"Pro football is a cold business, I certainly found that out. Everyone has the talent to make it or they wouldn't be in camp. You just need a lot of luck."

Unfortunately, when it comes to athletics, luck has only been part of Terry Luck's name lately.

Bowlers' Hopes On The Ball

By BOB MOYER

It doesn't have to cost much to bowl, just two bits to rent shoes.

But three local experts on the game — Jim Dill, Rodger Florom and Max Jensen — agree anyone seeking to become even an average bowler (158 average for men, 132 for women) should head to a qualified bowling ball driller and get a ball that fits.

"It's very unlikely you can achieve even an average average without a ball that fits properly," notes Jensen. "158 is not a bad average."

Three questions need to be answered in acquiring a bowling ball.

The first is whether to get a plastic ball or a rubber one.

In recent years plastic bowling balls have come into prominence. One reason is purely cosmetic — they come in varied colors which are more appealing to the eye than the drab black typical of rubber balls.

The other reason is more practical. Plastic bowling balls will skid better on an oily condition, giving the ball more power in the pocket.

Rubber bowling balls hook more uniformly. Also, some bowlers feel they are easier to grip than plastic bowling balls.

However, Dill, Florom and Jensen all agreed that the beginner bowler will not discern a notable difference between bowling balls because they have not yet achieved the skill and consistency to take advantage of the rather subtle differences in action.

The second problem is determining a grip. The three basic grips are conventional, fingertip and semi-fingertip.

The conventional grip (with room for the entire finger) gives more accuracy, while the fingertip (with room only for the fingers to the first knuckle joint) should yield more revolutions and consequently, hitting power. The fingertip, however, is harder to control. The semi-fingertip is in between — less control than a conventional, but more revolutions. The semi-fingertip does not allow the entire finger in the ball, but rather past the first knuckle joint.

The trio of experts, wholeheartedly agreed a beginner bowler should start out with a conventional grip. "I averaged 180 with a conventional before I went to a fingertip," notes Dill.

The third problem is deciding what weight ball to get. The trio agreed most men should bowl with no less than a 15-pound ball and more likely a 16-pound ball.

"With women it is much more difficult to determine what is the correct weight," notes Dill. "As a rule women are much better off starting out with a lighter ball and gradually moving up to higher weights."

As far as other equipment goes, all three agreed leather shoes are the best bet. "They are cooler and longer-lasting," notes Dill.

Many bowlers also use bowling gloves.

"They can't do you any harm," notes Jensen. "They are a valuable training aid," adds Dill.

The bowling glove can help by correctly positioning the hand, keeping it stationary during delivery.

However, there are several bowling gloves on the market which are less than adequate for their purpose. "Be sure to get one with substantiality," warns Jensen.

All three men stressed going to someone who knows what they are talking about when buying equipment.

Foster Powers NL To Victory

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Booed by the fans when he was introduced in the pre-game ceremonies, Cincinnati's George Foster turned the jeers into cheers Tuesday night with three runs-batted-in that enabled the National League to continue its' dominance over the American League by sparking a 7-1 romp in the 47th All-Star game.

Although personally praised by President Ford before the game, Foster and his Cincinnati teammates were the targets of the famed Philadelphia boobirds when they were introduced. But it took only three innings for the Veterans Stadium record crowd of 63,974 fans to cheer wildly as the NL whipped the AL for the fifth year in a row and the 13th time in the last 14 games. The NL now leads the overall series 2818-1.

Foster, the major league's leader in RBI's with 72, walked away with most valuable player honors by driving in a first inning run with a groundout, then unloading a 400-foot two-run homer off Jim "Catfish" Hunter of the New York Yankees in the third inning.

"I don't think it was anything really critical," said Foster, referring to the pre-game razz given by the fans to the Reds' players. "It just shows the fans are partial to their own club. We understand that. I'm happy the Phillies get that kind of support. These fans are for the Phillies and nobody else.

"There were five of us (Reds) in the lineup and we all got hits. The fans voted us All-Stars, and we wanted to show everybody we were All-Stars. We're the world champions and we have to uphold our reputation. We have to keep proving it every time we go out on the field."

Houston's Cesar Cedeno and five pitchers, led by baseball's top winner, Randy Jones of San Diego, also shared in the glory of the National League's easy All-Star triumph. Cedeno hit a two-run homer to cap a three-run eighth inning off California's Frank Tanana while National League pitchers stymied the American League on only five hits.

Jones, a 16-game winner in just half a season, started for the NL and received credit for the win by pitching three scoreless innings. The 26-year old southpaw tantalized the AL batters with an assortment of sinkers and sliders and had them completely baffled.

Jones allowed two hits and issued a rare walk to Kansas City's George Brett in the second inning, but kept the ball down and had the opposition beating the ball into the ground. Jones got six of his nine outs on ground balls and one of the hits, a single to Detroit's Ron LeFlore in the first, also was a ground ball that skipped through the hard Astroturf infield.

Jones, who earlier this year tied Christy Mathewson's National League record for most consecutive innings without a walk, admitted to being nervous in his first All-Star start but, oddly enough, said the walk to Brett loosened him up.

"That was the first walk I issued all year on four pitches," said Jones. "I felt very tense at the start but after I walked Brett, the tenseness left me. Then I did what I expected to do—give up a few hits, a lot of groundouts and no runs."

Tom Seaver of New York, John Montefusco of San Francisco, Rich Rhoden of Los Angeles and Ken Forsch of Houston also pitched for the National League and allowed only two hits over the last five innings.

Seaver who followed Jones on the mound for the NL, gave up the lone run, a booming home run by Boston's Fred Lynn in the fourth inning. The American League got only one runner as far as second base and managed just two more hits. Rod Carew of Minnesota reached second in the sixth when he was walked by San Francisco's Montefusco and stole second. Montefusco, however, retired Brett on a fly to center and got Carlton Fisk on a foul pop to the catcher to end the inning.

The only other baserunners for the AL over the last four innings, were rookie Butch Wynegar of Minnesota, who walked with two outs in the seventh and New York's Mickey Rivers, who beat out an infield hit in the eighth.

Montefusco lived up to a pregame boast that he would show the American League, "who the best pitcher in the National League is" by not allowing a hit in his two inning stint. "The Count" had publicly challenged Brett and Carew to hit him and he made his boast come true by striking out two and allowing only two walks.

While Jones and Montefusco performed superbly, rookie sensation Mark Fidrych of Detroit had his troubles. Fidrych, only the second first year pitcher ever to start an All-Star game, was charged with the loss after being pelted for two runs and four hits in two innings. He might have fared better, however, if Detroit teammate Rusty Staub had not misplayed Steve Garvey's hit into a triple in the first inning.

Cincinnati's Pete Rose led off the first with a single to center and Garvey then hit a soft line drive to right field which bounced in front of the slowfooted Staub and kicked away from him to the wall. When he tried to retrieve it, he slipped and fell and by the time he recovered, Rose had scored and Garvey was on third with a triple. Foster then scored Garvey with a grounder to second and the National League was ahead to stay.

"I knew the ball was going to bounce and I tried to jump up," said Staub. "I touched it but I couldn't get it. I wanted to knock it down to keep the guy from scoring but this field is like glass. I did get a couple of hits though. In a game like this, that's pretty good."

Perhaps the crowning indignity to the American League occured in the eighth at the expense of Tanana. With Ken Griffey of the Reds on first base and two out, Tanana worked the count to 3-1 on Cedeno. The Houston centerfielder then glanced into the National Leaguers' dugout where he picked up Montefusco's gaze upon him and he called to the Giants' pitcher, "I got him—watch this!!"

Reds Pave Way For 5th In Row

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The All-Star game was a lot like any other game for National League manager Sparky Anderson — Pete Rose sparked the first inning rally, George Foster drove in three runs, three other Cincinnati players got hits and Anderson's team won.

"We brought seven players," Anderson said Tuesday night after the National League beat the American League stars 7-1, "I think we showed we deserved to bring seven."

The crowd of 63,947 appeared to have some doubts before the game. Starters Pete Rose and Johnny Bench were roundly booed when they were introduced at Veteran Memorial Stadium, home of the Phillies. Many of the fans felt that Mike Schmidt deserved the starting nomination for third base and that Bob Boone should have been the starting catcher.

Rose didn't waste any time silencing the boos. He led off the NL first with a line single to center and came home on Steve Garvey's triple. Garvey scored one out later on Foster's groundout.

Foster gave the NL stars some breathing room in the third inning with a towering two-run homer to left-center field.

"The fans voted us as All-Stars," Foster said. "And we wanted to show everybody we are All-Stars.

We're the World Champions and we have to uphold our reputation," Foster added.

"The boos didn't bother me a bit," Rose said. "I expected it."

"I think its great," Anderson said. "They (the Phillies) have the best record in baseball and if we were playing in Cincinnati the fans would boo them."

The game was not completely a Cincinnati show however.

Slow-balling southpaw Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres, baseball's winningest pitcher, threw three shutout innings and picked up the victory after he got over a little first inning tenseness.

"Yeah, I was really tense, really nervous when I first went out there," Jones said. He said he settled down after giving up a four-pitch walk to George Brett. "After that I was okay, I had a great sinker tonight."

Sasse Turns Injury Into Tourney Edge

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

What was to be Rennie Sasse's Lincoln men's city golf handicap is quickly becoming a great asset for the defending champion.

Just 3½ weeks after surgery to remove 10 bone chips from his elbow, and only five days following removal of a restrictive cast, Sasse fired an even-par round of 72 at Hillcrest Country Club in Tuesday's first round to hold a one-stroke lead over Daryl VandeHoef.

Although somewhat surprised with his first day's success, Sasse credited the healing elbow for some of the consistency that helped him to nine-hole splits of 37-35.

"Not being completely recovered really helped me on a lot of holes," Sasse said. "Especially those into the wind. I was able to keep the ball lower since I couldn't go all out on the swing.

"When I did try to crunch it, it was disastrous," he added. "I tried to take a full swing on No. 10 and barely got the ball off the ground. And on 15, I hit it about 100 yards to the right."

Sasse was able to recover after his drive on No. 10 and began a string of birdies that put him in the driver's seat.

After missing the green with a short second shot, Sasse chipped in from about 40 feet for a birdie. He then reached the par-five 11th hole in two and two-outted for his second birdie.

If that wasn't enough, he knocked his tee shot on the par-three 12th hole four feet past the cup and made two to go two-under-par for the day.

Before the tournament, Sasse had predicted if he could swing the club, he could shoot par, at Holmes and maybe at Lincoln Country Club.

"I really didn't think the surgery would bother me that much since I was playing well before I had it done," he added. "My mental attitude is much better just being back on the course."

Sasse's attempt at two straight titles so shortly after his surgery drew praise from his nearest competitor.

"I really admire a guy like that," VandeHoef said after watching Sasse putt out on No. 18 to take the lead. "That's remarkable to come back out of a cast so soon."

VandeHoef remained in contention with the help of a borrowed putter from Mike Schuchart, who qualified for the men's city after winning the junior tournament.

"It's unusual for me, but I've been putting real good," VandeHoef said. "I only had 32 putts today and if I can keep it somewhere around 30 each day, I should stay near the top."

The members of the senior division weren't content to play second fiddle to the younger set as five golfers are tied for the divisional lead at 74.

Lincoln East High golf coach Dale Wismer, a member of Hillcrest who is one of the five tied for the lead, took the assault one step further.

Wismer scored a remarkable double eagle (three under par) two on the par-five 11th hole.

"I hit a good drive, probably about 250 yards," Wismer said of his tee shot on the 544 yard hole. "And I took out a four wood and just caught it perfect. It bounced up on the green, rolled by the guys on the green and two of them started motioning that the ball had gone in.

"It shook me up so much, I didn't stop shaking for three more holes," he added.

Wismer was tied for the lead with three other Hillcrest members, Ed Smith, Larry Rowan and Cliff Orcutt and Chuck Taylor who also shot 74.

Lynn Says Loss Is Embarrassing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — No one in the American League locker room had that snake-bit feeling after Tuesday night's 7-1 All-Star loss to the National League. It's just that the NL seems to come up with all the hits.

"It's a little embarrassing," said Boston's Fred Lynn, who provided the only offense for the losers with a solo home run off Tom Seaver in the fourth inning.

"Any game you go into, you think you can win," said the second-year center fielder. "When you go in with the attitude that you're snake-bit, chances are you are going to lose."

Lynn said the big difference was the NL bats.

"They hit," he said. "And they hit the long ball, too. They have a bit more power than we do."

"We did not want them to lose face again by getting them to agree to a compromise and then have the government reject it," a source said. "We insisted the IOC first got government approval before we made the proposal to our Taiwanese friends."

New Zealand Is Optimistic

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — The New Zealand government expressed optimism Tuesday that the country will not be excluded from the Montreal Olympic Games despite the protest by African countries over its sport policies.

Tanzania has withdrawn from the games in protest against a New Zealand rugby team's tour of South Africa.

Taiwan Protest

Los Angeles (UPI) — Twelve Taiwanese nationals carrying a coffin demonstrated in front of the Canadian consulate Tuesday protesting that government's decision not to allow Taiwanese athletes to compete in the Olympics under the banner of the Republic of China.

James Chen, a spokesman for the group, said the games should be boycotted.

©The New York Times

New York — The New York Times said in an editorial on Tuesday:

The cynical calculation of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau that the International Olympic Committee was a paper tiger has proved correct. On the ground it had "no other alternative," the executive board of the committee has bowed to Canada's decision to bar the Republic of China team that comes from Taiwan.

It would be unfair to the other athletes and to the City of Montreal to withdraw Olympic sanction from the games at this late date, the president of the Committee lamely argued in justifying his surrender. Once again principle is abandoned in favor of expediency just as the Canadian Government no doubt thought would happen when it decided to carry favor with Peking by striking at the Taiwanese athletes who up to that moment had been duly recognized competitors in the Olympic Games.

If Canada gets away with this flagrant political abuse and misuse of the Olympics, a far-reaching precedent will have been set that could destroy the modern Olympic Games altogether. Four years from now, the summer Olympics are scheduled to be held in the Soviet Union. Moscow has not before it a precise model of the way to proceed to bar any country it dislikes or does not recognize from participating in the 1980 games.

President Ford Monday urged American officials to seek a reversal of the IOC executive board's decision to surrender. This is the very least that should be done; but if the IOC persists in accepting the Canadian fait accompli, United States participation in the Olympics should be reconsidered even at this late date, on the ground that the games have now been totally corrupted by a politicization that reduces this international sports contest to a mockery of the Olympic ideal and to a mere sideshow in the ideological wars.

U.S. Blacks Eye Walkout

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The Sacramento Bee reported today that American black athletes will be asked to withdraw from the Olympic games by a group of African nations opposing participation by New Zealand.

Quoting an anonymous informed source, the Bee said the Supreme Council for Sports in Africa will approach American athletes "individually in an attempt to promote a pullout."

In a story by Don Bloom, the Bee said American blacks will be asked to join African nations in protesting a tour by an all-black New Zealand rugby team to South Africa.

Dr. Abraham Ordia, president of the council, posed the threat of a black boycott of the games unless New Zealand is barred from the games by the International Olympic Committee.

Ordia accused New Zealand of supporting apartheid in sport even if it did not support apartheid in general.

New Zealand Foreign Minister Brian Talboys denied the charge, declaring his nation is "totally opposed to apartheid in sport and in every other social activity."

Luck 'Retires' From Browns

By DAVE SITTLER

Time and luck, two items Terry Luck chased his entire football career at Nebraska, have once again eluded the popular former Cornhusker.

After suffering a knee strain during workouts Saturday with the Cleveland Browns, Luck saw his fling at professional football end Monday when the Browns' trainer informed him the knee would need at least a week's rest.

After discussing his chances of making the squad with Browns coach Forrest Gregg after missing a week of practice, Luck decided to permit the Browns to place him on the retirement waiver list and accepted an assistant coaching position at North Texas State.

It was a tough decision for the gritty Luck, who overcame the adversity of several knee operations to co-captain and quarterback the Huskers last season.

"I'm no quitter, never have been," Luck said Tuesday morning after arriving in Lincoln late Monday from the Browns training camp in Kent, Ohio.

"They (Cleveland) couldn't cut me while I was injured," continued Luck, who signed a free-agent contract with Cleveland. "But coach Gregg said my chances of making the team wouldn't be too good if I had to miss a week of practice."

Ironically, Luck injured his right knee during a non-contact drill Saturday. It was the same type of drill when he injured the knee for the first time five years ago as a Nebraska sophomore after a brilliant freshman campaign.

The Cleveland workout was conducted during a rainstorm, and Luck strained his knee when he caught his cleats in the mud while spinning around to make a handoff.

"I just strained a ligament and it would have been alright with some rest," Luck said. "I had a very expensive physical when I first went to camp and the doctors said my knee was fine. I had a little swelling but that was normal."

Sitting in his Lincoln apartment, Luck admitted he was "in sort of a daze at the moment.

"One day I'm busting my butt to make the team and it looks like I had a good shot and the next day I'm sitting at home doing nothing."

Luck said he planned to start packing his belongings, make the rounds to say a few goodbyes and then head for Denton, Tex., where he will coach the quarterbacks and receivers for Coach Hayden Fry at North Texas State.

One of the major disappointments by the change of events Luck said was that he would not be able to return to Lincoln with the Browns when Cleveland faces Baltimore in an exhibition game at Memorial Stadium, July 31.

"I think a lot of people were looking forward to seeing some of us guys come back," Luck said. "I know I was really looking forward to it."

Professional football isn't completely out of the question for Luck. The retirement waiver means the Browns have the rights to him if he decides to give it a shot next season.

He was one of eight quarterbacks in the Browns camp, and coaches said he was in the battle for a reserve role.

"I don't know if I'll try again or not," Luck said. "It depends on what happens. Maybe it isn't in the cards for me to play football.

"Pro football is a cold business, I certainly found that out. Everyone has the talent to make it or they wouldn't be in camp. You just need a lot of luck."

Unfortunately, when it comes to athletics, luck has only been part of Terry Luck's name lately.

Bowlers' Hopes On The Ball

By BOB MOYER

It doesn't have to cost much to bowl, just two bits to rent shoes.

But three local experts on the game — Jim Dill, Rodger Florom and Max Jensen — agree anyone seeking to become even an average bowler (158 average for men, 132 for women) should head to a qualified bowling ball driller and get a ball that fits.

"It's very unlikely you can achieve even an average average without a ball that fits properly," notes Jensen. "158 is not a bad average."

Three questions need to be answered in acquiring a bowling ball.

The first is whether to get a plastic ball or a rubber one.

In recent years plastic bowling balls have come into prominence. One reason is purely cosmetic — they come in varied colors which are more appealing to the eye than the drab black typical of rubber balls.

The other reason is more practical. Plastic bowling balls will skid better on an oily condition, giving the ball more power in the pocket.

Rubber bowling balls hook more uniformly. Also, some bowlers feel they are easier to grip than plastic bowling balls.

However, Dill, Florom and Jensen all agreed that the beginner bowler will not discern a notable difference between bowling balls because they have not yet achieved the skill and consistency to take advantage of the rather subtle differences in action.

The second problem is determining a grip. The three basic grips are conventional, fingertip and semi-fingertip.

The conventional grip (with room for the entire finger) gives more accuracy, while the fingertip (with room only for the fingers to the first knuckle joint) should yield more revolutions and consequently, hitting power. The fingertip, however, is harder to control. The semi-fingertip is in between — less control than a conventional, but more revolutions. The semi-fingertip does not allow the entire finger in the ball, but rather past the first knuckle joint.

The trio of experts, wholeheartedly agreed a beginner bowler should start out with a conventional grip. "I averaged 180 with a conventional before I went to a fingertip," notes Dill.

The third problem is deciding what weight ball to get. The trio agreed most men should bowl with no less than a 15-pound ball and more likely a 16-pound ball.

"With women it is much more difficult to determine what is the correct weight," notes Dill. "As a rule women are much better off starting out with a lighter ball and gradually moving up to higher weights."

As far as other equipment goes, all three agreed leather shoes are the best bet. "They are cooler and longer-lasting," notes Dill.

Many bowlers also use bowling gloves.

"They can't do you any harm," notes Jensen. "They are a valuable training aid," adds Dill.

The bowling glove can help by correctly positioning the hand, keeping it stationary during delivery.

However, there are several bowling gloves on the market which are less than adequate for their purpose. "Be sure to get one with substantiality," warns Jensen.

All three men stressed going to someone who knows what they are talking about when buying equipment.

Football Title To Kearney?

Kearney (UPI) — A football preview magazine, "Popular Sports Kickoff-1976," predicts Kearney State College will win the title in the newly formed Central States Intercollegiate Conference.

Kearney State won the Nebraska College Conference championship last year for the fourth consecutive year and finished 3-1 in the former Great Plains Conference, out of which the Central States League was formed.

Schools in the new conference include Fort Hays State, Pittsburg State, Emporia State and Washburn, all in Kansas; Missouri Southern and Missouri Western; Wayne State and Kearney State.

Misty, Val's Post Triumphs

Misty Lounge and Valentino's scored Tuesday night victories in the Lincoln AAA Softball League at Ballard Field.

Mel Knopp's two-run double in the sixth inning highlighted a four-run outburst as Misty Lounge stopped Citizens State Bank, 5-2. Winning pitcher Ken Grosenbach allowed only three hits.

A two-run single by Scott Roby and a one-run single by Al Schmidt accounted for three runs in the seventh inning as Valentino's nipped Falstaff, 3-2. Tom Novak swatted a two-run inside-the-park homer for Falstaff's only runs.

Ruth, Aaron Homer Honored

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Babe Ruth, whose herculean home run feats made his name synonymous with baseball, Tuesday was named the game's most memorable personality and Hank Aaron's 715th career homer, which broke Ruth's record, was voted the most memorable moment.

In a nationwide vote of the media and selected baseball officials conducted by the baseball commissioner's office, Ruth easily beat out Casey Stengel as the most memorable personality, while Aaron's home run was judged most memorable moment over Bobby Thomson's homer which won the 1951 National League playoffs for the New York Giants.

Ruth received 1,176 votes from the 2,391 persons who participated in the voting, with Stengel, the colorful ex-manager, finishing a distant second with 370 votes. Dizzy Dean, the eccentric pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals during the 1930s, was third with 175 votes, followed by former star centerfielder Willie Mays with 68 and ex-Boston Red Sox slugger Ted Williams with 65.

Mrs. Julia Stevens, Ruth's daughter, accepted the award from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn at a luncheon prior to Tuesday night's All-Star game and said she never looked at her father as an idol who was loved by millions.

"I don't associate my father as much with baseball as I do with home life," said Mrs. Stevens. "He was a wonderful father — devoted and very strict. To this day I miss him and I have marvelous memories. He would take me bowling, and I walked around the golf courses with him. We attended hockey matches and football games."

From his humble beginnings in a Baltimore home for boys, Ruth became the greatest sports hero in American history. Besides his home runs, he had an unmatched ability to bring fans into the ball park, plus a great affection for children which made his name familiar to people all over the world.

Ruth's greatest years were spent with the New York Yankeees, and during his career he hit .300 or better 17 times, drove in 100 or more runs in 13 seasons, and led the American League in home runs on 12 occasions.

His 714 career homers was a record baseball historians thought would never be broken, but Aaron topped the mark by hitting his 715th off Los Angeles pitcher Al Downing at Atlanta Stadium on April 8, 1974. Aaron, who is still active as a player with the Milwaukee Brewers, now has 754 homers, including nine this season.

Aaron, oddly, doesn't consider his 715th homer the most memorable moment of his own 23-year career.

"Hitting No. 715 was a great moment for me, but I was glad when it was over and the press could focus their attention on somebody else," he said. "I would say the home run I hit to clinch the 1957 pennant for the Milwaukee Braves was my most exciting moment."

The overall balloting for most memorable moment was close. Aaron's homer received 485 votes, while Thomson's blast was named on 419 ballots. Don Larsen's perfect game in the 1956 World Series for the New York Yankees was third with 313 votes.

Ruth's "called shot" home run in the 1932 World series against the Chicago Cubs was fourth and Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak in 1941 was fifth.

Last month DiMaggio's hitting streak was named most memorable moment in American League history, Aaron's home run the most memorable in National League history, and Larsen's perfect game the most memorable in World Series and All-Star competition.

Chiefs Begin

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Kansas City Chiefs opened their training camp Tuesday with the club's veteran players checking in for pre-season drills.

All the veterans passed physical examination, encouraging head coach Paul Wiggin. Eleven players checking in required surgery during the off-season because of injuries suffered last season.

"There are still two or three question marks," said Wiggin. "But overall it's encouraging to see the people who were hurt working so hard to get back into shape to be ready to play."

Wiggin still is concerned about defensive lineman Bob Maddox, offensive lineman Roger Bernhardt and linebacker Ken Avery. All had surgery to repair injured knees.

Wiggin said that quarterback Mike Livingston, offensive lineman Tom Condon and defensive back Jim Marsalis, all starters, appear to be completely recovered from off-season surgery.

The veterans will go through sprints and runs on Wednesday before beginning two-a-day practices on Thursday. The rookies, free agents and a few second-year players have been in camp since Saturday.

Second-year tight end Walter White was hospitalized Monday night suffering from heat fatigue, but is expected to return to camp Wednesday.

Ruth, Aaron Homer Honored

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Babe Ruth, whose herculean home run feats made his name synonymous with baseball, Tuesday was named the game's most memorable personality and Hank Aaron's 715th career homer, which broke Ruth's record, was voted the most memorable moment.

In a nationwide vote of the media and selected baseball officials conducted by the baseball commissioner's office, Ruth easily beat out Casey Stengel as the most memorable personality, while Aaron's home run was judged most memorable moment over Bobby Thomson's homer which won the 1951 National League playoffs for the New York Giants.

Ruth received 1,176 votes from the 2,391 persons who participated in the voting, with Stengel, the colorful ex-manager, finishing a distant second with 370 votes. Dizzy Dean, the eccentric pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals during the 1930s, was third with 175 votes, followed by former star centerfielder Willie Mays with 68 and ex-Boston Red Sox slugger Ted Williams with 65.

Mrs. Julia Stevens, Ruth's daughter, accepted the award from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn at a luncheon prior to Tuesday night's All-Star game and said she never looked at her father as an idol who was loved by millions.

"I don't associate my father as much with baseball as I do with home life," said Mrs. Stevens. "He was a wonderful father — devoted and very strict. To this day I miss him and I have marvelous memories. He would take me bowling, and I walked around the golf courses with him. We attended hockey matches and football games."

From his humble beginnings in a Baltimore home for boys, Ruth became the greatest sports hero in American history. Besides his home runs, he had an unmatched ability to bring fans into the ball park, plus a great affection for children which made his name familiar to people all over the world.

Ruth's greatest years were spent with the New York Yankeees, and during his career he hit .300 or better 17 times, drove in 100 or more runs in 13 seasons, and led the American League in home runs on 12 occasions.

His 714 career homers was a record baseball historians thought would never be broken, but Aaron topped the mark by hitting his 715th off Los Angeles pitcher Al Downing at Atlanta Stadium on April 8, 1974. Aaron, who is still active as a player with the Milwaukee Brewers, now has 754 homers, including nine this season.

Aaron, oddly, doesn't consider his 715th homer the most memorable moment of his own 23-year career.

"Hitting No. 715 was a great moment for me, but I was glad when it was over and the press could focus their attention on somebody else," he said. "I would say the home run I hit to clinch the 1957 pennant for the Milwaukee Braves was my most exciting moment."

The overall balloting for most memorable moment was close. Aaron's homer received 485 votes, while Thomson's blast was named on 419 ballots. Don Larsen's perfect game in the 1956 World Series for the New York Yankees was third with 313 votes.

Ruth's "called shot" home run in the 1932 World series against the Chicago Cubs was fourth and Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak in 1941 was fifth.

Last month DiMaggio's hitting streak was named most memorable moment in American League history, Aaron's home run the most memorable in National League history, and Larsen's perfect game the most memorable in World Series and All-Star competition.

Will Simpson Turn Off Juice?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O. J. Simpson has said he intends to play football just one more year, but the Buffalo Bills running back indicated Tuesday that some factors—like being traded to the Los Angeles Rams and playing on a championship team—could change his decision.

He emphasized, however, in the wake of renewed interest by Buffalo to trade him, that he currently plans to end his football career after this season.

"Sure, it could make a difference if I were playing in Los Angeles with a championship team. But I said five years ago that I was just going to play five more years. That's still my plan, but a lot of things could change that."

Bills owner Ralph Wilson Jr. said Tuesday that they would ask Simpson if he will allow them to try to negotiate a trade for him with teams in New York, Washington, Miami or other "so-called glamor" National Football League cities.

Wilson, in a statement read by Buffalo Coach Lou Saban, at the Bills camp in Niagara Falls, N.Y. said: "Limited in our trading scope, we have not been successful to date, gaining players even closely approximating Simpson's value. We promised O.J. . . that we would make every effort to trade him to a West Coast team and this we have done. But it would help immeasurably if we could broaden the market.

"It would help Simpson and it would help the Bills, who would like the new players in camp as quickly as possible. And keeping O.J. in the game would help football."

But Simpson said he had no interest in going to a new team strictly because it was in a "glamor" city, instead saying he wants to play for the Rams.

"I want to play in Los Angeles so I can be close to my family," Simpson said. "Being traded to a glamorous city has nothing to do with it. I wouldn't ask to be traded if I didn't want to play on the West Coast."

Simpson was asked if he thought expressing his desire to play just one more season hurt his chances of playing in Los Angeles.

"I wanted to be honest about it," he replied, "so I told the Rams my decision. I hear Carroll Rosenbloom has said he doesn't want to tear up the team to get me.

"I don't think it would tear up the team, I think a trade could be made that would benefit both Buffalo and Los Angeles. The Rams do have players who could help the Bills."

Rosenbloom, however, had said earlier that he considered it virtually impossible — in view of Buffalo's trade demands for Simpson — that the Rams would acquire him.

O.J.: To Rams

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Despite repeated denials by management of the Los Angeles Rams, O.J. Simpson predicted Tuesday that he'll play for the Rams this season to close out his career and take them to their first Superbowl.

"It's hard to predict and speculate when I don't know where I'll be playing," the Buffalo Bills' running back told a news conference. "But I predict that I'll be playing with the Rams.

"I predict that we'll win our division and I predict that with a little luck and no injuries, we'll go to the Super Bowl."

The Rams, currently in their second day of summer camp at nearby Cal State Fullerton, had no comment on Simpson's optimistic predictions.

Eighth-seeded Hans Kary of Austria was the only ranked player to be ousted, bowing to Czechoslovakia's Vladimir Zedniket 6-3, 6-7, 6-4.

Sixth-seeded Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif. beat Hans Ploetz of West Germany 6-4, 6-1 in a first-round match.

Officials Eyeing Platte Refuge

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP)—The Nebraska Association of Resource Districts approved two resolutions Tuesday which deal with the Platte River National Wildlife Refuge before adjourning a two-day meeting.

They asked that the NARD seek introduction and support of a legislative bill repealing the 1929 blanket authority given for establishment of wildlife refuges in Nebraska.

In the same resolution, the group asked for a bill that would require a statewide public hearing within the area being proposed for a refuge or refuges.

The board of directors, in a second resolution, expressed its opposition to the Platte River Wildlife Refuge as currently proposed.

George Kleen, president, said the NARD will offer its assistance in future planning and investigation by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service on any proposals regarding Nebraska.

He said they are not against wildlife habitat programs, as there are some 13 such programs being conducted in the state presently by the NARD's.

He said the proper place for these programs to begin is at the local level and-or subdivisions of government and not with the federal government.

Federal officials Monday assured south central Nebraska residents no land would be condemned for the proposed Platte River Refuge.

Rolfe Wallenstrom of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Pierre, S. D., said the service has no intention of using its power of eminent domain in the purchase of about 13,000 acres.

He also said the plans for the refuge will not interfere with present land use.

Wallenstrom said easements would be requested from farmers to disallow changes on the land that would adversely affect or modify the migratory waterfowl habitat.

He said the landowners would get paid and receive some tax benefits.

The NARD board will meet Wednesday to take a position on the refuge.

Wallenstrom said the federal government is trying to protect the region by keeping out gravel pits, housing developments, parking lots airports, broadcasting towers and electrical transmission lines.

On another matter, Steve Smith, a Nebraska assistant attorney general, said the state is prepared to go the U.S. Supreme Court to protect its water rights from a power plant and dam project in Wyoming.

The dispute involves a project near Wheatland, Wyo., planned by the Missouri Basin Electric Power Cooperative on the Laramie River, a tributary of the North Platte.

Nebraska fears the dam would cut the flow of the river to Lake McConaughy

Will Simpson Turn Off Juice?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O. J. Simpson has said he intends to play football just one more year, but the Buffalo Bills running back indicated Tuesday that some factors—like being traded to the Los Angeles Rams and playing on a championship team—could change his decision.

He emphasized, however, in the wake of renewed interest by Buffalo to trade him, that he currently plans to end his football career after this season.

"Sure, it could make a difference if I were playing in Los Angeles with a championship team. But I said five years ago that I was just going to play five more years. That's still my plan, but a lot of things could change that."

Bills owner Ralph Wilson Jr. said Tuesday that they would ask Simpson if he will allow them to try to negotiate a trade for him with teams in New York, Washington, Miami or other "so-called glamor" National Football League cities.

Wilson, in a statement read by Buffalo Coach Lou Saban, at the Bills camp in Niagara Falls, N.Y. said: "Limited in our trading scope, we have not been successful to date, gaining players even closely approximating Simpson's value. We promised O.J. . . that we would make every effort to trade him to a West Coast team and this we have done. But it would help immeasurably if we could broaden the market.

"It would help Simpson and it would help the Bills, who would like the new players in camp as quickly as possible. And keeping O.J. in the game would help football."

But Simpson said he had no interest in going to a new team strictly because it was in a "glamor" city, instead saying he wants to play for the Rams.

"I want to play in Los Angeles so I can be close to my family," Simpson said. "Being traded to a glamorous city has nothing to do with it. I wouldn't ask to be traded if I didn't want to play on the West Coast."

Simpson was asked if he thought expressing his desire to play just one more season hurt his chances of playing in Los Angeles.

"I wanted to be honest about it," he replied, "so I told the Rams my decision. I hear Carroll Rosenbloom has said he doesn't want to tear up the team to get me.

"I don't think it would tear up the team, I think a trade could be made that would benefit both Buffalo and Los Angeles. The Rams do have players who could help the Bills."

Rosenbloom, however, had said earlier that he considered it virtually impossible — in view of Buffalo's trade demands for Simpson — that the Rams would acquire him.

O.J.: To Rams

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Despite repeated denials by management of the Los Angeles Rams, O.J. Simpson predicted Tuesday that he'll play for the Rams this season to close out his career and take them to their first Superbowl.

"It's hard to predict and speculate when I don't know where I'll be playing," the Buffalo Bills' running back told a news conference. "But I predict that I'll be playing with the Rams.

"I predict that we'll win our division and I predict that with a little luck and no injuries, we'll go to the Super Bowl."

Ashe Rallies To Topple Szoeke

KITZBUEHEL, Austria (AP) — Top-seeded American Arthur Ashe started slowly but rallied to defeat Hungary's Peter Szoeke 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 Tuesday in a second-round match of a $75,000 tennis tournament.

Eighth-seeded Hans Kary of Austria was the only ranked player to be ousted, bowing to Czechoslovakia's Vladimir Zedniket 6-3, 6-7, 6-4.

No. 3 seed Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia beat Pavel Hutka of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-3, No. 5 seed Francois Jauffret of France defeated Jorge Andrew of Venezuela 7-5, 6-4 and No. 7 seed Ivan Molina of Colombia beat Szabolcs Baranyi of Hungary 6-4, 6-2. All were second-round matches.

Sixth-seeded Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif. beat Hans Ploetz of West Germany 6-4, 6-1 in a first-round match.

Officials Eyeing Platte Refuge

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP)—The Nebraska Association of Resource Districts approved two resolutions Tuesday which deal with the Platte River National Wildlife Refuge before adjourning a two-day meeting.

They asked that the NARD seek introduction and support of a legislative bill repealing the 1929 blanket authority given for establishment of wildlife refuges in Nebraska.

In the same resolution, the group asked for a bill that would require a statewide public hearing within the area being proposed for a refuge or refuges.

The board of directors, in a second resolution, expressed its opposition to the Platte River Wildlife Refuge as currently proposed.

George Kleen, president, said the NARD will offer its assistance in future planning and investigation by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service on any proposals regarding Nebraska.

He said they are not against wildlife habitat programs, as there are some 13 such programs being conducted in the state presently by the NARD's.

He said the proper place for these programs to begin is at the local level and-or subdivisions of government and not with the federal government.

Federal officials Monday assured south central Nebraska residents no land would be condemned for the proposed Platte River Refuge.

Rolfe Wallenstrom of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Pierre, S. D., said the service has no intention of using its power of eminent domain in the purchase of about 13,000 acres.

He also said the plans for the refuge will not interfere with present land use.

Wallenstrom said easements would be requested from farmers to disallow changes on the land that would adversely affect or modify the migratory waterfowl habitat.

He said the landowners would get paid and receive some tax benefits.

The NARD board will meet Wednesday to take a position on the refuge.

Wallenstrom said the federal government is trying to protect the region by keeping out gravel pits, housing developments, parking lots airports, broadcasting towers and electrical transmission lines.

On another matter, Steve Smith, a Nebraska assistant attorney general, said the state is prepared to go the U.S. Supreme Court to protect its water rights from a power plant and dam project in Wyoming.

The dispute involves a project near Wheatland, Wyo., planned by the Missouri Basin Electric Power Cooperative on the Laramie River, a tributary of the North Platte.

Nebraska fears the dam would cut the flow of the river to Lake McConaughy

Bishop Finds State Open To Change

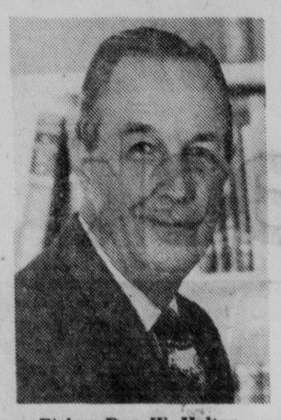
By HARRY JACKSON
Star Staff Writer

United Methodists in Nebraska respond to "real idealism, which isn't common," said Bishop Don W. Holter, who is ending his four-year term as head of the Nebraska Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Holter made his remarks at the eight-state South Central Jurisdiction Conference of the United Methodist Church being held this week in Lincoln.

He currently holds one of four bishop's seats chosen by 360 delegates. Holter, at 71, has passed the UMC mandatory 70-year-old retirement age for bishops.



Bishop Don W. Holter

"Nebraska is a conservative state, but it's open to innovation," he said. "We've had programs here which were innovative and were well accepted."

He particularly was impressed with the involvement of women in church administration.

"The women of this state — United Methodist Women — gave more money to missions than any other conference in this jurisdiction," Holter boasted. "And there are other conferences richer than we are."

"I truly feel that one of the most exceptional things about Nebraska is the leadership of women," he said.

Church business wasn't Holter's only passion in Nebraska.

"And I'll have to admit I like football in Nebraska," Holter said. "I got two season tickets — I'm not going to tell you how I got them — and I'll be back for a few key games. I will admit that I didn't get them as a bishop."

He and his wife, Isabelle, will be returning to Kansas City, Kan., but don't have specific plans.

Holter said, "I'm not going to do anything this coming academic year," even though he's been offered professorships and a college presidency.

Holter came to Nebraska from the presidency of St. Paul's School of Theology in Kansas City, Mo.

U.S. Influence Sought

NEW YORK (AP) — The Africa Committee of the National Council of Churches, citing the recent South African violence as highlighting the "brutally oppressive apartheid system," has urged the U.S. government to use diplomatic pressure to get South Africa to abandon its racial-separation policy.

Mary Blazek To Appear In Court Aug. 5

A preliminary hearing will be held in Lancaster County Court Aug. 5 on charges that Mary Blazek plotted to arrange Wesley Peery's escape from prison last month.

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront set the date for a hearing Tuesday.

Mrs. Blazek, who lived with Peery, is charged with conspiracy in that incident and also with lying to the jury during Peery's murder trial in April.

Peery was convicted of first degree murder in that case and has been sentenced to die in the electric chair for killing coin dealer Marianne Mitzner one year ago.

Judge Chuvront reset bond at $5,000.

Board Meets Hastily, Settles Road Mystery

Much was missing at the Lancaster County Board meeting Tuesday afternoon — two commissioners and one road.

"I feel like the Lone Ranger," said Commissioner Robert Colin, the only board member to appear for the start of the meeting at 1:30.

Chairman Bruce Hamilton is a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in New York City this week and Jan Gauger was up one flight of stairs serving on a jury.

But at 3 p.m. Mrs. Gauger hurried downstairs and during a 20-minute juror's recess the two commissioners rushed through a short agenda and cleared up the case of the missing road.

The case began some time ago when Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Snook wanted to build a home on land they owned near Wagon Train Lake.

Planning Department employes told them their lot did not meet county requirements because it did not face a road. No road, no building permit, the planners said.

The Snooks, who were sure that the paving running past their property was a road, continued to battle bureaucracy for a permit. And finally the county attorney's office was called in.

The road does exist in fact; the road does not exist on any maps in the planning department, deputy attorney Mike Heavican explained Tuesday.

"I think it's a buildable lot," he said.

The commissioners agreed and approved the building permit.

Mrs. Gauger rushed off to jury duty. Colin shook his head and said, "Boy, this is the most unorganized day I've seen in a long time."

Indian Who Was Denied Parole Charges Authorities With Bias

An inmate at the Nebraska Penal Complex filed suit against the State Parole Board Monday to get a new hearing on his request for a parole.

Everett L. Blue Bird said the Parole Board denied him a parole on April 8, 1976, even though he was eligible.

The board's decision was "arbitrary and capricious," he claimed, the result of "ill-disguised racial discrimination" because he is an Indian. The suit was filed in Lancaster District Court.

Blue Bird was convicted in Sheridan County District Court of forgery and sentenced to serve three years in the penitentiary. He has served one year, four months and 16 days of his sentence, not counting "good time" he has earned for parole purposes.

Blue Bird claims in the lawsuit that other violators charged with similar offenses have been paroled within six months.

He asked the court to order the board to hold a new hearing.

For the first half of 1976, earnings were $43.2 million, $2.16 a share, on sales of $970.2 million, compared with last year's first half earnings of $64.5 million, $3.29 a share, on sales of $837.9 million.

Amateur Hour Host Ted Mack, 72, Dies In New York

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Ted Mack, the low-keyed master of ceremonies who made the Original Amateur Hour an institution on television for 22 years, is dead at 72.

Mack, whose home was in Irvington, just north of New York City, died Monday afternoon in Phelps Memorial Hospital. A private memorial service was conducted Tuesday.

Dr. Robert Wren, a physician and friend of Mack, said Mack was hospitalized over the weekend because of breathing difficulty. He said death was due to heart failure.

The amateur hour began as a radio show in the 1930s under the late Major Bowes, who hired Mack as a talent scout. After Bowes' death, Mack took over the show and in 1948 led it into the infant television field, where it was to flourish on four networks.

The show lasted until 1970 and was the oldest entertainment program on television when the combination of pro football and failure to attract new viewers doomed it. It had a steady audience estimated at 10 million when the last show aired on CBS.

Over the years Mack and his associates screened young hopefuls whose numbers ran to more than a million and whose talents ranged from sublime to kooky.

When a young Ann-Margaret appeared on the show, Mack recalled recently, the future movie star "got beat by a kid from Mexico City who played a tune on a laurel leaf."

In the early days of the radio show, an unknown youngster from New Jersey appeared with a group called the Hoboken Four. He was Frank Sinatra.

Other names from among the thousands of unknowns and amateurs given a boost by the show include opera stars Robert Merrill, Regina Resnick, Maria Callas and Beverly Sills, dancer Vera-Ellen, singers Pat Boone and Jerry Vale and comic Jack Carter.

But many more blossomed only for the moment of their appearance on the show and ever after practiced their art out of the public eye — musicians who drew tunes from kitchen utensils, saws or almost anything that came to hand. Also furiously busy one-man bands, baton twirlers, mimics and bellringers, and the occasional unfortunate who got booed out of the spotlight.

No matter what the act, Mack was a perfect host, introducing them with warmth, a gentle smile and sympathy.

He once gave this advice to parents: "Too often a child is forced to practice and perform because Mama is ambitious. The burning desire to get to the top must be his — not a reflection of your own hopes."

Mack's own burning desire as a young man was to make music, which led him to give up law studies at Denver University.

Born William Edward Maguiness in Greeley, Colo., he changed his name to Ted Mack when he joined the Ben Pollack orchestra in 1926, playing saxophone and clarinet.

He was in fast company. Other band members included Glenn Miller, Jack Teagarden, Bix Biederbecke and Red Nichols. When Mack left a year later, Benny Goodman signed on, leading Mack to say in later years, "They got a better clarinet player."

After leading a pit band and emceeing vaudeville in Los Angeles for a year, he organized his own band, touring until the Depression dried up playing dates.

He then became a conductor at the MGM movie studio, where Bowes spotted him and hired him in 1935 to be his principal assistant and scout for the radio amateur hour.

Mack put the show on television first with the old Dumont network in January 1948. The program later moved to NBC-TV and ABC. Its final 12 years were with CBS.

After leaving the air, Mack took to the college lecture circuit and hosted locally arranged amateur shows. He also made occasional guest appearances on telvision.

He is survived by his widow, the former Marguerite Overholt. They celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last March.

Actress O'Brien Has Baby

Los Angeles (UPI) — Actress Margaret O'Brien gave birth to a 7-pound, 14-ounce girl Tuesday morning at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

The baby, named Mara Tolene, was born at 1:58 a.m. CDT and measured 20½ inches in length.

This is the first child for Miss O'Brien.

T. Wynette Will Warble For Fords

Nashville, Tenn. (UPI) — Tammy Wynette will sing for President and Mrs. Gerald Ford July 20, in what is billed as the first White House performance ever by a female country recording star.

Miss Wynette and Glen Campbell will be the country performers in a "Tribute to Country Music" program, which will also include jazz and pop entertainers.

Nashville CBS publicity head Mary Ann McCready, said the record company has been working for months to bring country music's "First Lady" and First Lady Betty Ford together for a performance.

The singer is to be married to Nashville real estate executive Michael Tomlin on Sunday, and reportedly will have to postpone her honeymoon because of the White House appearance.

Granny, 53, Wins 86-Hour Rockout

Hampshire, Ill. (AP) — Eighty-six hours after she sat down in her favorite rocking chair and started rocking, Bertha Struck won the $200 first prize for persistence.

The 53-year-old grandmother outlasted Art Veera, 25, machinist from Elgin, who nodded off when he reached over in his rocking chair to change a song on the record player designed to keep him awake.

Cheers and applause rang out from about 75 friends and spectators on hand as Mrs. Struck was declared winner at 3 a.m. Monday in this small community west of Chicago.

The rockout, prelude to this town's bicentennial celebration, began at noon Thursday with 17 contestants rocking on the blocked-off main street.

"The hardest thing was having only seven minutes to take care of your needs, get into clean clothes and splash some water on your face," said Mrs. Struck. "Aside from that, I found the whole thing rather pleasant."

Bishop Finds State Open To Change

By HARRY JACKSON
Star Staff Writer

United Methodists in Nebraska respond to "real idealism, which isn't common," said Bishop Don W. Holter, who is ending his four-year term as head of the Nebraska Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Holter made his remarks at the eight-state South Central Jurisdiction Conference of the United Methodist Church being held this week in Lincoln.

He currently holds one of four bishop's seats chosen by 360 delegates. Holter, at 71, has passed the UMC mandatory 70-year-old retirement age for bishops.

Bishop Don W. Holter

"Nebraska is a conservative state, but it's open to innovation," he said. "We've had programs here which were innovative and were well accepted."

He particularly was impressed with the involvement of women in church administration.

"The women of this state — United Methodist Women — gave more money to missions than any other conference in this jurisdiction," Holter boasted. "And there are other conferences richer than we are."

"I truly feel that one of the most exceptional things about Nebraska is the leadership of women," he said.

Church business wasn't Holter's only passion in Nebraska.

"And I'll have to admit I like football in Nebraska," Holter said. "I got two season tickets — I'm not going to tell you how I got them — and I'll be back for a few key games. I will admit that I didn't get them as a bishop."

He and his wife, Isabelle, will be returning to Kansas City, Kan., but don't have specific plans.

Holter said, "I'm not going to do anything this coming academic year," even though he's been offered professorships and a college presidency.

Holter came to Nebraska from the presidency of St. Paul's School of Theology in Kansas City, Mo.

U.S. Influence Sought

NEW YORK (AP) — The Africa Committee of the National Council of Churches, citing the recent South African violence as highlighting the "brutally oppressive apartheid system," has urged the U.S. government to use diplomatic pressure to get South Africa to abandon its racial-separation policy.

Mary Blazek To Appear In Court Aug. 5

A preliminary hearing will be held in Lancaster County Court Aug. 5 on charges that Mary Blazek plotted to arrange Wesley Peery's escape from prison last month.

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront set the date for a hearing Tuesday.

Mrs. Blazek, who lived with Peery, is charged with conspiracy in that incident and also with lying to the jury during Peery's murder trial in April.

Peery was convicted of first degree murder in that case and has been sentenced to die in the electric chair for killing coin dealer Marianne Mitzner one year ago.

Judge Chuvront reset bond at $5,000.

Board Meets Hastily, Settles Road Mystery

Much was missing at the Lancaster County Board meeting Tuesday afternoon — two commissioners and one road.

"I feel like the Lone Ranger," said Commissioner Robert Colin, the only board member to appear for the start of the meeting at 1:30.

Chairman Bruce Hamilton is a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in New York City this week and Jan Gauger was up one flight of stairs serving on a jury.

But at 3 p.m. Mrs. Gauger hurried downstairs and during a 20-minute juror's recess the two commissioners rushed through a short agenda and cleared up the case of the missing road.

The case began some time ago when Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Snook wanted to build a home on land they owned near Wagon Train Lake.

Planning Department employes told them their lot did not meet county requirements because it did not face a road. No road, no building permit, the planners said.

The Snooks, who were sure that the paving running past their property was a road, continued to battle bureaucracy for a permit. And finally the county attorney's office was called in.

The road does exist in fact; the road does not exist on any maps in the planning department, deputy attorney Mike Heavican explained Tuesday.

"I think it's a buildable lot," he said.

The commissioners agreed and approved the building permit.

Mrs. Gauger rushed off to jury duty. Colin shook his head and said, "Boy, this is the most unorganized day I've seen in a long time."

Indian Who Was Denied Parole Charges Authorities With Bias

An inmate at the Nebraska Penal Complex filed suit against the State Parole Board Monday to get a new hearing on his request for a parole.

Everett L. Blue Bird said the Parole Board denied him a parole on April 8, 1976, even though he was eligible.

The board's decision was "arbitrary and capricious," he claimed, the result of "ill-disguised racial discrimination" because he is an Indian. The suit was filed in Lancaster District Court.

Blue Bird was convicted in Sheridan County District Court of forgery and sentenced to serve three years in the penitentiary. He has served one year, four months and 16 days of his sentence, not counting "good time" he has earned for parole purposes.

Blue Bird claims in the lawsuit that other violators charged with similar offenses have been paroled within six months.

He asked the court to order the board to hold a new hearing.

Tipplers In India's Capital Not Crying In Their Beer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India's announced push toward national prohibition is nine months old, but tipplers in the Indian capital aren't exactly crying in their beer.

Buses and bridges here are festooned with messages such as "Help Save the Poor — support Prohibition," but the federally-controlled city administration has ordered beer prices cut and the city's quota of retail liquor stores almost doubled.

The progovernment National Herald commented: "Prohibition is a lost cause in this country. Encouragement of liquor trade and efforts to bring about prohibition cannot go on simultaneously."

No groundswell of teetotalling fervor has emerged from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's 12-point prohibition program.

Nor has the government been able to consistenly enforce the program's recommended ban on liquor advertising and on Indians drinking in public places.

In May the state governments committed themselves to implementing federal prohibition guidelines, including one curtailing the issuance of new retail liquor licenses.

But that was before the New Delhi administration began auctioning off 22 new liquor licenses for a minimum of 50,000 rupees (about $6,000) each.

"If the capital of the country fails to set a good example, how will the rest of the country be serious about Prohibition?" asked the Herald, which favors Mrs. Gandhi's measures.

If the current drive to encourage teetotalling falls flat, it won't be the first such failure in India.

In ancient time, some Indian laws rewarded imbibers with a hot iron to the forehead and the medieval Emperor Aurangzeb convinced his subjects to emulate his abstentious ways by outlawing alcohol in Delhi.

Rhodesia's Guerrillas Curtail Tourist Trade

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Tourism in Rhodesia has suffered a severe blow this year because of mounting offensives by black nationalist guerrillas.

The number of vacationers visiting this land of mountains, lakes, trout streams, ancient ruins, game parks and the Victoria falls has fallen sharply in the first five months of the year, accordining to official figures.

While an average of 30,000 foreigners a month spent vacations in Rhodesia in 1975 only 12,500 a month were coming here this year, the Central Digest of Statistics reports.

The number of visiting businessmen, too dipped by 25 per cent in the first five months of this year from 9,215 in that period last year to 6,927, according to the digest.

The number of vacationers fell from 95,177 in the first five months of 1975 to 69,830 this year, the digest says.

May saw the lowest number of tourists in a decade. Only 11,209 people visited Rhodesia in May — the month that followed the Easter Sunday slaying by guerrillas of three visiting vacationers on the main Rhodesia-South African highway.

Since then, amid intensified guerrilla offensives, tourist hotels have been threatened with shutdown as people shy away from traditional vacation spots in the so-called operational zones.

One luxury hotel has closed its doors in the Victoria Falls area and another has been closed down in the eastern highlands — scene of the latest penetration by the guerrillas.

Attacks by Mozambique-based insurgents on major highways and railroads have forced the authorities to run armed convoys for travelers and limit train traffic to daylight only.

One attack on a gas station was only 60 miles east of the Rhodesian capital, on a main road.

The offensives were stepped up after the new year when the guerrilla leaders boosted their forces inside Rhodesia from 80 at Christmas to 1,300 this month, according to intelligence sources here.

The drop in the number of vacationers will cost Rhodesia millions in foreign exchange, according to tour operators. Tourism earns Rhodesia about $40 million a year.

Despite the conflict between the white minority government of Prime Minister Ian Smith and the guerrillas, Rhodesia attracted more black immigrants from neighboring independent states in the first five months of this year than last year, according to the Digest.

However, the conflict has forced as many as 23,000 blacks living in the opreation zones to the flee the country as refugees to Marxist Mozambique on Rhodesia's eastern border, according to informed government sources.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — "Stop reading the comic page," said the city editor. "Get out to 43rd Avenue. Guy owns a talking dog."

Great journalists didn't interview talking dogs. They interviewed presidents. Famous murderers and nubile movie starlets. It was a dog's life, but there wasn't much brain required.

I went out and found a neighborhood saloon and bought a beer. After awhile, I put a dime in the pay telephone and got the office.

I said: "The dog's taking his morning nap. He gets sullen and won't talk if you wake him up."

"Stay with it," said the city editor. "Phone in every half hour."

(If you don't phone in every half hour, they think you're doing something illegal. On company time, that's what they object to.)

☆ ☆ ☆

Sir Henry Morton Stanley went to Darkest Africa. He found Dr. Livingstone, I presume. When he returned they did not send him out to interview a talking dog.

They sent him to interview Wild Bill Hickock. The Fastest Gun in the West.

Once I was sent to interview a foxy grandpa who had knocked off eight women. "The Buttermilk Killer" — he fed them poisoned buttermilk.

He talked less than a talking dog. A talking dog at least barks at you. The buttermilk man wouldn't even cough for me.

Not so for Sir Henry Morton Stanley. "Mr. Hickock, how many white men have you killed to your certain knowledge?"

"I suppose I have killed considerably over a hundred," said Wild Bill.

He did not count in redskins. Or blacks and Chinese railroad workers who may have been shot just for practice.

Shortly after, Wild Bill was shot and killed in Deadwood by Jack McCall. Probably inspired by Sir Henry's interview. He shot Wild Bill in the back. So Wild Bill died still the Fastest Gun in the West.

But he was just as dead as if he'd been the Slowest Gun.

Keep your name out of the papers. It's bad for your health.

☆ ☆ ☆

Once I got to interview Mae West. She showed me a diamond bigger than the Ritz. She was wearing it on her finger.

She said: "Some rock, eh, kid?"

Nobody every sent me to Darkest Africa. Or to see the Fastest Gun in the West.

I interviewed a talking horse in Baltimore. I had to do it by telephone. "Keep it down to three minutes," said the editor. (They don't pamper the help in this business.)

The horse did not talk. He stamped his foot for answers. One stamp, yes. Two stamps, no.

I said: "Horse, will Truman win the election?" (He was running against Tom Dewey.)

The horse stamped twice: "No." The horse, of course, was just as wrong as the Chicago Tribune who printed — prematurely on election eve — "Dewey Wins!"

So much for horse sense.

☆ ☆ ☆

Did Wild Bill really tell Sir Henry: "Considerably over a hundred." It was printed in the New York Herald. New York was a long, long way from Deadwood then.

Stories from far away — that can't be checked — have a tendency to grow.

I went to the talking dog's house. I said: "Dog, how many white mailmen, to your certain knowledge, have you bitten?" I intended to write that he said: "Considerably over a hundred." The city editor would like that one.

Amateur Hour Host Ted Mack, 72, Dies In New York

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Ted Mack, the low-keyed master of ceremonies who made the Original Amateur Hour an institution on television for 22 years, is dead at 72

Mack, whose home was in Irvington, just north of New York City, died Monday afternoon in Phelps Memorial Hospital. A private memorial service was conducted Tuesday

Dr. Robert Wren, a physician and friend of Mack, said Mack was hospitalized over the weekend because of breathing difficulty. He said death was due to heart failure.

The amateur hour began as a radio show in the 1930s under the late Major Bowes, who hired Mack as a talent scout After Bowes' death, Mack took over the show and in 1948 led it into the infant television field, where it was to flourish on four networks.

The show lasted until 1970 and was the oldest entertainment program on television when the combination of pro football and failure to attract new viewers doomed it. It had a steady audience estimated at 10 million when the last show aired on CBS

Over the years Mack and his associates screened young hopefuls whose numbers ran to more than a million and whose talents ranged from sublime to kooky

When a young Ann-Margaret appeared on the show, Mack recalled recently, the future movie star "got beat by a kid from Mexico City who played a tune on a laurel leaf."

In the early days of the radio show, an unknown youngster from New Jersey appeared with a group called the Hoboken Four. He was Frank Sinatra.

Other names from among the thousands of unknowns and amateurs given a boost by the show include opera stars Robert Merrill, Regina Resnick, Maria Callas and Beverly Sills, dancer Vera-Ellen, singers Pat Boone and Jerry Vale and comic Jack Carter.

But many more blossomed only for the moment of their appearance on the show and ever after practiced their art out of the public eye — musicians who drew tunes from kitchen utensils, saws or almost anything that came to hand. Also furiously busy one-man bands, baton twirlers, mimics and bellringers, and the occasional unfortunate who got booed out of the spotlight smile and sympathy.

He once gave this advice to parents: "Too often a child is forced to practice and perform because Mama is ambitious The burning desire to get to the top must be his — not a reflection of your own hopes"

Mack's own burning desire as a young man was to make music, which led him to give up law studies at Denver University.

Born William Edward Maguiness in Greeley, Colo., he changed his name to Ted Mack when he joined the Ben Pollack orchestra in 1926, playing saxophone and clarinet.

He was in fast company. Other band members included Glenn Miller, Jack Teagarden, Bix Biederbecke and Red Nichols When Mack left a year later, Benny Goodman signed on, leading Mack to say in later years, "They got a better clarinet player"

After leading a pit band and emceeing vaudeville in Los Angeles for a year, he organized his own band, touring until the Depression dried up playing dates.

He then became a conductor at the MGM movie studio, where Bowes spotted him and hired him in 1935 to be his principal assistant and scout for the radio amateur hour.

Mack put the show on television first with the old Dumont network in January 1948. The program later moved to NBC-TV and ABC Its final 12 years were with CBS

After leaving the air, Mack took to the college lecture circuit and hosted locally arranged amateur shows. He also made occasional guest appearances on telvision

He is survived by his widow, the former Marguerite Overholt. They celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last March

Granny, 53, Wins 86-Hour Rockout

Hampshire, Ill. (AP) — Eighty-six hours after she sat down in her favorite rocking chair and started rocking, Bertha Struck won the $200 first prize for persistence

The 53-year-old grandmother outlasted Art Veera, 25, machinist from Elgin, who nodded off when he reached over in his rocking chair to change a song on the record player designed to keep him awake

Cheers and applause rang out from about 75 friends and spectators on hand as Mrs Struck was declared winner at 3 a.m Monday in this small community west of Chicago

The rockout, prelude to this town's bicentennial celebration, began at noon Thursday with 17 contestants rocking on the blocked-off main street

"The hardest thing was having only seven minutes to take care of your needs, get into clean clothes and splash some water on your face," said Mrs Struck 'Aside from that, I found the whole thing rather pleasant."

Tipplers In India's Capital Not Crying In Their Beer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India's announced push toward national prohibition is nine months old, but tipplers in the Indian capital aren't exactly crying in their beer.

Buses and bridges here are festooned with messages such as "Help Save the Poor — support Prohibition," but the federally-controlled city administration has ordered beer prices cut and the city's quota of retail liquor stores almost doubled.

The progovernment National Herald commented: "Prohibition is a lost cause in this country. Encouragement of liquor trade and efforts to bring about prohibition cannot go on simultaneously."

No groundswell of teetotalling fervor has emerged from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's 12-point prohibition program.

Nor has the government been able to consistenly enforce the program's recommended ban on liquor advertising and on Indians drinking in public places.

In May the state governments committed themselves to implementing federal prohibition guidelines, including one curtailing the issuance of new retail liquor licenses.

But that was before the New Delhi administration began auctioning off 22 new liquor licenses for a minimum of 50,000 rupees (about $6,000) each.

"If the capital of the country fails to set a good example, how will the rest of the country be serious about Prohibition?" asked the Herald, which favors Mrs. Gandhi's measures.

If the current drive to encourage teetotalling falls flat, it won't be the first such failure in India.

In ancient time, some Indian laws rewarded imbibers with a hot iron to the forehead and the medieval Emperor Aurangzeb convinced his subjects to emulate his abstentious ways by outlawing alcohol in Delhi.

Rhodesia's Guerrillas Curtail Tourist Trade

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Tourism in Rhodesia has suffered a severe blow this year because of mounting offensives by black nationalist guerrillas.

The number of vacationers visiting this land of mountains, lakes, trout streams, ancient ruins, game parks and the Victoria falls has fallen sharply in the first five months of the year, accordining to official figures.

While an average of 30,000 foreigners a month spent vacations in Rhodesia in 1975 only 12,500 a month were coming here this year, the Central Digest of Statistics reports.

The number of visiting businessmen, too dipped by 25 per cent in the first five months of this year from 9,215 in that period last year to 6,927, according to the digest.

The number of vacationers fell from 95,177 in the first five months of 1975 to 69,830 this year, the digest says.

May saw the lowest number of tourists in a decade. Only 11,209 people visited Rhodesia in May — the month that followed the Easter Sunday slaying by guerrillas of three visiting vacationers on the main Rhodesia-South African highway.

Since then, amid intensified guerrilla offensives, tourist hotels have been threatened with shutdown as people shy away from traditional vacation spots in the so-called operational zones.

One luxury hotel has closed its doors in the Victoria Falls area and another has been closed down in the eastern highlands — scene of the latest penetration by the guerrillas.

Attacks by Mozambique-based insurgents on major highways and railroads have forced the authorities to run armed convoys for travelers and limit train traffic to daylight only.

One attack on a gas station was only 60 miles east of the Rhodesian capital, on a main road.

The offensives were stepped up after the new year when the guerrilla leaders boosted their forces inside Rhodesia from 80 at Christmas to 1,300 this month, according to intelligence sources here.

The drop in the number of vacationers will cost Rhodesia millions in foreign exchange, according to tour operators. Tourism earns Rhodesia about $40 million a year.

Despite the conflict between the white minority government of Prime Minister Ian Smith and the guerrillas, Rhodesia attracted more black immigrants from neighboring independent states in the first five months of this year than last year, according to the Digest.

However, the conflict has forced as many as 23,000 blacks living in the opreation zones to the flee the country as refugees to Marxist Mozambique on Rhodesia's eastern border, according to informed government sources.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — "Stop reading the comic page," said the city editor. "Get out to 43rd Avenue. Guy owns a talking dog."

Great journalists didn't interview talking dogs. They interviewed presidents. Famous murderers and nubile movie starlets. It was a dog's life, but there wasn't much brain required.

I went out and found a neighborhood saloon and bought a beer. After awhile, I put a dime in the pay telephone and got the office.

I said: "The dog's taking his morning nap. He gets sullen and won't talk if you wake him up."

"Stay with it," said the city editor. "Phone in every half hour."

(If you don't phone in every half hour, they think you're doing something illegal. On company time, that's what they object to.)

☆ ☆ ☆

Sir Henry Morton Stanley went to Darkest Africa. He found Dr. Livingstone, I presume. When he returned they did not send him out to interview a talking dog.

They sent him to interview Wild Bill Hickock. The Fastest Gun in the West.

Once I was sent to interview a fuzy grandpa who had knocked off eight women. "The Buttermilk Killer" — he fed them poisoned buttermilk.

He talked less than a talking dog. A talking dog at least barks at you. The buttermilk man wouldn't even cough for me.

Not so for Sir Henry Morton Stanley. "Mr. Hickock, how many white men have you killed to your certain knowledge?"

"I suppose I have killed considerably over a hundred," said Wild Bill.

He did not count in redskins. Or blacks and Chinese railroad workers who may have been shot just for practice.

Shortly after, Wild Bill was shot and killed in Deadwood by Jack McCall. Probably inspired by Sir Henry's interview. He shot Wild Bill in the back. So Wild Bill died still the Fastest Gun in the West.

But he was just as dead as if he'd been the Slowest Gun.

Keep your name out of the papers. It's bad for your health.

☆ ☆ ☆

Once I got to interview Mae West. She showed me a diamond bigger than the Ritz. She was wearing it on her finger.

She said: "Some rock, eh, kid?"

Nobody every sent me to Darkest Africa. Or to see the Fastest Gun in the West.

I interviewed a talking horse in Baltimore. I had to do it by telephone. "Keep it down to three minutes," said the editor. (They don't pamper the help in this business.)

The horse did not talk. He stamped his foot for answers. One stamp, yes. Two stamps, no.

I said: "Horse, will Truman win the election?" (He was running against Tom Dewey.)

The horse stamped twice: "No." The horse, of course, was just as wrong as the Chicago Tribune who printed — prematurely on election eve — "Dewey Wins!"

So much for horse sense.

☆ ☆ ☆

Did Wild Bill really tell Sir Henry: "Considerably over a hundred." It was printed in the New York Herald. New York was a long, long way from Deadwood then.

Stories from far away — that can't be checked — have a tendency to grow.

I went to the talking dog's house. I said: "Dog, how many white mailmen, to your certain knowledge, have you bitten?" I intended to write that he said: "Considerably over a hundred." The city editor would like that one.

State Senators Critical Of Nursing Home Regulations

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

If the government wants to take over the nursing home industry, new regulations on payment of cost-reimbursements for welfare recipients "will do the job easily," a state senator charged Tuesday.

Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, who was involved with the industry for more than a decade, said it appears "bookkeepers are going to run the whole show."

The Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee got a review of the rules from State Welfare Department officials, including new Director Eldin Ehrlich.

Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh joined in Kelly's objections that the new regulations will undermine ownership by freezing depreciation payments, will hurt nursing home expansion, jeopardize patient service and care, and increase costs.

Kelly declared that nursing homes have become too expensive for patients to afford, and he blamed that not on inflation but on government regulations that end up costing taxpayers.

The federal government is requiring states to adopt a Medicaid payment system grounded on actual costs, with provisions for adjustments. That will increase statewide costs about 60% above the $24.56 million current level raised from flat fees, committee members were told.

They objected to the predicted results because Nebraska nursing homes are among the best nationally, after pioneering the way, now No. 4 in providing beds.

Nonetheless, the nursing home industry promulgated the new regulations. Some beds in Nebraska are empty, and 7% to 10% of clients don't require nursing care, as the homes are relied on as retirement facilities, said Deputy Welfare Director Derald L. Lembrich.

Ehrlich said, "We must begin to plan for alternatives to the nursing home," because the population over age 60 is projected to increase sharply. He and Lembrich said Welfare is coordinating with the Health and Economic Development Departments, local agencies and U.S. Housing and Urban Development regarding room-and-board facilities.

And licensing problems must be resolved, too, as another part of investigating alternatives to save tax money and encourage individual independence among the elderly, the officials said.

Lembrich cited a need for low-cost housing units. Ehrlich said Nebraska now has more than 5,600 separate units.

Cavanaugh objected to displacing elderly from their own homes into nursing homes or facilities elsewhere, saying insufficient transportation to supply needs affects their emotional stability.

There are currently 207 nursing homes in Nebraska, plus 27 more licensed in conjunction with hospitals.

Kelly criticized numerous features of the new cost-related reimbursement rules not yet in effect, and which Ehrlich said might have to undergo more public scrutiny.

Among non-reimbursable costs, Kelly said, denying profit-making homes a provision for fees to generate income tax dollars is "unfair." He said it means the state takes back part of the reimbursements.

And denying reimbursements for costs incurred to pay boards of directors and non-working officers' salaries "should not be a government decision. The government is saying they're unproductive people," Kelly said.

Further, he said dividing Nebraska into two regions (Douglas-Sarpy-Lancaster Counties, and the remainder of the state) is arbitrary. Kelly said some outstate homes' costs can be identical to those in urban areas.

Lincoln Woman Dies From Cycle Injuries

Linda Gonzalez, 24, of Lincoln, died Tuesday of injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident Saturday night about a half mile south of Agnew on Nebraska 79, the State Patrol said.

She was riding with a group of about 12 motorcycles on the lead cycle, driven by Earl Dughman, 31, of Lincoln, when it was struck from the rear by one driven by Howard Burchett, 25, of Ceresco, officers said.

The fatality brings the state's road deaths for the year to 164, compared with 169 at the same time last year.

Prison Escapee Held In Omaha

An escapee from the Nebraska Penal Complex was taken into custody in Omaha Tuesday, prison officials said.

Donald Kowalski, 27, of Columbus, escaped on foot Friday night by jumping from a moving car while being returned to prison from an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting.

Kowalski was serving time for robbery, prison escape and using a firearm to commit a felony.

Bruce F. Hagemeister

Hagemeister Services Scheduled

Lincoln Star Special

Hemingford — Funeral services for Bruce F. Hagemeister, 66, prominent grain dealer and civic leader, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Hemingford Methodist Church. He died Monday in Scottsbluff.

Active in the Republican party, he was an unsuccessful candidate for the GOP nomination for governor in 1966, losing to ex-Gov. Norbert Tiemann.

A native of Aurora, Hagemeister attended the U.S. Naval Academy, Luther College and was graduated from the University of Nebraska.

He taught school for three years at Wahoo before moving to Angora to enter the family grain business. Since 1939 he had operated his own grain company at Hemingford.

He served as a naval officer during World War II.

A past president of the Nebraska Grain Dealers Association, he also had served on the board of the National Grain Dealers Association.

A past president of the State Normal Board, he was a former district chairman and president of the Wyo-Braska Council of Boy Scouts.

He had served as a member of the Hemingford Village Board of Trustees and Board of Education. He was also a member of the Chamber of Commerce, American Legion, Lions Club and Flying Farmers.

Surviving are his wife, Leola; daughters, Mrs. Mary Lee Anderson of Gering and Mrs. Anne Hansen of San Francisco, Calif.; son, John of Lodi, Calif., brother, Lee of Estes Park, Colo.; sister, Mrs. Doris Juelfs of Potter; and seven grandchildren.

Group Wants Meeting With Federal Unit

A citizens group will request a meeting with the Kansas City district office of the Federal Highway Administration in its fight against the proposed West Bypass to connect U.S. 77 and I-80.

The group opposes the proposed bypass route because it will cut through a Wilderness Park day camp area used frequently by Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and other youth groups.

If the meeting takes place, Citizens to Preserve Wilderness Park will recommend an alternate bypass route which would follow a route similar to the one already planned, but would be about three-fourths of a mile to the west, missing the park.

Dr. Paul Stoesz, chairman of the group, reported that should meetings with regional and federal officials fail to satisfy the group, its members may consider a lawsuit to protect Wilderness Park.

Such proceedings, Stoesz estimated, could cost $10,000 to $20,000. Citizens to Preserve Wilderness Park is currently about $450 in debt.

Pope Takes Vacation

Vatican City (UPI) — Pope Paul VI will fly by helicopter to Castel Gandolfo to begin his annual working vacation at the papal villa overlooking Lake Albano, Vatican sources said. They said the 78-year-old pontiff would remain in the Alban Hills town southeast of Rome until mid-September.

Computer Tells Irrigation Needs

A new computerized method of irrigation scheduling which could result in a 30 to 35% savings of the state's water and energy requirements for irrigation has been put on the Agriculture Computer Network (AGNET) by University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural engineers.

It is one of many programs in the AGNET system, which uses portable computer terminals throughout the state to "talk" through any telephone to the computer at the state Capitol.

Paul Fischbach, Extension irrigationist, said the savings to Nebraska farmers in fuel alone could average $30 million annually.

The pilot project is aimed at minimizing water and energy use, eliminating deep percolation and "applying the right amount of water at the right time," Fischbach said.

He said the scheduling procedure uses electrical resistance blocks seven-eighths of an inch in diameter and one inch long installed in irrigated fields to more accurately measure soil water.

Fischbach said the scheduling method will provide for a soil moisture deficit in the plant's root zone without stressing the crop. It also allows room for rainfall if it should occur.

Accuracy The Problem

"The real problem in irrigation scheduling always has been determining accurately the amount of water applied, the amount of effective rainfall and the efficiency of the system," Fischbach said. He said good formulas have been available to project or measure crop water use fairly accurately.

In an attempt to "get the ground truth on what actually happens in the field," he said, two to four electrical resistance block stations have been planted in each field in the 50 farms involved in the statewide pilot project.

He said block stations are located at the beginning and end of the irrigation cycle. Four blocks are planted at each station at depths of one-half, one, two and three feet to measure soil moisture at various root depths.

Fischbach said the blocks, which are made of a porous gypsum material, use electrical resistance to measure the amount of water at various soil depths.

Block Loses Water

"As the plant roots pull water out of the soil, the soil actually sucks it out of the block," he said.

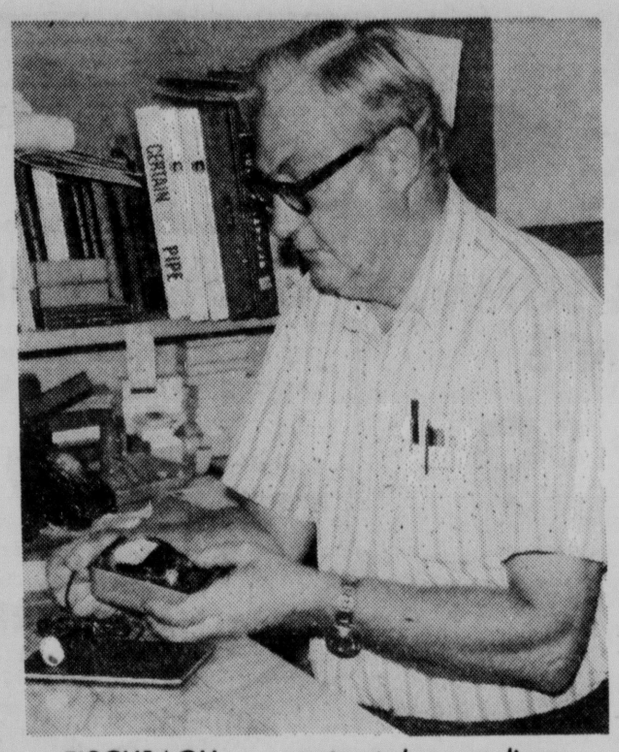
He said the blocks are monitored weekly for soil moisture content by connecting their two stainless steel electrodes to a hand-held A.C. resistance meter.

The rest is up to the computer.

Dr. Tom Thompson, AGNET co-leader who simplified the computer process to a question-and-answer format, said the operation is "much simpler" than most already in use.

"If a person can type, he can use a computer terminal and schedule irrigation," Dr. Thompson said. "It asks him for inputs as the process goes on, makes intermediate calculations and makes crop use projections for the farmer.

"The computer warns the scheduler if he makes a mistake," he said, "and gives the farmer a status report on his crop and warns him if there are possible problems in his irrigation system."



FISCHBACH . . . meter takes readings.

Daily Projections

He said the computer printout then shows a daily projected moisture depletion estimated by the evapo-transpiration formula and the effectiveness of rainfall and irrigation.

When the blocks are mointored and the readings typed into the computer, it corrects the soil moisture status, makes a projection of the evapo-transpiration use for the next 10 days and determines when the farmer should begin irrigating to obtain best result, he said.

Fischbach said the scheduler uses information received each week from the farmer, including block readings, amount of rainfall and irrigation water applied. The average daily temperature for the region is furnished by the scheduler.

In addition to the blocks, he said, computer inputs require that the farmer own a rain gauge and water meter.

Fischbach said the new method should have the greatest impact on gated pipe and center pivot irrigation systems.

"It may help gated pipe systems more simply because there now is greater error in water application with this type," he said. "But in the Sandhills, there is also a problem of applying too much water with pivots because there isn't a lot of water-holding capacity in the soil, meaning excess water easily can be applied."

"It'll be a far cry from the days of soil tube testing," he said. "That was an art, based totally on subjective human judgment. Besides, it was hard work digging different soil depths every week."

More Beef Promotion Urged

Omaha (UPI) — The National Livestock Feeders Association, responding to what it called a "disastrous" cattle market and corresponding large losses, Tuesday urged meat merchandisers to step up beef promotional and sales efforts.

B. H. Jones, association executive vice president, said chain store and independent retailers, buying groups for retailers and restaurant representatives from across the nation were contacted.

"We've pointed out in our contracts the fact that weekly commercial beef production is at a large volume, 475 to 500 million pounds, and that wholesale carcass prices are $12 to $15 below a year ago," Jones said.

He maintained "Beef is a very good buy and consumers are well advised to take advantage of the present situation."

Jones said he is concerned that prolonged losses at the feedlot level have prompted cattle feeders to cut back the movement of replacement cattle into their lots.

He said January through April feedlot placements ran above last year, but beginning in May the trend reversed.

"This kind of development can mean curtailed supplies of fed cattle down the road and corresponding sharp increases in beef prices," Jones said.

The best way to achieve a turnabout is to move current beef supplies "and thereby encourage the return of an orderly movement into feedlots," he said.

As to the initial response to the association's plea to boost promotion and sales, Jones said, "We've been encouraged by the cordial reception accorded the request and their assurances of assistance in the effort to move beef to the consumer."

Farm Chemical Thief Sentenced

Des Moines (UPI) — Huie E. Krana of Sioux City was sentenced to concurrent 10 and 5-year prison sentences in U.S. District Court Monday for the sale of farm chemicals stolen in May from a Laurel, Neb., cooperative, court records said.

Krana, 42, was convicted last month on conspiracy charges, and for receiving, concealing and selling the stolen chemicals.

Robert Wayne Baclet, 32, of Davenport, is still awaiting sentencing in the same case after he entered a guilty plea last month to a charge of receiving, concealing and selling farm chemicals. A conspiracy charge filed against Baclet was dismissed, court officials said.

Iowa Bureau of Criminal Investigation and FBI agents arrested the pair May 12 following a May 3 theft of $30,000 worth of chemicals from the Laurel, Neb., Tri-County Co-Op.

An Exira farmer, Francis Muhr, 36, received a three-year suspended sentence after pleading guilty earlier to a conspiracy charge filed in connection with the case.

In other federal court action Monday, Carl D. Howard, 32, of Muscatine, a part-time mail carrier, was placed on probation for two years after Howard entered a guilty plea last month to charges of embezzling a first class letter from the U.S. Postal Service in Muscatine.

Another postal worker, Jon David Weissenburger, 22, of Des Moines, entered a guilty plea to charge of embezzling 34 coin refund letters and failure to appear for trial.

Court officials said Weissenburger could receive up to 10 years in prison and a $7,000 fine when he faces U.S. District Judge William C. Stuart for sentencing July 26.

92 Market Calves Killed In Accident

Mt. Zion, Wis. (UPI) — Ninety-two calves were killed when a semi-trailer truck missed a curve on a Crawford County road near here and overturned.

Authorities said the driver, Duane Huff, 39, of Abbotsford, was not hurt.

The truck was carrying 223 calves weighing between 80 and 225 pounds to market at Dubuque, Iowa.

The loss was estimated at more than $10,000.

Wheat Yields Drop As Harvest Goes North

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The Nebraska wheat harvest is rapidly approaching the South Dakota border, but yields seem to be dropping as the combines move north.

Full-scale cutting is underway in Sheridan County with only 20-bushel yields compared to a statewide average estimated by the Nebraska Crop Reporting Service at 32 bushels.

Farmers in eastern Nebraska are reporting some 80-bushel oat yields, but Pat Barry, manager of Barry Grain at Valparaiso, said 40 to 50 bushels was closer to average.

A number of southeastern grain elevators have a carload or more of grain that is a wheat-oats mixture, grown when farmers seeded oats into thin wheat fields this spring. Some fairly high yields have resulted from the practice.

Most local elevators intend to process the mixture into feed locally, but a few such as Barry are seeking a market for the mixture above the current price for grain sorghum.

Farmers are reported to be selling less than 10% of their wheat at most area elevators. Elevator managers expect to see some selling when warehouse certificates are issued after 30 days of storage, but most farmers appear to be waiting for prices in the $5.00 per bushel range.

Most country elevators appear to have an adequate supply of storage for the wheat and adequate numbers of grain cars for rail shipment.

The State Department of Labor daily harvest office Tuesday reported this harvest data:

Box Butte County — Full scale cutting expected Wednesday or Thursday. Test weight 57 to 60 pounds, 12% moisture.

Chappell — Harvest office to close Tuesday. Harvest 95% complete. Yields 30 to 35 bushels. Test weight 60 pounds. Moisture 9 to 11%.

Cheyenne County — Eastern area 75% cut, yield 30 to 35 bushels. Northern and western area 30% cut.

Sidney — Area 50% cut. Near 30 bushel average yield with 60 pound test weight.

McCook and Imperial — Offices will close Friday. Area expected to be 90% cut by Wednesday evening. Yields 45 to 50 bushels with test weights running around 60 pounds.

Stratton — Harvest 90% complete by Thursday. Yields 40 to 50 bushels with 60 pounds test weights.

Hayes Center — Wheat very dry. Test weight 60 pounds.

Imperial — Hail area has some yields as low as five bushels up to 13 bushels. More than 3,000 acres involved in hail damage. Non-hail area yields 45 to 47 bushels.

North Platte, Grant, Ogallala and Brule — Harvest nearly completed. Yields in immediate area in North Platte at 28 bushels.

State Senators Critical Of Nursing Home Regulations

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

If the government wants to take over the nursing home industry, new regulations on payment of cost-reimbursements for welfare recipients "will do the job easily," a state senator charged Tuesday.

Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, who was involved with the industry for more than a decade, said it appears "bookkeepers are going to run the whole show."

The Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee got a review of the rules from State Welfare Department officials, including new Director Eldin Ehrlich.

Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh joined in Kelly's objections that the new regulations will undermine ownership by freezing depreciation payments, will hurt nursing home expansion, jeopardize patient service and care, and increase costs.

Kelly declared that nursing homes have become too expensive for patients to afford, and he blamed that not on inflation but on government regulations that end up costing taxpayers.

The federal government is requiring states to adopt a Medicaid payment system grounded on actual costs, with provisions for adjustments. That will increase statewide costs about 60% above the $24.56 million current level raised from flat fees, committee members were told.

They objected to the predicted results because Nebraska nursing homes are among the best nationally, after pioneering the way, now No. 4 in providing beds.

Nonetheless, the nursing home industry promulgated the new regulations. Some beds in Nebraska are empty, and 7% to 10% of clients don't require nursing care, as the homes are relied on as retirement facilities, said Deputy Welfare Director Derald L. Lembrich.

Ehrlich said, "We must begin to plan for alternatives to the nursing home," because the population over age 60 is projected to increase sharply. He and Lembrich said Welfare is coordinating with the Health and Economic Development Departments, local agencies and U.S. Housing and Urban Development regarding room-and-board facilities.

And licensing problems must be resolved, too, as another part of investigating alternatives to save tax money and encourage individual independence among the elderly, the officials said.

Lembrich cited a need for low-cost housing units. Ehrlich said Nebraska now has more than 5,600 separate units.

Cavanaugh objected to displacing elderly from their own homes into nursing homes or facilities elsewhere, saying insufficient transportation to supply needs affects their emotional stability.

There are currently 207 nursing homes in Nebraska, plus 27 more licensed in conjunction with hospitals.

Kelly criticized numerous features of the new cost-related reimbursement rules not yet in effect, and which Ehrlich said might have to undergo more public scrutiny.

Among non-reimbursable costs, Kelly said, denying profit-making homes a provision for fees to generate income tax dollars is "unfair." He said it means the state takes back part of the reimbursements.

And denying reimbursements for costs incurred to pay boards of directors and non-working officers' salaries "should not be a government decision. The government is saying they're unproductive people," Kelly said.

Further, he said dividing Nebraska into two regions (Douglas-Sarpy-Lancaster Counties, and the remainder of the state) is arbitrary. Kelly said some outstate homes' costs can be identical to those in urban areas.

Lincoln Woman Dies From Cycle Injuries

Linda Gonzalez, 24, of Lincoln, died Tuesday of injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident Saturday night about a half mile south of Agnew on Nebraska 79, the State Patrol said.

She was riding with a group of about 12 motorcycles on the lead cycle, driven by Earl Dughman, 31, of Lincoln, when it was struck from the rear by one driven by Howard Burchett, 25, of Ceresco, officers said.

The fatality brings the state's road deaths for the year to 164, compared with 169 at the same time last year.

Prison Escapee Held In Omaha

An escapee from the Nebraska Penal Complex was taken into custody in Omaha Tuesday, prison officials said.

Donald Kowalski, 27, of Columbus, escaped on foot Friday night by jumping from a moving car while being returned to prison from an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting.

Kowalski was serving time for robbery, prison escape and using a firearm to commit a felony.

Bruce F. Hagemeister

Hagemeister Services Scheduled

Lincoln Star Special

Hemingford — Funeral services for Bruce F. Hagemeister, 66, prominent grain dealer and civic leader, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Hemingford Methodist Church. He died Monday in Scottsbluff.

Active in the Republican party, he was an unsuccessful candidate for the GOP nomination for governor in 1966, losing to ex-Gov. Norbert Tiemann.

A native of Aurora, Hagemeister attended the U.S. Naval Academy, Luther College and was graduated from the University of Nebraska.

He taught school for three years at Wahoo before moving to Angora to enter the family grain business. Since 1939 he had operated his own grain company at Hemingford.

He served as a naval officer during World War II.

A past president of the Nebraska Grain Dealers Association, he also had served on the board of the National Grain Dealers Association.

A past president of the State Normal Board, he was a former district chairman and president of the Wyo-Braska Council of Boy Scouts.

He had served as a member of the Hemingford Village Board of Trustees and Board of Education. He was also a member of the Chamber of Commerce, American Legion, Lions Club and Flying Farmers.

Group Wants Meeting With Federal Unit

A citizens group will request a meeting with the Kansas City district office of the Federal Highway Administration in its fight against the proposed West Bypass to connect U.S. 77 and I-80.

The group opposes the proposed bypass route because it will cut through a Wilderness Park day camp area used frequently by Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and other youth groups.

If the meeting takes place, Citizens to Preserve Wilderness Park will recommend an alternate bypass route which would follow a route similar to the one already planned, but would be about three-fourths of a mile to the west, missing the park.

Dr. Paul Stoesz, chairman of the group, reported that should meetings with regional and federal officials fail to satisfy the group, its members may consider a lawsuit to protect Wilderness Park.

Such proceedings, Stoesz estimated, could cost $10,000 to $20,000. Citizens to Preserve Wilderness Park is currently about $450 in debt.

Pope Takes Vacation

Vatican City (UPI) — Pope Paul VI will fly by helicopter to Castel Gandolfo to begin his annual working vacation at the papal villa overlooking Lake Albano, Vatican sources said. They said the 78-year-old pontiff would remain in the Alban Hills town southeast of Rome until mid-September.

Computer Tells Irrigation Needs

A new computerized method of irrigation scheduling which could result in a 30 to 35% savings of the state's water and energy requirements for irrigation has been put on the Agriculture Computer Network (AGNET) by University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural engineers.

It is one of many programs in the AGNET system, which uses portable computer terminals throughout the state to "talk" through any telephone to the computer at the state Capitol.

Paul Fischbach, Extension irrigationist, said the savings to Nebraska farmers in fuel alone could average $30 million annually.

The pilot project is aimed at minimizing water and energy use, eliminating deep percolation and "applying the right amount of water at the right time," Fischbach said.

He said the scheduling procedure uses electrical resistance blocks seven-eighths of an inch in diameter and one inch long installed in irrigated fields to more accurately measure soil water.

Fischbach said the scheduling method will provide for a soil moisture deficit in the plant's root zone without stressing the crop. It also allows room for rainfall if it should occur.

Accuracy The Problem

"The real problem in irrigation scheduling always has been determining accurately the amount of water applied, the amount of effective rainfall and the efficiency of the system," Fischbach said. He said good formulas have been available to project or measure crop water use fairly accurately.

In an attempt to "get the ground truth on what actually happens in the field," he said, two to four electrical resistance block stations have been planted in each field in the 50 farms involved in the statewide pilot project.

He said block stations are located at the beginning and end of the irrigation cycle. Four blocks are planted at each station at depths of one-half, one, two and three feet to measure soil moisture at various root depths.

Fischbach said the blocks, which are made of a porous gypsum material, use electrical resistance to measure the amount of water at various soil depths.

Block Loses Water

"As the plant roots pull water out of the soil, the soil actually sucks it out of the block," he said.

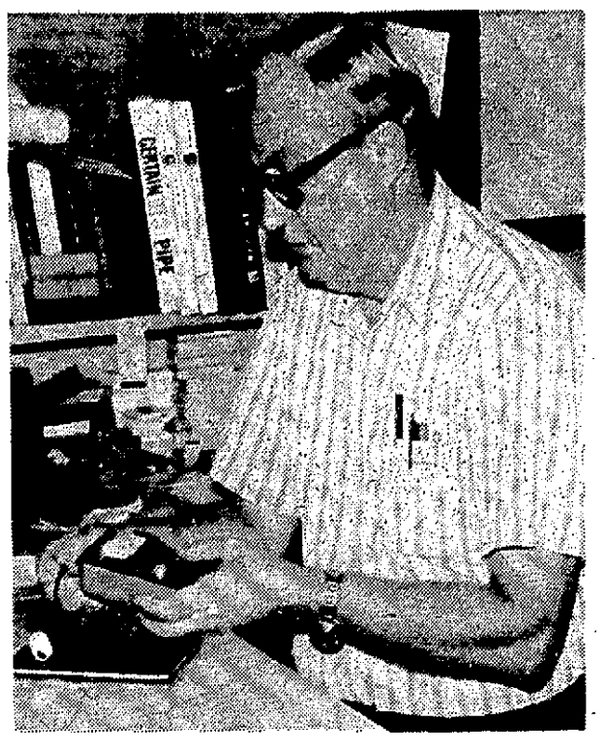
He said the blocks are monitored weekly for soil moisture content by connecting their two stainless steel electrodes to a hand-held A.C. resistance meter.

The rest is up to the computer.

Dr. Tom Thompson, AGNET co-leader who simplified the computer process to a question-and-answer format, said the operation is "much simpler" than most already in use.

"If a person can type, he can use a computer terminal and schedule irrigation," Dr. Thompson said. "It asks him for inputs as the process goes on, makes intermediate calculations and makes crop use projections for the farmer.

"The computer warns the scheduler if he makes a mistake," he said, "and gives the farmer a status report on his crop and warns him if there are possible problems in his irrigation system."



FISCHBACH . . . meter takes readings.

Daily Projections

He said the computer printout then shows a daily projected moisture depletion estimated by the evapo-transpiration formula and the effectiveness of rainfall and irrigation.

When the blocks are mointored and the readings typed into the computer, it corrects the soil moisture status, makes a projection of the evapo-transpiration use for the next 10 days and determines when the farmer should begin irrigating to obtain best result, he said.

Fischbach said the scheduler uses information received each week from the farmer, including block readings, amount of rainfall and irrigation water applied. The average daily temperature for the region is furnished by the scheduler.

In addition to the blocks, he said, computer inputs require that the farmer own a rain gauge and water meter.

Fischbach said the new method should have the greatest impact on gated pipe and center pivot irrigation systems.

"It may help gated pipe systems more simply because there now is greater error in water application with this type," he said. "But in the Sandhills, there is also a problem of applying too much water with pivots because there isn't a lot of water-holding capacity in the soil, meaning excess water easily can be applied."

"It'll be a far cry from the days of soil tube testing," he said. "That was an art, based totally on subjective human judgment. Besides, it was hard work digging different soil depths every week."

More Beef Promotion Urged

Omaha (UPI) — The National Livestock Feeders Association, responding to what it called a "disastrous" cattle market and corresponding large losses, Tuesday urged meat merchandisers to step up beef promotional and sales efforts.

B. H. Jones, association executive vice president, said chain store and independent retailers, buying groups for retailers and restaurant representatives from across the nation were contacted.

"We've pointed out in our contracts the fact that weekly commercial beef production is at a large volume, 475 to 500 million pounds, and that wholesale carcass prices are $12 to $15 below a year ago," Jones said.

He maintained "Beef is a very good buy and consumers are well advised to take advantage of the present situation."

Jones said he is concerned that prolonged losses at the feedlot level have prompted cattle feeders to cut back the movement of replacement cattle into their lots.

He said January through April feedlot placements ran above last year, but beginning in May the trend reversed.

"This kind of development can mean curtailed supplies of fed cattle down the road and corresponding sharp increases in beef prices," Jones said.

The best way to achieve a turnabout is to move current beef supplies "and thereby encourage the return of an orderly movement into feedlots," he said.

As to the initial response to the association's plea to boost promotion and sales, Jones said, "We've been encouraged by the cordial reception accorded the request and their assurances of assistance in the effort to move beef to the consumer."

Farm Chemical Thief Sentenced

Des Moines (UPI) — Huie E. Krana of Sioux City was sentenced to concurrent 10 and 5-year prison sentences in U.S. District Court Monday for the sale of farm chemicals stolen in May from a Laurel, Neb., cooperative, court records said.

Krana, 42, was convicted last month on conspiracy charges, and for receiving, concealing and selling the stolen chemicals.

Robert Wayne Baclet, 32, of Davenport, is still awaiting sentencing in the same case after he entered a guilty plea last month to a charge of receiving, concealing and selling farm chemicals. A conspiracy charge filed against Baclet was dismissed, court officials said.

Iowa Bureau of Criminal Investigation and FBI agents arrested the pair May 12 following a May 3 theft of $30,000 worth of chemicals from the Laurel, Neb., Tri-County Co-Op.

An Exira farmer, Francis Muhr, 36, received a three-year suspended sentence after pleading guilty earlier to a conspiracy charge filed in connection with the case.

In other federal court action Monday, Carl D. Howard, 32, of Muscatine, a part-time mail carrier, was placed on probation for two years after Howard entered a guilty plea last month to charges of embezzling a first class letter from the U.S. Postal Service in Muscatine.

Another postal worker, Jon David Weissenburger, 22, of Des Moines, entered a guilty plea to charge of embezzling 34 coin refund letters and failure to appear for trial.

Court officials said Weissenburger could receive up to 10 years in prison and a $7,000 fine when he faces U.S. District Judge William C. Stuart for sentencing July 26.

92 Market Calves Killed In Accident

Mt. Zion, Wis. (UPI) — Ninety-two calves were killed when a semi-trailer truck missed a curve on a Crawford County road near here and overturned.

Authorities said the driver, Duane Huff, 39, of Abbotsford, was not hurt.

The truck was carrying 223 calves weighing between 80 and 225 pounds to market at Dubuque, Iowa.

The loss was estimated at more than $10,000.

Wheat Yields Drop As Harvest Goes North

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The Nebraska wheat harvest is rapidly approaching the South Dakota border, but yields seem to be dropping as the combines move north.

Full-scale cutting is underway in Sheridan County with only 20-bushel yields compared to a statewide average estimated by the Nebraska Crop Reporting Service at 32 bushels.

Farmers in eastern Nebraska are reporting some 80-bushel oat yields, but Pat Barry, manager of Barry Grain at Valparaiso, said 40 to 50 bushels was closer to average.

A number of southeastern grain elevators have a carload or more of grain that is a wheat-oats mixture, grown when farmers seeded oats into thin wheat fields this spring. Some fairly high yields have resulted from the practice.

Most local elevators intend to process the mixture into feed locally, but a few such as Barry are seeking a market for the mixture above the current price for grain sorghum.

Farmers are reported to be selling less than 10% of their wheat at most area elevators. Elevator managers expect to see some selling when warehouse certificates are issued after 30 days of storage, but most farmers appear to be waiting for prices in the $5.00 per bushel range.

Most country elevators appear to have an adequate supply of storage for the wheat and adequate numbers of grain cars for rail shipment.

The State Department of Labor daily harvest office Tuesday reported this harvest data:

Box Butte County — Full scale cutting expected Wednesday or Thursday. Test weight 57 to 60 pounds, 12% moisture.

Chappell — Harvest office to close Tuesday. Harvest 95% complete. Yields 30 to 35 bushels. Test weight 60 pounds. Moisture 9 to 11%.

Cheyenne County — Eastern area 75% cut, yield 30 to 35 bushels. Northern and western area 30% cut.

Sidney — Area 50% cut. Near 30 bushel average yield with 60 pound test weight.

McCook and Imperial — Offices will close Friday. Area expected to be 90% cut by Wednesday evening. Yields 45 to 50 bushels with test weights running around 60 pounds.

Stratton — Harvest 90% complete by Thursday. Yields 40 to 50 bushels with 60 pounds test weights.

Hayes Center — Wheat very dry. Test weight 60 pounds.

Imperial — Hail area has some yields as low as five bushels up to 13 bushels. More than 3,000 acres involved in hail damage. Non-hail area yields 45 to 47 bushels.

North Platte, Grant, Ogallala and Brule — Harvest nearly completed. Yields in immediate area in North Platte at 28 bushels.

Man Claims He Lost Job For Work On Busing Suit

Omaha (AP) — The head of a citizens group which has filed suit to block the expenditure of local taxes for the purpose of busing to achieve racial balance in Omaha's schools has lost his job.

John Dumke, 36, of Omaha, president of "Free Americans for Constitutional Taxation" (FACT), claims he was fired because he was spending too much time with the legal action on busing.

Dumke had worked as a salesman for Moeller-Pickett and Associates of Grandview, Mo., a firm which represents manufacturers.

Dumke said his employer told him that the company wanted him "on the road and not in town making speeches."

Dumke said the action was taken despite the fact that his sales this year were sharply higher than last year.

Charles Moeller, president of the firm, said Dumke was not fired for his public activities in the lawsuit, but because "I didn't feel I was getting the time I was paying for."

Moeller admitted that his firm's sales have been higher this year, but said that trend was a general one because of the economy, not because of Dumke's efforts.

Moeller said he felt Dumke was spending too much time with an electronics firm in which he has an interest.

Moeller also said he never told Dumke to get out of his involvement with the FACT suit.

Dumke remains privately employed in a real estate investment company and has several other business interests.

In a nutshell, the FACT suit claims that the use of local taxes for busing purposes is unconstitutional because the busing and the expected increase in taxes to cover it are the result of a court order. The group claims the state legislature, Congress and local governing bodies are the only ones who have the power to raise and lower taxes, and that the court's, in effect, have usurped that power illegally in forcing the spending of tax dollars on busing.

Dumke has stressed that the suit is not against busing as a means of achieveing racial balance in schools, butagainst the courts' usurpation of legislative functions.

However, Dumke has moved outside the Omaha School District, where one of his children was scheduled to be bused this fall.

Omaha Integration Hearing Set

Omaha (AP) — The Eighth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis Monday scheduled a hearing on the Omaha School District's integration plan.

The hearing will be Aug. 17 at St. Paul, Minn. The plan is scheduled to go into effect Sept. 7.

Monday's order said the full eight-judge court will hear the case. Appeals of the integration plan, approved by U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz on April 27, were filed by the school district and 32 intervenors.

The court gave the district until July 20 to submit a reply to the intervenors' brief. It gave the intervenors and the U.S. Justice Dept., coplaintiffs in the case, until July 30 to respond. The district then will have until Aug. 6 to file a reply.

The intervenors are 7 black parents and 25 of their children. They have asked the appeals court to order that first-graders not be exempt from mandatory reassignment as stipulated in the plan approved by Judge Schatz.

Other requested changes include the busing of most white children for two years rather than one during their elementary schooling. The plan approved by Judge Schatz contained most of the proposals submitted by the district, but it also included what district officials described as significant modifications suggested by the plaintiff.

The district asked the appeals court to approve the plan it submitted.

Hastings School Issue On Ballot

Hastings (AP) — Voters in Hastings will go to the polls Sept. 28 to ballot on a proposed $3.8 million bond issue for the school district. Included in the issue will be a new physical education facility, with tennis courts at the senior high; a new swimming pool at the junior high; and a new elementary school in south Hastings. The proposal is similar to one turned down in April.

Floodplain Hearing Set

Beatrice (AP) — A public hearing on the proposed relocation of families in the Beatrice floodplain will be held Aug. 18 to explain the Floodplain Park plan to property owners and residents of the floodplain. The hearing concerns an anticipated federal grant of $399,000 for clearing out the Blue River floodplain in Beatrice.

Boy, 9, Accidentally Shot To Death

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police said a 9-year-old Topeka, Kan., boy died after he was shot accidentally Monday night. Detective Gregory Thompson said Eugene David McCall was shot in the chest with a rifle while he and a 14-year-old boy were playing with the weapon. The incident occurred at the home of Thomas Buckley. The victim's father, David McCall of Omaha, was helping Buckley move and the boys found the rifle. An autopsy was ordered, officers said.

Guard Units Going To Colorado

Nebraska Army National Guard units of the 2nd Battalion, 134th infantry, headquartered in Beatrice, will leave this weekend for their annual two-week field training. The contingent of about 600 men and women, including units from Beatrice, Crete, Fairbury, Falls City, Hastings, Nebraska City and Auburn, will train at Fort Carson, Colo.

Omahan Accidentally Kills Himself

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha man apparently shot himself to death Monday while cleaning a pistol, according to police reports. Investigators identified the victim as Gary D. Lauritsen, 31. Police said Mrs. Lauritsen found her husband's body on the floor of the living room of their home.

Oldtime Threshing Bee Planned

Omaha (UPI) — There will be an old-fashioned threshing bee Sunday at the Lavern Plambeck farm west of Omaha. Plambeck said Farmers Union members from Douglas and Sarpy counties will help him thresh seven acres of oats beginning at 1 p.m. The rain date is the following Sunday.

Death of Tigers Still Probed

Omaha (AP) — Tests are still being conducted, but director Lee Simmons said there is still no conclusive finding on what killed five Sumatran tigers June 19 at the Henry Doorly Zoo. Simmons said he believes tests will ultimately show the animals died of a reaction to worming drug that they were given. He said he hopes to have a statement within two weeks on what caused the deaths.

Fireworks Blamed For Fire

North Platte (AP) — City fire marshal Jim Norlem said his "best guess" was that fireworks caused the Monday blaze destroying the main building at the North Platte Country Club. Norlem said he and Del Cerny, a deputy state firemarshal, had completed their investigation of the fire. He said a police officer saw a large aerial fireworks display about a half-hour before the blaze was reported.

Wastewater Plans Given High Priority

The Nebraska Natural Resources Commission has recommended wastewater treatment needs in five southeast communities should win highest priorities.

Bennet, Elmwood, Falls City, Nebraska City and Plattsmouth head the priority list in the newly completed Nemaha River Basin Water Quality Management Plan.

Other recommendations, according to NRC planning division chief Gayle H. Lewis, include:

—new wastewater sources should be connected to an existing sewer; more public funds should be made available to control erosion runoff; a system of adequate protected flows is needed for streams.

—land disposal of wastewater should be considered, and complete retention lagoons rather than small mechanical plants should be selected, both when feasible.

—state law is needed to require training and certification of wastewater treatment plant operators.

The Nemeha River Basin plan has received approval from the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control, the NRC, governor and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The plan assures continued state eligibility of all communities in the basin for federal construction grant funds for sewage treatment. It also will guide federal, state and local spending on water pollution control, and contains further proposals for nonstructural management measures and legislation to reduce pollution.

2 Senate Candidates Raise $25,000 Each

By The Associated Press

The two major candidates in Nebraska's U.S. Senate race raised nearly $25,000 each in June, according to reports on file with the secretary of state.

Republican Rep. John Y. McCollister of Omaha continued to show strength in raising campaign funds. His latest financial statement brought his total for the year to $127,462.

Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky was $57,000 behind McCollister in total contributions, but Democrat Zorinsky nearly matched McCollister in June fund raising.

Zorinsky's war chest apparently relied largely on 20 contributions of $1,000 each. He also had a $2,000 contribution from the Seafarers Political Action Committee.

Among the contributors of $1,000 was the mayor's personal secretary, Bernice Labedz, Omaha Safety Director Richard Orth, and City Council Vice President John Miller.

McCollister relied on 35 contributions that ranged from $100 to $1,000, and four political action committees. The Nebraska Medical PAC gave $5,000 to McCollister. Union Carbide and American Cynamid PACs gave $800 each to McCollister.

Zorinsky and McCollister have begun using funds for their advertising efforts.

McCollister paid his Baltimore ad agency $22,000 in June and another $2,500 went to an Omaha agency.

Zorinsky spent $10,000 with a local advertising organization.

The American Medical political action committee had endorsed the entire Republican ticket in Nebraska when it reported its commitment, not yet in dollars, to Rep. Charles Thone, 2nd District nominee Lee Terry of Omaha, 3rd District Rep. Virginia Smith, and McCollister.

In their report, the Chiropractors of Nebraska PAC said they would "likely" work for Terry.

$6 Million Budget OKd By Central Tech Board

Grand Island (AP) — The Board of Governors of the Central Technical Community College Area Monday approved a $6,327,842 operating budget for 1976-77.

The board also adopted a capital improvement budget of $1,045,084 and certified the mill levy at .85.

The total budget, adopted following a public hearing, calls for 60% local support, which includes taxes, tuition and federal monies, plus 40% state aid.

The operating budget will require 1.60 mill levy, down .08 of a mill from last year. About 56% of the general fund expenditures will be devoted to instructional costs, including community education. Another 31% is for institutional support and 13% is for student services and academic support, a spokesman said.

About $395,800 of the capital improvement budget was earmarked for Platte Technical Community College in Columbus.

Also included in building plans, but not financed by the mill levy, is a $290,000 addition to the Grand Island Center for instructional and area office space. Funds for that were allocated from the existing capital outlay fund, the spokesman said.

Platte Technical Community College Director Coach Jay Muma's resignation was accepted Monday night. Muma has been offered the post of high school principal in Ottawa, Iowa.

NU Medical Center Votes For Collective Bargaining

Omaha (AP) — Medical residents and interns at the University of Nebraska Medical Center have voted by a more than a 2 to 1 margin to organize for collective bargaining.

More than 200 house officers voted in a mail election ordered by the Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations. The results were announced Monday.

Dr. Robert Sparks, medical center chancellor, said the NU Board of Regents is expected to decide at its Saturday meeting whether to contest the election. If so, the court will hold a hearing.

If the election is not contested, an order will be issued certifying that the House Officers Association for the University of Nebraska Medical Center and Affiliated Hospitals is the bargaining unit for the house officers at the Medical center.

If the NU house officers organize for collective bargaining, they would be the first group of Nebraska doctors to do so.

Omahan Presumed Drowned In Lake Near Glenwood, Iowa

Glenwood, Iowa (AP) — Authorities said Monday night Ronnie Hall, 18, of Omaha was missing and presumed drowned in a sandpit lake near Glenwood, Iowa.

The youth was reported missing to Mills County Sheriff Merle Brown Sunday by David Thompson of Omaha, with whom Hall was camping at the abandoned sandpit.

Brown said the pit is posted for no trespassing and barriers have been erected. He said one person drowned there last year.

Authorities said Thompson told them he last saw Hall early Sunday. Hall's billfold and some clothing were found in his pickup truck. His sleeping bag was gone.

River Victim South Dakota Man

Newcastle (UPI) — The body of a man pulled from the Missouri River northwest of here Sunday has been identified as Willie Gardner, 27, of Yankton, S.D., Dixon County authorities said Tuesday.

Sheriff Dean Chase said it appeared the body had been in the water about one week. Fingerprints, dental records and a picture were used in establishing the identity.

Omaha Man Drowns In Lake

Council Bluffs (AP) — An Omaha man who drowned Monday night in Lake Manawa at Council Bluffs was identified by police Tuesday as Timothy Goshinski, 26.

Officers said he and a companion were swimming in the lake when Goshinski apparently went down. Scuba divers recovered the body about midnight.

Man Claims He Lost Job For Work On Busing Suit

Omaha (AP) — The head of a citizens group which has filed suit to block the expenditure of local taxes for the purpose of busing to achieve racial balance in Omaha's schools has lost his job.

John Dumke, 36, of Omaha, president of "Free Americans for Constitutional Taxation" (FACT), claims he was fired because he was spending too much time with the legal action on busing.

Dumke had worked as a salesman for Moeller-Pickett and Associates of Grandview, Mo., a firm which represents manufacturers.

Dumke said his employer told him that the company wanted him "on the road and not in town making speeches."

Dumke said the action was taken despite the fact that his sales this year were sharply higher than last year.

Charles Moeller, president of the firm, said Dumke was not fired for his public activities in the lawsuit, but because "I didn't feel I was getting the time I was paying for."

Moeller admitted that his firm's sales have been higher this year, but said that trend was a general one because of the economy, not because of Dumke's efforts.

Moeller said he felt Dumke was spending too much time with an electronics firm in which he has an interest.

Moeller also said he never told Dumke to get out of his involvement with the FACT suit.

Dumke remains privately employed in a real estate investment company and has several other business interests.

In a nutshell, the FACT suit claims that the use of local taxes for busing purposes is unconstitutional because the busing and the expected increase in taxes to cover it are the result of a court order. The group claims the state legislature, Congress and local governing bodies are the only ones who have the power to raise and lower taxes, and that the court's, in effect, have usurped that power illegally in forcing the spending of tax dollars on busing.

Dumke has stressed that the suit is not against busing as a means of achieveing racial balance in schools, butagainst the courts' usurpation of legislative functions.

However, Dumke has moved outside the Omaha School District, where one of his children was scheduled to be bused this fall.

Omaha Integration Hearing Set

Omaha (AP) — The Eighth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis Monday scheduled a hearing on the Omaha School District's integration plan.

The hearing will be Aug. 17 at St. Paul, Minn. The plan is scheduled to go into effect Sept. 7.

Monday's order said the full eight-judge court will hear the case. Appeals of the integration plan, approved by U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz on April 27, were filed by the school district and 32 intervenors.

The court gave the district until July 20 to submit a reply to the intervenors' brief. It gave the intervenors and the U.S. Justice Dept., coplaintiffs in the case, until July 30 to respond. The district then will have until Aug. 6 to file a reply.

The intervenors are 7 black parents and 25 of their children. They have asked the appeals court to order that first-graders not be exempt from mandatory reassignment as stipulated in the plan approved by Judge Schatz.

Other requested changes include the busing of most white children for two years rather than one during their elementary schooling. The plan approved by Judge Schatz contained most of the proposals submitted by the district, but it also included what district officials described as significant modifications suggested by the plaintiff.

The district asked the appeals court to approve the plan it submitted.

Hastings School Issue On Ballot

Hastings (AP) — Voters in Hastings will go to the polls Sept. 28 to ballot on a proposed $3.8 million bond issue for the school district. Included in the issue will be a new physical education facility, with tennis courts at the senior high; a new swimming pool at the junior high; and a new elementary school in south Hastings. The proposal is similar to one turned down in April.

Floodplain Hearing Set

Beatrice (AP) — A public hearing on the proposed relocation of families in the Beatrice floodplain will be held Aug. 18 to explain the Floodplain Park plan to property owners and residents of the floodplain. The hearing concerns an anticipated federal grant of $399,000 for clearing out the Blue River floodplain in Beatrice.

Boy, 9, Accidentally Shot To Death

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police said a 9-year-old Topeka, Kan., boy died after he was shot accidentally Monday night. Detective Gregory Thompson said Eugene David McCall was shot in the chest with a rifle while he and a 14-year-old boy were playing with the weapon. The incident occurred at the home of Thomas Buckley. The victim's father, David McCall of Omaha, was helping Buckley move and the boys found the rifle. An autopsy was ordered, officers said.

Guard Units Going To Colorado

Nebraska Army National Guard units of the 2nd Battalion, 134th infantry, headquartered in Beatrice, will leave this weekend for their annual two-week field training. The contingent of about 600 men and women, including units from Beatrice, Crete, Fairbury, Falls City, Hastings, Nebraska City and Auburn, will train at Fort Carson, Colo.

Omahan Accidentally Kills Himself

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha man apparently shot himself to death Monday while cleaning a pistol, according to police reports. Investigators identified the victim as Gary D. Lauritsen, 31. Police said Mrs. Lauritsen found her husband's body on the floor of the living room of their home.

Oldtime Threshing Bee Planned

Omaha (UPI) — There will be an old-fashioned threshing bee Sunday at the Lavern Plambeck farm west of Omaha. Plambeck said Farmers Union members from Douglas and Sarpy counties will help him thresh seven acres of oats beginning at 1 p.m. The rain date is the following Sunday.

Death of Tigers Still Probed

Omaha (AP) — Tests are still being conducted, but director Lee Simmons said there is still no conclusive finding on what killed five Sumatran tigers June 19 at the Henry Doorly Zoo. Simmons said he believes tests will ultimately show the animals died of a reaction to worming drug that they were given. He said he hopes to have a statement within two weeks on what caused the deaths.

Fireworks Blamed For Fire

North Platte (AP) — City fire marshal Jim Norlem said his "best guess" was that fireworks caused the Monday blaze destroying the main building at the North Platte Country Club. Norlem said he and Del Cerny, a deputy state firemarshal, had completed their investigation of the fire. He said a police officer saw a large aerial fireworks display about a half-hour before the blaze was reported.

Wastewater Plans Given High Priority

The Nebraska Natural Resources Commission has recommended wastewater treatment needs in five southeast communities should win highest priorities.

Bennet, Elmwood, Falls City, Nebraska City and Plattsmouth head the priority list in the newly completed Nemaha River Basin Water Quality Management Plan.

Other recommendations, according to NRC planning division chief Gayle H. Lewis, include:

—new wastewater sources should be connected to an existing sewer; more public funds should be made available to control erosion runoff; a system of adequate protected flows is needed for streams.

—land disposal of wastewater should be considered, and complete retention lagoons rather than small mechanical plants should be selected, both when feasible.

—state law is needed to require training and certification of wastewater treatment plant operators.

The Nemeha River Basin plan has received approval from the Nebraska Department of Environmental Control, the NRC, governor and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The plan assures continued state eligibility of all communities in the basin for federal construction grant funds for sewage treatment. It also will guide federal, state and local spending on water pollution control, and contains further proposals for nonstructural management measures and legislation to reduce pollution.

2 Senate Candidates Raise $25,000 Each

By The Associated Press

The two major candidates in Nebraska's U.S. Senate race raised nearly $25,000 each in June, according to reports on file with the secretary of state.

Republican Rep. John Y. McCollister of Omaha continued to show strength in raising campaign funds. His latest financial statement brought his total for the year to $127,462.

Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky was $57,000 behind McCollister in total contributions, but Democrat Zorinsky nearly matched McCollister in June fund raising.

Zorinsky's war chest apparently relied largely on 20 contributions of $1,000 each. He also had a $2,000 contribution from the Seafarers Political Action Committee.

Among the contributors of $1,000 was the mayor's personal secretary, Bernice Labedz, Omaha Safety Director Richard Orth, and City Council Vice President John Miller.

McCollister relied on 35 contributions that ranged from $100 to $1,000, and four political action committees. The Nebraska Medical PAC gave $5,000 to McCollister. Union Carbide and American Cynamid PACs gave $800 each to McCollister.

Zorinsky and McCollister have begun using funds for their advertising efforts

McCollister paid his Baltimore ad agency $22,000 in June and another $2,500 went to an Omaha agency.

Zorinsky spent $10,000 with a local advertising organization.

The American Medical political action committee had endorsed the entire Republican ticket in Nebraska when it reported its commitment, not yet in dollars, to Rep. Charles Thone, 2nd District nominee Lee Terry of Omaha, 3rd District Rep. Virginia Smith, and McCollister.

In their report, the Chiropractors of Nebraska PAC said they would "likely" work for Terry.

$6 Million Budget OKd By Central Tech Board

Grand Island (AP) — The Board of Governors of the Central Technical Community College Area Monday approved a $6,327,842 operating budget for 1976-77.

The board also adopted a capital improvement budget of $1,045,084 and certified the mill levy at .85.

The total budget, adopted following a public hearing, calls for 60% local support, which includes taxes, tuition and federal monies, plus 40% state aid.

The operating budget will require 1.60 mill levy, down .08 of a mill from last year. About 56% of the general fund expenditures will be devoted to instructional costs, including community education. Another 31% is for institutional support and 13% is for student services and academic support, a spokesman said.

About $395,800 of the capital improvement budget was earmarked for Platte Technical Community College in Columbus.

Also included in building plans, but not financed by the mill levy, is a $290,000 addition to the Grand Island Center for instructional and area office space. Funds for that were allocated from the existing capital outlay fund, the spokesman said.

Platte Technical Community College Director Coach Jay Muma's resignation was accepted Monday night. Muma has been offered the post of high school principal in Ottawa, Iowa.

NU Medical Center Votes For Collective Bargaining

Omaha (AP) — Medical residents and interns at the University of Nebraska Medical Center have voted by a more than a 2 to 1 margin to organize for collective bargaining.

More than 200 house officers voted in a mail election ordered by the Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations. The results were announced Monday.

Dr. Robert Sparks, medical center chancellor, said the NU Board of Regents is expected to decide at its Saturday meeting whether to contest the election. If so, the court will hold a hearing.

If the election is not contested, an order will be issued certifying that the House Officers Association for the University of Nebraska Medical Center and Affiliated Hospitals is the bargaining unit for the house officers at the Medical center.

If the NU house officers organize for collective bargaining, they would be the first group of Nebraska doctors to do so.

Omahan Presumed Drowned In Lake Near Glenwood, Iowa

Glenwood, Iowa (AP) — Authorities said Monday night Ronnie Hall, 18, of Omaha was missing and presumed drowned in a sandpit lake near Glenwood, Iowa.

The youth was reported missing to Mills County Sheriff Merle Brown Sunday by David Thompson of Omaha, with whom Hall was camping at the abandoned sandpit.

Brown said the pit is posted for no trespassing and barriers have been erected. He said one person drowned there last year.

Authorities said Thompson told them he last saw Hall early Sunday. Hall's billfold and some clothing were found in his pickup truck. His sleeping bag was gone.

River Victim South Dakota Man

Newcastle (UPI) — The body of a man pulled from the Missouri River northwest of here Sunday has been identified as Willie Gardner, 27, of Yankton, S.D., Dixon County authorities said Tuesday.

Sheriff Dean Chase said it appeared the body had been in the water about one week. Fingerprints, dental records and a picture were used in establishing the identity.

Omaha Man Drowns In Lake

Council Bluffs (AP) — An Omaha man who drowned Monday night in Lake Manawa at Council Bluffs was identified by police Tuesday as Timothy Goshinski, 26.

Officers said he and a companion were swimming in the lake when Goshinski apparently went down. Scuba divers recovered the body about midnight.

Council Asks For 3 Budget Cuts

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Take three more whacks, please, mayor.

That was the surprise request made Tuesday night by the City Council as they began deciding how to spend the taxpayer's money next year.

The council's request actually was that Mayor Helen Boosalis prepare three budget cuts totaling $500,000, $1 million and $1.5 million, trimming personnel or services of low priority.

It was only on Sunday that the mayor released her recommended budget. Traditionally, the council has taken it from that point without asking her where cuts should be made.

Sparking the move was Councilman Bob Sikyta, who said the request was made to "keep as much harmony as possible."

The request passed with no dissenting votes.

"We're faced with a critical situation," Councilman Steve Cook said in explaining his vote to the mayor, referring to the city's rapid climb to the mill levy limit on taxes.

"Next year is going to be a very serious budget problem, even to the extent of limiting jobs," Councilman Bob Jeambey said, adding that he would like to see the crisis "spread over two years."

Pains were taken by some council members to ease any fears the mayor might have that the council was trying to shift blame to her for possibly unpopular reductions in city services.

Jeambey told the mayor he would not support the move if he thought the motive was "tossing the snake back in your lap."

Council member Sue Bailey said the move was to spur "brainstorming" during which the mayor and council members would "put their collective heads together."

Council Chairman Max Denney made it clear he is not allowing the mayor the final word.

"I still want to reserve to myself . . . when you come back . . . to say that more should be cut or that you're wrong in this priority," he said.

Boosalis told the council that it would be at least 10 days until she would be ready with the additional cuts.

In the meantime, the council continued its customary process of studying different segments of the budget in a series of meetings over the next several weeks.

In its first such session Tuesday night the council made only one cut, of $50,000 from the city's contingency funds, used for unexpected spending.

The council spent a good deal of its time haggling over an increase of four people in a new budget division, but finally approved the new positions.

The council has asked the mayor to provide it with a clearer budget analysis than has been provided in previous years.

Council OKs Beer Sales Once Again

The City Council apparently is finding it difficult to turn its back on alcohol.

In a specially called meeting that prefaced a Tuesday night budget meeting, the council once again authorized the sale of beer at its golf courses, where it has been sold in clubhouses for several years.

In the eyes of Councilman Dick Baker, the move was necessary because the State Liquor Control Commission is "playing games" with the city.

Pioneer Golf Course has been without beer for a month because of an earlier snafu in which the commission suddenly decided to require the approval of both the council and the county board before approving the golf pro as holder of the license.

After both bodies approved the pro, the commission once again refused to approve the application until the council authorized again this year the sale of alcoholic beverages on the golf courses.

The council held the special meeting on the assumption that it would pave the way for beer to be served at Pioneer Golf Course Wednesday during the men's city golf tournament.

The commission's ruling that authorization for beer sales on city property must be given annually is a departure from previous years, when the commission automatically approved the annual application by golf pros.

City Budget Data Said Insufficient

Mayor Helen Boosalis's budget does not give the City Council the information it needs to do its job, council members were told Tuesday by their own private accountants.

"You just don't have very much data," Frank Budetti of Touche, Ross and Co. told the council at an early morning meeting.

"Should you not expect and demand more data before accepting the budget?" he asked the council.

His comments apparently were aimed at a subtle shift in the manner in which city hall does business. City government is converting to a new kind of accounting — program budgeting.

Its outstanding feature is that specific programs, or stated another way, separate tasks, are identified.

Then accounts figure how much its costs to do each task.

The new method supposedly makes it easier for the council to understand what city departments are doing and to decide what level of service should be provided at each task and what priority each should have.

In an earlier session with the council the accountants prompted editorial wrath with their suggestion that perhaps street sweeping or city flower gardening could be cut back.

Budetti contended that the mayor's administration is moving too slowly on converting to program budgeting. In 160 "man days" it should be possible to go through each department and identify the programs in each, he said.

The mayor's administration has been working on the conversion for the past year.

He reminded the council that his own firm, in 40 days, had gone through two city departments which account for one-fourth of the city's tax funds.

The comments of the accountants appeared to meet with a lukewarm response from some council members, particularly those who are political allies of the mayor.

"I'm a little disappointed," Councilman Bob Jeambey said of the mayor's budget. "But its a lot more meaningful than what we had last year."

Touche Ross accountant Hugh Swink told the council that the steps being taken by Boosalis's administration are taking city hall into program budgeting "by the back door."

Apparently, city officials are taking great care to ensure that precisely accurate costs are assigned to each program, slowing the process of identifying the programs, Swink said.

But Budetti and Swink said that generally accurate costs could be assigned to the programs much more speedily, and that generally accurate costs were good enough for the council's pruposes.

With the present approach, he and Budetti said, it may be five years before the City Council is given the kind of information it wants when deciding how to budget tax dollars.

Group Decides Not To Support Street Plan

An organization of citizens who live along 84th St. voted Tuesday night not to support the street improvement plan put before the Goals and Policies committee by the Lincoln Alliance.

The Greater Eastside Citizen's Association, made up of people who oppose widening 84th St. and making it a permanent truck bypasss, took the action after hearing from Doug Berman, an alliance spokesman.

German told the group of 25 persons that the alliance plan was drawn up by people from various neighborhood organizations, in an attempt to give each faction what it wants while making each sensitive to one another's needs.

German is a member of the Alliance Transportation Task Force, which proposed the plan, known as "Sketch 7".

The alliance plan calls for no widening of 84th St., but also deletes several street widenings and one-way street pairs from central Lincoln.

The Goals and Policies Committee is slated to vote on the plans July 22.

Some people at the meeting argued that it would better serve the interests of the 84th St. group to delete the widening of 84th St. from one of the other proposed plans than to adopt "Sketch 7."

Dr. Jerome Cain, vice-president of the association, is proposing an amendment to the "Official's Committee" plan — a transportation plan approved by Mayor Helen Boosalis and other government officials — suggesting Saltillo Rd. and 148th St. as a two-lane east bypass for trucks.

Cain's amendment also calls for turning abandoned railroad beds into arterial roadways for the central city.

The association elected area representatives from four sections of 84th St.: Sherry E. Dean, north of O St.; Sandy Schulz, O St. to A St.; Joyce Johnson, A St. to Pioneers Blvd.; and Mary Ann Getz, south of Pioneers.

Exon Willing To Head Campaign

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

New York — A trio of Nebraska's political leaders Tuesday urged the Cornhusker state's Democratic delegation to provide Jimmy Carter with united support in Wednesday's presidential balloting.

And, in the process, Gov. J. James Exon said he is willing to head Carter's campaign in Nebraska if the presidential nominee wishes.

That suggestion came from a former Exon antagonist, Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, who described the governor as "the most effective and popular man in the state."

It all started with a caucus of Nebraska delegates who had supported Sen. Frank Church of Idaho for the party's presidential nomination.

A number of them have indicated a continued reluctance to cast their votes for Carter even though Church has declined to allow his name to be placed in nomination.

Nobody's Asked

"We're willing to work, but nobody's asked us," William Berryman of Omaha noted.

"We can't have a winner, but we don't want to be frozen out," state AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE) director Vic Meyers said.

"Well, I'm asking you to join my team and I want to join yours," former Omaha Mayor Eugene Leahy said.

Leahy, a Carter delegate, was co-coordinator of the Georgian's Nebraska primary campaign.

"We shouldn't let petty jealousies get in the way," he declared.

"Let's not make an ass out of ourselves," Carpenter counseled.

Muff It On Own

"If you want to muff it, then muff it. But you'll do it without my help."

Carpenter is a Carter alternate delegate.

"We'll look a little stupid, frankly, if Nebraska is not in total support for Governor Carter" in Wednesday's presidential balloting, Exon suggested.

Carpenter said Exon would be the ideal man to lead the Carter campaign in Nebraska this fall.

"Exon is the Democratic Party in Nebraska," the former Scottsbluff state senator said.

Willing To Campaign

Carpenter said he too is willing to campaign for Carter, especially in the agricultural areas of the state.

"I'm not a farmer but I know how to farm a farmer," he said.

If Exon would lead the Carter effort, "He's got my support," Meyers said.

"If he (Carter) wants me," the governor responded, "I would consider it an honor to run his campaign in Nebraska.

"And, if that happens, you people in this room would be involved," he told the Church delegates.

"You put together one of the greatest campaigns I ever saw" in winning the primary for Church last May, Exon declared.

The Carter campaign would "expand" from its current organization if he is chairman, the governor said.

But, if there is any lack of liaison with Church delegates now, Exon said, it's not Carter's fault.

Peacemaking Effort

Tuesday's events marked a peacemaking of sorts between Exon and Carpenter.

Carpenter, the governor said, contributed to Carter's primary success in the 3rd Congressional District with televised appeals to agricultural voters.

Carter won all seven delegates slots in the big 3rd while Church was winning 15 to 16 delegates posts in the two eastern Nebraska districts.

The plain talk may also have helped heal the divisions within the delegation.

"It cleared the air," Meyers said.

Later, at a caucus of the full delegation, Gov. Dan Walker of Illinois offered praise for Exon.

At governors meetings around the country, "I've seen Jim Exon time and again stand up" for agriculture, he told the delegates.

AP

Her Favorite

It's no secret which candidate is the favorite of Dorothy Hansen of Boise, an alternate delegate to the Democratic convention. Idaho Sen. Frank Church has been named as a possible vice presidential candidate.

Rain, Mild Temps In Panhandle

While the heat wave continued Tuesday in eastern and central Nebraska, residents of the Panhandle enjoyed temperatures in the 70s.

Heavy scattered thundershowers broke out during the evening behind a cold front extending from the Panhandle to north central Nebraska.

A funnel cloud was reported south of Ainsworth late in the afternoon, but apparently didn't touch the ground. Funnel clouds also were spotted in the O'Neill vicinity, according to the O'Neill Police Department. However, there were no reports of any of the clouds touching down

Omaha chalked up the state's highest temperature of 99 degrees Tuesday followed by Lincoln's 97. In Alliance the high was 78 while Chadron's was 79 Sidney's 59 was the state's low

Meanwhile, the demand for electricity produced by the state's two largest utilities hit a record peak Monday afternoon as the mercury climbed to near the 100 mark over most of the state.

Officials of the Omaha Public Power District said a record peak demand of 1,190,000 kilowatts broke the old mark of 1,134,000 kilowatts set last Aug. 22.

A spokesman for the Nebraska Public Power District said NPPD reached a record peak demand of 1,395,000 kilowatts, erasing the old mark of 1,335,000 kilowatts recorded July 18, 1974.

White Withstands Youth's Challenge

New York — Democratic State Chairman Dick White of Lincoln Tuesday night easily withstood a challenge to his selection as co-chairman of the party's national convention.

With National Chairman Robert Strauss hurrying the issue through to a quick voice vote decision, white's selection by the rules committee was ratified on the convention floor.

The 34-year-old Lincolnite, who still calls Valentine home, will assist in chairing the remainder of the national convention.

The challenge came from 19-year-old University of Mississippi student George Ready, whose supporters wanted a younger person to represent party youth in the co-chairman's role.

White is one of four co-chairmen, and was specifically nominated to represent younger Democrats.

Strauss called for a voice vote on the question of approving the entire slate of co-chairmen, including White, resolving the issue with a speedy vote.

Later, the convention confronted its first roll call vote on a relatively minor issue — a minority report from the rules committee which would reduce the number of committee members required to submit a minority report to the convention floor.

Nebraska delegates voted 3 to 20 on the minority report, which was defeated.

Supporting the minority were Donna Polk of Lincoln, Marylyn Felion of Omaha and Rowena Moore of Omaha.

In other Nebraska-related action, Gov. J. James Exon prepared to join four other governors in a Wednesday morning meeting with Jimmy Carter hours before his nomination for the presidency.

Carter will confer with the Democratic governors' executive committee, which also includes Govs. Reubin Askew of Florida. Marvin Mandel of Maryland, Pat Lucy of Wisconsin and Wendell Anderson of Minnesota.

Exon said he does not anticipate any discussion of Carter's vice presidential choice, nor would he have any advice to offer if asked.

All the names on Carter's list of propsects are acceptable to him, Exon said.

"I assume it will be a campaign strategy meeting," Exon said.

Nebraska delegates will caucus at their hotel Wednesday prior to the presidential nominating session.

At Exon's invitation, former Nebraskan Ted Sorensen, President Kennedy's White House counsel, will address the caucus.

Sorensen is now enlisted in Carter's campaign, and will assist with the talent hunt to fill key posts in a possible Carter administration.

Modular Home Law Proposal Said Faulty

Modular home-buyers, beware!

If you buy a modular house shipped from a reliable company and start to erect it on your lot, a city inspector could stop you and the bank could yank your loan.

At least that's the way State Department of Economic Development (DED) officials are reading proposed new regulations from U.S. Housing and Urban Development, governing mobile and modular homes.

Slated to go into effect in late summer or early fall, the regulations might result in one "buying what he thinks is a modular home and ends up having it defined as a mobile home," said Larry Bare, DED community affairs division director.

Bare said he believes the regulations are faulty in that they define a home not in the way it's constructed but in the way it's transported.

The State Housing Advisory Council has decided to investigate the impact of the new rules, for possible suggestions to revise them.

In defining mobile homes, Bare said, HUD apparently has ruled that if a modular home is shipped in a truck, it's still a modular home. But if it's transported to a site directly on wheels or a chassis, "it becomes a mobile home."

And that could mean a city inspector could refuse — under zoning ordinances — to allow building it on a city lot, requiring it placed instead in a mobile home park. And the bank could deny a conventional 30-year loan because the modular dwelling now falls under mobile home standards.

The Nebraska Mobile Homes and Recreational Vehicle Advisory Committee has formally objected to the HUD proposal.

The State Housing members are also investigating creation of a state-level, non-profit corporation that would be eligible for federal economic development money.

Bare said the corporation might not ever materialize, with possibilities now in first preliminary stages. Council members will confer with other states which have such organizations, to determine what kinds of programs they're engaged in and what projects they sponsor.

Pilot Hospitalized After Crash

Stromsburg (AP) — A pilot was hospitalized at York with minor injuries Tuesday night after a crop spraying plane crashed on takeoff from the Stromsburg airport.

Police Chief Berlin Gromlund said the pilot, Less Jensen of Stromsburg, in his 30s, was able to free himself from the wreckage.

Gromlund said the plane sustained extensive damage.

He said the cause of the crash was not determined and the Federal Aviation Administration will investigate.

Zumberge: Don't Blame NU

Any blame for migration of top University of Nebraska administrators to other parts of the country over the past few years lies with the job itself and not the university, said Dr. James Zumberge, former University of Nebraska-Lincoln chancellor.

"The higher education fraternity is noted for its mobility," said Zumberge, now president of Southern Methodist University in Texas.

"The comings and goings among top administrators have no intrinsic relationship to the quality of the university," said Zumberge, who served as UNL chancellor for four years.

Zumberge was in Lincoln Tuesday for the South Central Jurisidctional Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Zumberge, who has been SMU president for 10 months, said he was "sort of out of the main stream in Lincoln, Nebraska," and learned of NU President D. B. Varner's resignation from his daughter who is a graduate student in Lincoln.

When asked about qualifications for Varner's replacement, Zumberge said he was sure the Regents would be able to choose from people who have "a thorough understanding of education and are good salesmen for higher education."

Departing Volunteers Leave Mark

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

VISTA workers will be leaving Lincoln in October, but not without having made their mark.

That's the assessment of VISTA (Volunteers In Service To America) supervisor Tom Ekvall of the Lincoln Community Development Department in response to concern by persons seeking continuation of the program.

Plans to phase the program out in October are not new; they were included in original proposals under the Community Development Act of the Housing and Urban Development Department, Ekvall said. VISTA volunteers have been in Lincoln on a year-to-year basis, with the understanding that they will serve for one year, he added.

One VISTA worker has already left Lincoln and is working in a similar program in California. Another has gone on to graduate school.

"We naturally hate to see them go, but they have accomplished what we wanted them to," Ekvall said.

Those accomplishments have been at the neighborhood level where they have helped develop a strong liaison between neighborhood groups and the city, he said.

Concerns over the program's being phased out came to a head recently as some neighborhood groups expressed doubts about their continuing relationship with city hall.

Ekvall's answer is "we don't intend to ignore the neighborhoods."

A neighborhood liaison program is being established utilizing low-income people from the various neighborhoods. Liaison people will assume some of the duties of the VISTA workers and programs should continue as they have in the past, he said.

The neighborhood representatives will allow the program to have some form of continuity, as originally intended when VISTA was "hired" to do the job several years ago, he added.

"Anytime you get tremendous involvement you have those who are concerned when a cut is announced," Ekvall said.

NU Energy Research Center Proposed

An Energy Research and Development Center, the idea of new University of Nebraska-Lincoln Chancellor Roy Young, will be proposed to the NU Board of Regents Saturday.

The center will consolidate existing energy-related studies on the Lincoln campus "much the same as we did with water resources then years ago," said Academic Vice Chancellor Adam Breckenridge.

Funding for the center, which will be headed by a director responsible to the chancellor, has not been determined, Breckenridge said.

However the initial activities will be supported by "internal readjustments and a small allocation from the chancellor's discretionary fund provided by the University of Nebraska Foundation," Young wrote in the proposal to the Regents.

The Lincoln Electric System and Nebraska power districts have funds set aside for energy research and have indicated interest in channeling some of that money to the university.

The center will mesh "urgent and broad scale energy problems" with UNL's capability to consider energy resource development and conservation, Young said in the proposal.

Areas the center will deal with include consumption planning, agricultural uses and needs, solar, wind, nuclear and other forms of energy, waste disposal, environmental, social, esthetic and economic effects and public policy.

Inmates To Get Raise

Fort Madison, Iowa (UPI) — Adult correction director Calvin Auger said Iowa prison inmates will receive a wage increase

California Man Proposed For NU Ag Ed Chairman

Dr. Osmund S. Gilbertson, chairman of the agricultural education department at California Polytechnic State University, will be recommended for appointment as chairman of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln department of agricultural education during the Saturday Board of Regents meeting.

Dr. Gilbertson holds B.S., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in agricultural education from the University of Minnesota. He was consultant for the National FFA Board of Directors and has served on several committees for the American Association of Teacher Educators in Agriculture.

In his research experience, Gilbertson has collected data on individual on-farm instruction programs, studied agricultural manpower, planned a six-year vocational agricultural curriculum, and prepared an instructional packet for training local FFA advisors.

His salary will be $31,000 annually.

The board is also expected to approve the appointment of Lancaster County Extension Agent Emery Nelson as the pesticide training program coordinator at UNL.

Nelson, who has spent 33 years with the county extension service, holds B.S. and M.S. degrees in agronomy from NU.

Threat Charge Dropped; Psychiatric Care Ordered

Omaha (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Robert Denney dismissed Tuesday a charge that Raymond Farnham of Fredonia, N.Y., threatened the life of President Ford.

The dismissal was requested by Asst. U.S. Atty. Michael Schleich after the Douglas County Board of Mental Health ordered Friday that Farnham be committed for psychiatric treatment.

Schleich said Farnham, 23, will be committed for 60 days, after which he will be examined again to determine whether the commitment should be continued.

Schleich said Farnham will be transferred to a Veterans Administration hospital at Buffalo, N.Y.

Farnham allegedly threatened the President in a conversation with a nurse at the Veterans Administration hsopital in Omaha.

He was arrested at the hospital by the Secret Service May 6, the day before Ford arrived in Nebrska to campaign.

The federal complaint filed against Farnham said he had been a patient at the VA hospital since April 29, when he was voluntarily admitted for psychiatric treatment.

After Farnham was examined earlier at the Federal Medical Center at Springfield, Mo., Denney ruled he was mentally incompetent to stand trial on the criminal charge.

Mayor Gets Real Sense Of Power

Mayor Helen Boosalis turned the small black handle on the giant metal cabinet studded with dials.

Outside four-foot knife blade switches chopped downward. Blue sparks flew. The metal core of the huge transformer emitted a dull "whump" and hummed into operation.

"It's one of the few times you get a feeling of power in the mayor's office," Mrs. Helen Boosalis said.

It was part of a ceremony organized by the Lincoln Electric System to mark the installation of 5½ miles of underground cable from the 29th and Leighton substation to 20th and Pioneers Blvd.

The three cables in the trench carry 115,000 volts, enough power for 30,000 homes. It will permit the phasing out of some overhead power lines and make it possible for LES to bring power to new customers.

The project, approved by the LES board and the City Council, cost LES ratepayers $2 million. One of its advantages is that it will not be susceptible to storm damage.

Council Asks For 3 Budget Cuts

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Take three more whacks, please, mayor.

That was the surprise request made Tuesday night by the City Council as they began deciding how to spend the taxpayer's money next year.

The council's request actually was that Mayor Helen Boosalis prepare three budget cuts totaling $500,000, $1 million and $1.5 million, trimming personnel or services of low priority.

It was only on Sunday that the mayor released her recommended budget. Traditionally, the council has taken it from that point without asking her where cuts should be made.

Sparking the move was Councilman Bob Sikyta, who said the request was made to "keep as much harmony as possible."

The request passed with no dissenting votes.

"We're faced with a critical situation," Councilman Steve Cook said in explaining his vote to the mayor, referring to the city's rapid climb to the mill levy limit on taxes.

"Next year is going to be a very serious budget problem, even to the extent of limiting jobs," Councilman Bob Jeambey said, adding that he would like to see the crisis "spread over two years."

Pains were taken by some council members to ease any fears the mayor might have that the council was trying to shift blame to her for possibly unpopular reductions in city services.

Jeambey told the mayor he would not support the move if he thought the motive was "tossing the snake back in your lap."

Council member Sue Bailey said the move was to spur "brainstorming" during which the mayor and council members would "put their collective heads together."

Council Chairman Max Denney made it clear he is not allowing the mayor the final word.

"I still want to reserve to myself ... when you come back ... to say that more should be cut or that you're wrong in this priority," he said.

Boosalis told the council that it would be at least 10 days until she would be ready with the additional cuts.

In the meantime, the council continued its customary process of studying different segments of the budget in a series of meetings over the next several weeks.

In its first such session Tuesday night the council made only one cut, of $50,000 from the city's contingency funds, used for unexpected spending.

The council spent a good deal of its time haggling over an increase of four people in a new budget division, but finally approved the new positions.

The council has asked the mayor to provide it with a clearer budget analysis than has been provided in previous years.

Council OKs Beer Sales Once Again

The City Council apparently is finding it difficult to turn its back on alcohol.

In a specially called meeting that prefaced a Tuesday night budget meeting, the council once again authorized the sale of beer at its golf courses, where it has been sold in clubhouses for several years.

In the eyes of Councilman Dick Baker, the move was necessary because the State Liquor Control Commission is "playing games" with the city.

Pioneer Golf Course has been without beer for a month because of an earlier snafu in which the commission suddenly decided to require the approval of both the council and the county board before approving the golf pro as holder of the license.

After both bodies approved the pro, the commission once again refused to approve the application until the council authorized again this year the sale of alcoholic beverages on the golf courses.

The council held the special meeting on the assumption that it would pave the way for beer to be served at Pioneer Golf Course Wednesday during the men's city golf tournament.

The commission's ruling that authorization for beer sales on city property must be given annually is a departure from previous years, when the commission automatically approved the annual application by golf pros.

City Budget Data Said Insufficient

Mayor Helen Boosalis's budget does not give the City Council the information it needs to do its job, council members were told Tuesday by their own private accountants.

"You just don't have very much data," Frank Budetti of Touche, Ross and Co told the council at an early morning meeting.

"Should you not expect and demand more data before accepting the budget?" he asked the council.

His comments apparently were aimed at a subtle shift in the manner in which city hall does business. City government is converting to a new kind of accounting — program budgeting.

Its outstanding feature is that specific programs, or stated another way, separate tasks, are identified.

Then accounts figure how much its costs to do each task.

The new method supposedly makes it easier for the council to understand what city departments are doing and to decide what level of service should be provided at each task and what priority each should have.

In an earlier session with the council the accountants prompted editorial wrath with their suggestion that perhaps street sweeping or city flower gardening could be cut back.

Budetti contended that the mayor's administration is moving too slowly on converting to program budgeting. In 160 "man days" it should be possible to go through each department and identify the programs in each, he said.

The mayor's administration has been working on the conversion for the past year.

He reminded the council that his own firm, in 40 days, had gone through two city departments which account for one-fourth of the city's tax funds.

The comments of the accountants appeared to meet with a lukewarm response from some council members, particularly those who are political allies of the mayor.

"I'm a little disappointed," Councilman Bob Jeambey said of the mayor's budget. "But its a lot more meaningful than what we had last year."

Touche Ross accountant Hugh Swink told the council that the steps being taken by Boosalis's administration are taking city hall into program budgeting "by the back door."

Apparently, city officials are taking great care to ensure that precisely accurate costs are assigned to each program, slowing the process of identifying the programs, Swink said.

But Budetti and Swink said that generally accurate costs could be assigned to the programs much more speedily, and that generally accurate costs were good enough for the council's purposes.

With the present approach, he and Budetti said, it may be five years before the City Council is given the kind of information it wants when deciding how to budget tax dollars.

Group Decides Not To Support Street Plan

An organization of citizens who live along 84th St. voted Tuesday night not to support the street improvement plan put before the Goals and Policies committee by the Lincoln Alliance.

The Greater Eastside Citizen's Association, made up of people who oppose widening 84th St. and making it a permanent truck bypass, took the action after hearing from Doug Berman, an alliance spokesman.

German told the group of 25 persons that the alliance plan was drawn up by people from various neighborhood organizations, in an attempt to give each faction what it wants while making each sensitive to one another's needs.

German is a member of the Alliance Transportation Task Force, which proposed the plan, known as "Sketch 7".

The alliance plan calls for no widening of 84th St., but also deletes several street widenings and one-way street pairs from central Lincoln.

The Goals and Policies Committee is slated to vote on the plans July 22.

Some people at the meeting argued that it would better serve the interests of the 84th St. group to delete the widening of 84th St. from one of the other proposed plans than to adopt "Sketch 7."

Dr. Jerome Cain, vice-president of the association, is proposing an amendment to the "Official's Committee" plan — a transportation plan approved by Mayor Helen Boosalis and other government officials — suggesting Saltillo Rd. and 148th St. as a two-lane east bypass for trucks.

Cain's amendment also calls for turning abandoned railroad beds into arterial roadways for the central city.

The association elected area representatives from four sections of 84th St.: Sherry E. Dean, north of O St., Sandy Schulz, O St. to A St.; Joyce Johnson, A St. to Pioneers Blvd.; and Mary Ann Getz, south of Pioneers.

Market Runs Into Profit Taking

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Tuesday, running into stiff opposition from profit takers after the sharp gains of the two previous sessions.

Trading was the heaviest in nearly four weeks at the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up 19.23 points last Friday and Monday, pulled back 5.15 to 1,006.06.

Gainers just barely outnumbered losers in the over-all count of NYSE-listed issues.

Big Board volume came to 27.55 million shares, up from 23.75 million Monday and the largest total since a 27.81 million-share day on June 17.

The Dow picked up nearly 4 points at the outset in a burst of enthusiasm over the average's rise to its highest closing level in nearly 3½ years on Monday.

But it turned back shortly thereafter as traders began cashing in some profits from the market's recent gains.

Analysts said the profit taking might have been encouraged by Federal Reserve operations in the money markets which suggested it was not aiming to foster any further decline in short term interest rates for the moment.

The Dow's relatively weak showing stemmed partly from a drop of more than 2 points in Esmark shares. The company late Monday projected substantially lower earnings for the fiscal quarter that ends July 31.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index eased .23 to 105.67, and the Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .11 to 56.43.

S. F. Segnar Is President Of Northern

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Northern Natural Gas Co. Tuesday named S.F. Segnar as its new president as it created a new position of vice chairman and added two directors to its board.

W.A. Strauss, 54, who has been chairman of the board and president, said he will remain chairman and chief executive officer of the diversified gas pipe line company which sells natural gas both wholesale and retail and operates liquid fuel and petrochemical facilities.

Segnar, 48, who previously headed Northern's liquid fuels division, will be chief operating officer. He was also elected to Northern's board of directors.

In other changes, Strauss announced Dale Te Kolste, 56, executive vice president for administration and finance, was named to the newly created post of vice chairman of the board as additional duties.

J.R. Becraft, 57, will succeed Segnar as president of the liquid fuels group. He was formerly president of Hydrocarbon Transportation, Inc. and Northern Gas Products divisions.

Northern's board increased the quarterly dividend on common stock by 8 cents per share, bringing the quarterly rate to 52 cents, payable Sept. 20 to stockholders of record Sept. 1. The indicated annual dividend is $2.08 per share.

Strauss said the dividend increase is the largest in the company's history and that this is the fourth consecutive year that Northern has increased its dividend.

Hogs, Cattle Drop Sharply

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Both hog and cattle prices turned sharply lower tn the Omaha livestock market Tuesday.

The day's hog run was estimated at about 3,000 head, and the trade on barrows and gilts was called fairly active.

Soybeans Fall; Corn, Wheat Up

Chicago (AP) — Soybean futures fell 15 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday but corn and wheat futures, subjects of a bearish Agriculture Department crop forecast, closed mostly higher.

Oats futures advanced the limit of 6 cents a bushel. Soybean meal lost $5 a ton and soybean oil declined about 35 points, or one-third cent a pound. Iced broilers were about steady to ½ cent a pound lower in very light trade.

The selling in the soybean complex was largely of a profit-taking nature but it was led by commercial interests. One major exporter was a prominent seller of soybeans and meal and it was thought this was a hedging action against foreign purchases.

PepsiCo Inc. Tells Best Growth

New York (AP) — PepsiCo Inc., the country's second largest soft drink maker, reported 33.3% increase in second quarter earnings, from $26.42 million or $1.11 per share in 1975 to $35.03 million or $1.48 per share this year.

In the quarter ending June 12, sales rose 11.8%, from $559.59 million in 1975 to $625.44 million for the second quarter this year.

Chairman Donald M. Kendall also announced PepsiCo had its best six-months earnings growth in company history.

The half-year increase was 32.2%, from $42.08 million or $1.77 per share in 1975 to $55.59 million or $2.34 per share for the first half of 1976. Sales for the first half of 1976 were up 11.3%, from $1.03 billion in 1975 to $1.14 billion in 1976.

Kendall said the second quarter earnings gain stemmed mainly from exceptional growth in the U.S. soft drink and snack food business. He said PepsiCo's profit margins continue to improve, helped by cost savings in bottling and by productivity gains.

Exon Willing To Head Campaign

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

New York — A trio of Nebraska's political leaders Tuesday urged the Cornhusker state's Democratic delegation to provide Jimmy Carter with united support in Wednesday's presidential balloting.

And, in the process, Gov. J. James Exon said he is willing to head Carter's campaign in Nebraska if the presidential nominee wishes.

That suggestion came from a former Exon antagonist, Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, who described the governor as "the most effective and popular man in the state."

It all started with a caucus of Nebraska delegates who had supported Sen. Frank Church of Idaho for the party's presidential nomination.

A number of them have indicated a continued reluctance to cast their votes for Carter even though Church has declined to allow his name to be placed in nomination.

Nobody's Asked

"We're willing to work, but nobody's asked us," William Berryman of Omaha noted.

"We can't have a winner, but we don't want to be frozen out," state AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE) director Vic Meyers said.

"Well, I'm asking you to join my team and I want to join yours," former Omaha Mayor Eugene Leahy said.

Leahy, a Carter delegate, was co-coordinator of the Georgian's Nebraska primary campaign.

"We shouldn't let petty jealousies get in the way," he declared.

"Let's not make an ass out of ourselves," Carpenter counseled.

Muff It On Own

"If you want to muff it, then muff it. But you'll do it without my help."

Carpenter is a Carter alternate delegate.

"We'll look a little stupid, frankly, if Nebraska is not in total support for Governor Carter" in Wednesday's presidential balloting, Exon suggested.

Carpenter said Exon would be the ideal man to lead the Carter campaign in Nebraska this fall.

"Exon is the Democratic Party in Nebraska," the former Scottsbluff state senator said.

Willing To Campaign

Carpenter said he too is willing to campaign for Carter, especially in the agricultural areas of the state.

"I'm not a farmer but I know how to farm a farmer," he said.

If Exon would lead the Carter effort, "He's got my support," Meyers said.

"If he (Carter) wants me," the governor responded, "I would consider it an honor to run his campaign in Nebraska.

"And, if that happens, you people in this room would be involved," he told the Church delegates.

"You put together one of the greatest campaigns I ever saw" in winning the primary for Church last May, Exon declared.

The Carter campaign would "expand" from its current organization if he is chairman, the governor said.

But, if there is any lack of liaison with Church delegates now, Exon said, it's not Carter's fault.

Peacemaking Effort

Tuesday's events marked a peacemaking of sorts between Exon and Carpenter.

Carpenter, the governor said, contributed to Carter's primary success in the 3rd Congressional District with televised appeals to agricultural voters.

Carter won all seven delegates slots in the big 3rd while Church was winning 15 to 16 delegates posts in the two eastern Nebraska districts.

The plain talk may also have helped heal the divisions within the delegation.

"It cleared the air," Meyers said.

Later, at a caucus of the full delegation, Gov. Dan Walker of Illinois offered praise for Exon.

At governors meetings around the country, "I've seen Jim Exon time and again stand up" for agriculture, he told the delegates.

Her Favorite

It's no secret which candidate is the favorite of Dorothy Hansen of Boise, an alternate delegate to the Democratic convention. Idaho Sen. Frank Church has been named as a possible vice presidential candidate.

Rain, Mild Temps In Panhandle

While the heat wave continued Tuesday in eastern and central Nebraska, residents of the Panhandle enjoyed temperatures in the 70s.

Heavy scattered thundershowers broke out during the evening behind a cold front extending from the Panhandle to north central Nebraska.

A funnel cloud was reported south of Ainsworth late in the afternoon, but apparently didn't touch the ground. Funnel clouds also were spotted in the O'Neill vicinity, according to the O'Neill Police Department. However, there were no reports of any of the clouds touching down

Omaha chalked up the state's highest temperature of 99 degrees Tuesday followed by Lincoln's 97. In Alliance the high was 78 while Chadron's was 79 Sidney's 59 was the state's low

Meanwhile, the demand for electricity produced by the state's two largest utilities hit a record peak Monday afternoon as the mercury climbed to near the 100 mark over most of the state.

Officials of the Omaha Public Power District said a record peak demand of 1,190,000 kilowatts broke the old mark of 1,134,000 kilowatts set last Aug. 22.

A spokesman for the Nebraska Public Power District said NPPD reached a record peak demand of 1,395,000 kilowatts, erasing the old mark of 1,335,000 kilowatts recorded July 18, 1974.

White Withstands Youth's Challenge

New York — Democratic State Chairman Dick White of Lincoln Tuesday night easily withstood a challenge to his selection as co-chairman of the party's national convention.

With National Chairman Robert Strauss hurrying the issue through to a quick voice vote decision, white's selection by the rules committee was ratified on the convention floor.

The 34-year-old Lincolnite, who still calls Valentine home, will assist in chairing the remainder of the national convention.

The challenge came from 19-year-old University of Mississippi student George Ready, whose supporters wanted a yolnger person to represent party youth in the co-chairman's role.

White is one of four co-chairmen, and was specifically nominated to represent younger Democrats.

Strauss called for a voice vote on the question of approving the entire slate of co-chairmen, including White, resolving the issue with a speedy vote.

Later, the convention confronted its first roll call vote on a relatively minor issue — a minority report from the rules committee which would reduce the number of committee members required to submit a minority report to the convention floor.

Nebraska delegates voted 3 to 20 on the minority report, which was defeated.

Supporting the minority were Donna Polk of Lincoln, Marylyn Felion of Omaha and Rowena Moore of Omaha.

In other Nebraska-related action, Gov. J. James Exon prepared to join four other governors in a Wednesday morning meeting with Jimmy Carter hours before his nomination for the presidency.

Carter will confer with the Democratic governors' executive committee, which also includes Govs. Reubin Askew of Florida. Marvin Mandel of Maryland, Pat Lucy of Wisconsin and Wendell Anderson of Minnesota.

Exon said he does not anticipate any discussion of Carter's vice presidential choice, nor would he have any advice to offer if asked.

All the names on Carter's list of propsects are acceptable to him, Exon said.

"I assume it will be a campaign strategy meeting," Exon said.

Nebraska delegates will caucus at their hotel Wednesday prior to the presidential nominating session.

At Exon's invitation, former Nebraskan Ted Sorensen, President Kennedy's White House counsel, will address the caucus.

Sorensen is now enlisted in Carter's campaign, and will assist with the talent hunt to fill key posts in a possible Carter administration.

Modular Home Law Proposal Said Faulty

Modular home-buyers, beware!

If you buy a modular house shipped from a reliable company and start to erect it on your lot, a city inspector could stop you and the bank could yank your loan.

At least that's the way State Department of Economic Development (DED) officials are reading proposed new regulations from U.S. Housing and Urban Development, governing mobile and modular homes.

Slated to go into effect in late summer or early fall, the regulations might result in one "buying what he thinks is a modular home and ends up having it defined as a mobile home," said Larry Bare, DED community affairs division director.

Bare said he believes the regulations are faulty in that they define a home not in the way it's constructed but in the way it's transported.

The State Housing Advisory Council has decided to investigate the impact of the new rules, for possible suggestions to revise them.

In defining mobile homes, Bare said, HUD apparently has ruled that if a modular home is shipped in a truck, it's still a modular home. But if it's transported to a site directly on wheels or a chassis, "it becomes a mobile home."

And that could mean a city inspector could refuse — under zoning ordinances — to allow building it on a city lot, requiring it placed instead in a mobile home park. And the bank could deny a conventional 30-year loan because the modular dwelling now falls under mobile home standards.

The Nebraska Mobile Homes and Recreational Vehicle Advisory Committee has formally objected to the HUD proposal.

The State Housing members are also investigating creation of a state-level, non-profit corporation that would be eligible for federal economic development money.

Bare said the corporation might not ever materialize, with possibilities now in first preliminary stages. Council members will confer with other states which have such organizations, to determine what kinds of programs they're engaged in and what projects they sponsor.

Zumberge: Don't Blame NU

Any blame for migration of top University of Nebraska administrators to other parts of the country over the past few years lies with the job itself and not the university, said Dr. James Zumberge, former University of Nebraska-Lincoln chancellor.

"The higher education fraternity is noted for its mobility," said Zumberge, now president of Southern Methodist University in Texas.

"The comings and goings among top administrators have no intrinsic relationship to the quality of the university," said Zumberge, who served as UNL chancellor for four years.

Zumberge was in Lincoln Tuesday for the South Central Jurisidctional Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Zumberge, who has been SMU president for 10 months, said he was "sort of out of the main stream in Lincoln, Nebraska," and learned of NU President D. B. Varner's resignation from his daughter who is a graduate student in Lincoln.

When asked about qualifications for Varner's replacement, Zumberge said he was sure the Regents would be able to choose from people who have "a thorough understanding of education and are good salesmen for higher education."

NU Energy Research Center Proposed

An Energy Research and Development Center, the idea of new University of Nebraska-Lincoln Chancellor Roy Young, will be proposed to the NU Board of Regents Saturday.

The center will consolidate existing energy-related studies on the Lincoln campus "much the same as we did with water resources then years ago," said Academic Vice Chancellor Adam Breckenridge.

Funding for the center, which will be headed by a director responsible to the chancellor, has not been determined, Breckenridge said.

However the initial activities will be supported by "internal readjustments and a small allocation from the chancellor's discretionary fund provided by the University of Nebraska Foundation," Young wrote in the proposal to the Regents.

The Lincoln Electric System and Nebraska power districts have funds set aside for energy research and have indicated interest in channeling some of that money to the university.

The center will mesh "urgent and broad scale energy problems" with UNL's capability to consider energy resource development and conservation, Young said in the proposal.

Areas the center will deal with include consumption planning, agricultural uses and needs, solar, wind, nuclear and other forms of energy, waste disposal, environmental, social, esthetic and economic effects and public policy.

California Man Proposed For NU Ag Ed Chairman

Dr. Osmund S. Gilbertson, chairman of the agricultural education department at California Polytechnic State University, will be recommended for appointment as chairman of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln department of agricultural education during the Saturday Board of Regents meeting.

Dr. Gilbertson holds B.S., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in agricultural education from the University of Minnesota. He was consultant for the National FFA Board of Directors and has served on several committees for the American Association of Teacher Educators in Agriculture.

In his research experience, Gilbertson has collected data on individual on-farm instruction programs, studied agricultural manpower, planned a six-year vocational agricultural curriculum, and prepared an instructional packet for training local FFA advisors.

His salary will be $31,000 annually.

The board is also expected to approve the appointment of Lancaster County Extension Agent Emery Nelson as the pesticide training program coordinator at UNL.

Nelson, who has spent 33 years with the county extension service, holds B.S. and M.S. degrees in agronomy from NU.

Threat Charge Dropped; Psychiatric Care Ordered

Omaha (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Robert Denney dismissed Tuesday a charge that Raymond Farnham of Fredonia, N.Y., threatened the life of President Ford.

The dismissal was requested by Asst. U.S. Atty. Michael Schleich after the Douglas County Board of Mental Health ordered Friday that Farnham be committed for psychiatric treatment.

Schleich said Farnham, 23, will be committed for 60 days, after which he will be examined again to determine whether the commitment should be continued.

Schleich said Farnham will be transferred to a Veterans Administration hospital at Buffalo, N.Y.

Farnham allegedly threatened the President in a conversation with a nurse at the Veterans Administration hsopital in Omaha.

He was arrested at the hospital by the Secret Service May 6, the day before Ford arrived in Nebrska to campaign.

The federal complaint filed against Farnham said he had been a patient at the VA hospital since April 29, when he was voluntarily admitted for psychiatric treatment.

After Farnham was examined earlier at the Federal Medical Center at Springfield, Mo., Denney ruled he was mentally incompetent to stand trial on the criminal charge.

Departing Volunteers Leave Mark

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

VISTA workers will be leaving Lincoln in October, but not without having made their mark.

That's the assessment of VISTA (Volunteers In Service To America) supervisor Tom Ekvall of the Lincoln Community Development Department in response to concern by persons seeking continuation of the program.

Plans to phase the program out in October are not new; they were included in original proposals under the Community Development Act of the Housing and Urban Development Department, Ekvall said. VISTA volunteers have been in Lincoln on a year-to-year basis, with the understanding that they will serve for one year, he added.

One VISTA worker has already left Lincoln and is working in a simular program in California. Another has gone on to graduate school.

"We naturally hate to see them go, but they have accomplished wflat we wanted them to," Ekvall said.

Those accomplishments have been at the neighborhood level where they have helped develop a strong liaison between neighborhood groups and the city, he said.

Concerns over the program's being phased out came to a head recently as some neighborhood groups expressed doubts about their continuing relationship with city hall.

Ekvall's answer is "we don't intend to ignore the neighborhoods."

A neighborhood liaison program is being established utilizing low-income people from the various neighborhoods. Liaison people will assume some of the duties of the VISTA workers and programs should continue as they have in the past, he said.

The neighborhood representatives will allow the program to have some form of continuity, as originally intended when VISTA was "hired" to do the job several years ago, he added.

"Anytime you get tremendous involvement you have those who are concerned when a cut is announced," Ekvall said.

Mayor Gets Real Sense Of Power

Mayor Helen Boosalis turned the small black handle on the giant metal cabinet studded with dials.

Outside four-foot knife blade switches chopped downward. Blue sparks flew. The metal core of the huge transformer emitted a dull "whump" and hummed into operation.

"It's one of the few times you get a feeling of power in the mayor's office," Mrs. Helen Boosalis said.

It was part of a ceremony organized by the Lincoln Electric System to mark the installation of 5½ miles of underground cable from the 29th and Leighton substation to 20th and Pioneers Blvd.

The three cables in the trench carry 115,000 volts, enough power for 30,000 homes. It will permit the phasing out of some overhead power lines and make it possible for LES to bring power to new customers.

The project, approved by the LES board and the City Council, cost LES ratepayers $2 million. One of its advantages is that it will not be susceptible to storm damage.

Jogging Is Probable Cause Of Enlarged Calves, Charleyhorse

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have jogged for about two years now. My calves are getting large, to the point where now I can't zip up my knee-high boots. Will they keep getting larger?

Also, last year while jogging on a hot day one of my calves went into a severe cramp. I thought a baseball had hit my leg. I fell over and for days I couldn't put any weight on it. Have you heard of cramping causing such soreness? — Mrs. B. J.

The suddenness of the pain, as you describe it, suggests a charleyhorse, a result of severe muscle strain. It occurs when people put muscles to unaccustomed use for prolonged periods, as you did when you began jogging.

It reminds me of my favorite charleyhorse story. It occurred one hot summer day on the golf course. My companion, who hadn't golfed in years, was showing the strain. Suddenly he pulled up short and let out a yell. When I turned he was lying on the ground in pain.

He thought someone's tee shot had struck him in the back of the leg. But there was no tee-off area anywhere around. Nor was there any noticeable bruise at the point where he said the bll struck him: Later, he used the same term as you did — it was as though a baseball had hit him. He hobbled for a week.

A charleyhorse can be mighty painful if there is bleeding into the tissues. The pain usually disappears in a few days with no lasting results.

If you were perspiring greatly from jogging in the heat, that could have contributed to the leg muscle injury.

You don't report any repeat episodes, so you probably have conditioned your legs sufficiently by now.

As to your calves enlarging: They will enlarge to a certain point and stop. After two years of jogging they probably have reached that point.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I've learned that our five-year-old boy has otosclerosis. The specialist was baffled. We got a second opinion.

What do you think of this? Can you tell me more about it? I should mention that my mother has this, too. — Mrs. D. J.

It is a sponginess of certain bones of the middle ear, rare in youngsters his age. There could be hereditary factors at work, since your mother has it, too.

Any obstruction in the nose and throat, such as enlarged tonsils or adenoids, should be removed. Sodium fluoride has also been used to combat this. You might discuss this with your specialist.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you give me some suggestions or advice about drop foot. The front of the foot drops down and I have no control over it. I am unable to get any help. — Mrs. J. K.

This is a nerve disorder resulting in paralysis or a wasting of the muscles of the lower leg. It can be hereditary or the result of poisoning — by lead or alcohol, especially.

Often, physical therapy — massage and exercise — can improve things somewhat. Usually special braces are needed to support the foot. Males are more often affected by this than females.

In some cases there may be a protrusion of a spinal disc involved, and it may be possible to treat that surgically. I suggest you consult a neurologist to determine any treatable cause.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For many years I've been told I have a chronic bladder infection, and I have taken antibiotics for this often. I went to an allergy specialist and she told me the same thing — a chronic infection. Sometimes the doctor has it under control, but it reappears. I feel part of it is a food allergy.

Can you give me an explanation? — J. B.

Your suspicion of an allergy as a partial cause of your bladder problem could be correct, and you should continue your search, particularly for an offending food.

You could also have a coexisting chronic infection, for which the antibiotic would be effective. And if antibiotic therapy ends your bladder symptoms, you would have to suspect it was an infection rather than an allergy. An antiboiotic would have no effect on an allergy.

A search for the site of infection should be initiated.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Proper nutrition is important in supplying the body with calcium and other minerals needed for bone growth and repair.

Bone minerals are constantly being torn down and rebuilt through the blood flow between the skeleton and the rest of the body. The Nebraska Medical Association reports that most of the calcium in the body is found in the bones, but calcium is also needed for the contraction of muscles, beating of the heart and blood clotting.

When the heart and other parts of the body needing calcium cannot get the amount needed, your body takes calcium from the bones.

Market Runs Into Profit Taking

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Tuesday, running into stiff opposition from profit takers after the sharp gains of the two previous sessions.

Trading was the heaviest in nearly four weeks at the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up 19.23 points last Friday and Monday, pulled back 5.15 to 1,006.06.

Gainers just barely outnumbered losers in the over-all count of NYSE-listed issues.

Big Board volume came to 27.55 million shares, up from 23.75 million Monday and the largest total since a 27.81 million-share day on June 17.

The Dow picked up nearly 4 points at the outset in a burst of enthusiasm over the average's rise to its highest closing level in nearly 3½ years on Monday.

But it turned back shortly thereafter as traders began cashing in some profits from the market's recent gains.

Analysts said the profit taking might have been encouraged by Federal Reserve operations in the money markets which suggested it was not aiming to foster any further decline in short term interest rates for the moment.

The Dow's relatively weak showing stemmed partly from a drop of more than 2 points in Esmark shares. The company late Monday projected substantially lower earnings for the fiscal quarter that ends July 31.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index eased .23 to 105.67, and the Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .11 to 56.43.

Sentence Hangs Over His Head

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

What is the death penalty?

"It's a long, drawn-out process ... something you have to live with 24 hours a day."

So said Richard Holtan, 41, one of five men sentenced to die in Nebraska's electric chair, in an interview.

Three of the other five declined to be interviewed and the fifth, Wesley Peery, 51, of Lincoln, was still being processed into the Nebraska Penal Complex and was not available.

The U.S. Supreme Court outlawed all death penalty laws in 1972 as discriminatory. Nebraska and 34 other states re-enacted capital punishment laws and on July 2 the court handed down a second decision, upholding capital punishment in concept.

'Wholesale Murder'

From a practical standpoint, Holtan said, "You are talking about wholesale murder," in view of the more than 600 persons on death rows across the United States.

The key decision made by the court was that death was not cruel and unusual punishment.

"Certainly it is. There are so many aspects that are cruel ... and I'm talking now about from the sentencing on," Holtan said.

In the early days, he said, "it was done almost immediately" and was reserved strictly for premeditated murder. Today, he said appeals make it anything but immediate and a death that is not premeditated can result in a death sentence.

Pleaded No Contest

Holtan pleaded no contest, technically different from a guilty plea, to committing a murder while in the commission of a robbery. He was accused of shooting a man in an Omaha bar two years ago.

A major argument for the death penalty is that it is a deterrent.

"It is absolutely not a deterrent," Holtan said. "I've known a lot of cons and they didn't think about the end result being murder. A situation developed and it happened."

He also said he disputed a recent news story in which a decision was allegedly made to kill a person in Iowa because it, unlike Nebraska, did not have the death penalty.

Holtan, a veteran of 20 years in various penal institutions, was asked if he thought there are any cases where the death penalty is justified.

"That possibility exists," he said.

Holtan said he did not expect the death penalty when he pleaded no contest.

"But I knew when I gave myself up in Hawaii it was going to be a long trip."

Because the appeal process has only begun in Holtan's case, he was asked if there is any hope.

"There is and there isn't."

He said he wasn't going to let the situation "overwhelm" him. His ability to handle his sentence got him out of the state prison's adjustment, or isolation, center and into a job in the dental clinic. He said he spends a lot of his free time reading and plays softball.

End 'Inevitable'

Holtan said he realizes in the back of his mind there is the "inevitable" to accept.

"I haven't quite done that yet. But I am having trouble projecting beyond ... beyond anything like say six months. All you can really do is live for the moment. After all, even though the inevitable is there, who can really see the end?"

"Yet, I have a feeling ... a feeling that I still have something else to give."

But he said what he had to give might be limited because of time and said that was one reason he agreed to be interviewed. He said he hoped what he had to say would show those on the outside that convicts are human beings and ways would be found to help the criminal become a useful citizen.

Bicyclist Heading Across Continent

By JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writer

If you thought you were hot Sunday sitting out in your back yard, consider Lowell White, a California resident who rode his bicycle from Grand Island to Lincoln.

White made the 92-mile trip in nine hours on his 10-speed bike. But the trip was neither unusual nor taxing for him; White is in the midst of a cross-country bicycle trek from Los Angeles to New York.

This is the second such trip for White, who travels to various Boys' Clubs across the country to work with youth and teach bicycle fitness and safety. In September of 1975, he made the reverse trip in 2½ months.

He said he averages 95 miles a day, and the most he's ever traveled in a day is 150 miles. ("That was with a good tail wind.")

White, a physical education major at California State University in Northridge, said the trips have taught him a lot about himself.

"I've gotten to know my strengths and my weaknesses," he said. "Life is my school and each day is like a new lesson."

He said he enjoys meeting people, and the trip has given him plenty of opportunities for that. He's stayed in the homes of mayors and city officials in small towns across the country, and has even stayed in jails when there was no place else for him to sleep.

White, 34, has a wife and two young daughters. He said he misses them, and they miss him, but his wife understands that it's something he has to do to work with youngsters and raise money for Boys' Clubs. White's appearance in an area with a Boys' Club often brings donations for the local group.

"They're kind of like my cheering section," White said. "Whenever I'm down, or tired, I call home and they give me a lift."

White has a change of clothes, a sweat suit, a couple books, some identification and some press clippings in a small back pack. He also carries a spare inner tube and bicycle tools in a separate bag. One and a half trips across the country have worn out 11 tires, he said.

White said he stops to eat about four times a day, usually eats organic food and fresh fruit and snacks constantly on honey, dates and raisins.

After a brief stop in Lincoln, White left for Omaha, where he will spend several days to rest, talk to youngsters at the Omaha Boys' Club and do some work on his bike. Then he plans to be off for New York, by way of Montreal for a brief stop at the Olympics.

Youngsters Turn Out For Show

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Some strange animals were seen singing and dancing around Zooville Square early Tuesday morning, much to the delight of a hundred-plus little people with parents in tow.

These were no ordinary animals. The two-legged, costumed creatures mde up the cast of "The Ballad of Fangless McRattle" in its opening performance at the Children's Zoo.

It is a musical with songs that bring out the spontaneous clapping and toe-tapping of onlookers. Even babies in strollers bounced to the beat of "Dang the Fangs."

The snappy choreography of Karen McWilliams and the pace of the performers, under the direction of David Meisenholder, were aptly geared to the fickle attention spans of wee ones.

It's a musical with a moral that even the young audience couldn't miss.

At first, "Fangless didn't think about her friends, but afterwards (the rescue) she didn't care about her fangs. It was like she learned a lesson," says Mia Duchek, 10.

"It's better to have friends than want something," agrees Michael Pallesen, 10. His brother Edward, 7, adds: "It's better to care about people than fangs."

The morality of the characters sometimes confused the youngsters.

Edward liked Porcupine Pete, but agreed that he was both good and bad. "He was bad because he liked to cut off fur and trade it and he was good because he got put under a spell."

Mia couldn't decide about Dr. Fabulous Fox (Dan Twarling), a charlatan medicine man. The "doctor" was using Amy the Otter to advertise his hair-growing potions, but at least he "didn't want to trade her in" like Porcupine Pete — a lesson in relative evils.

Porcupine Pete was definitely the bad guy in Edward's eyes: "He was trying to bribe Amy into getting killed." But the attraction of the 30,000 quills on Pete's back somewhat countered his evil ways.

Lily LaLoon the Old Raccoon (Melissa Baer) seemed less threatening in her dishonesty.

The specta-sound technique which had the characters synchronize their lips with the pre-taped broadcast sound gave the youngsters no trouble in hearing dialogue and lyrics.

"I was surprised they mouthed it," says Mia.

Mia liked when Fangless made her hissing sound and tried to scare people. When some of Fangless' terrorizing tactics sent two youngsters scurrying away, Edward was amused. "That was probably planned," his older brother wisely suggested.

The magic tricks of Dr. Fox had Edward second-guessing the disappearing wand act, but puzzling how white gloves turned into flowers. "I knew it was a trick but I don't know how," he confesses.

Would Jeff Kooser, 9, be tricked into buying one of Dr. Fox' fabulous potions? — "No way!"

The weasel twins (Dan Reinehr and Craig Sovey) appealed to this youngster because they "were so sneaky in doing things."

Paul Tisdale, 8, was taken with a ground squirrel that momentarily stole the show as it scurried across the square under the actors' feet.

No criticisms of the fast-paced performance could the young reviewers find.

But if Paul had his druthers, he'd "change the hotness;" and Edward added: "If I was Father Nature, that's what I'd do."

Temperatures were in the 90s during the performance.

The delightful show, sponsored by State Federal Savings & Loan, will be staged at 10:30 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays through Aug. 12.

Milk Program's Future Is Uncertain

The City-County Health Department's milk sanitation program is tentatively funded for the 1975-76 fiscal year, but it is "still not certain whether the department will continue to administer the program, according to George Preece, Health Board president.

The Health Board tabled Tuesday night a decision on the milk program until August. Meanwhile, the City-County Common will review the matter.

Dr. Ed Lyman, Health Department, director, has said that the program costs about $100,000, of which $70,000 comes from the city.

The common could vote to turn the program over to the state.

Preece, Vice-President Dr. J. W. Upright, and Secretary Jan Gauger were elected re-elected Tuesday to serve for the next six months.

To Your Good Health:

Jogging Is Probable Cause Of Enlarged Calves, Charleyhorse

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have jogged for about two years now. My calves are getting large, to the point where now I can't zip up my knee-high boots. Will they keep getting larger?

Also, last year while jogging on a hot day one of my calves went into a severe cramp. I thought a baseball had hit my leg. I fell over and for days I couldn't put any weight on it. Have you heard of cramping causing such soreness? — Mrs. B. J.

The suddenness of the pain, as you describe it, suggests a charleyhorse, a result of severe muscle strain. It occurs when people put muscles to unaccustomed use for prolonged periods, as you did when you began jogging.

It reminds me of my favorite charleyhorse story. It occurred one hot summer day on the golf course. My companion, who hadn't golfed in years, was showing the strain. Suddenly he pulled up short and let out a yell. When I turned he was lying on the ground in pain.

He thought someone's tee shot had struck him in the back of the leg. But there was no tee-off area anywhere around. Nor was there any noticeable bruise at the point where he said the bll struck him: Later, he used the same term as you did — it was as though a baseball had hit him. He hobbled for a week.

A charleyhorse can be mighty painful if there is bleeding into the tissues. The pain usually disappears in a few days with no lasting results.

If you were perspiring greatly from jogging in the heat, that could have contributed to the leg muscle injury.

You don't report any repeat episodes, so you probably have conditioned your legs sufficiently by now.

As to your calves enlarging: They will enlarge to a certain point and stop. After two years of jogging they probably have reached that point.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I've learned that our five-year-old boy has otosclerosis. The specialist was baffled. We got a second opinion.

What do you think of this? Can you tell me more about it? I should mention that my mother has this, too. — Mrs. D. J.

It is a sponginess of certain bones of the middle ear, rare in youngsters his age. There could be hereditary factors at work, since your mother has it, too.

Any obstruction in the nose and throat, such as enlarged tonsils or adenoids, should be removed. Sodium fluoride has also been used to combat this. You might discuss this with your specialist.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you give me some suggestions or advice about drop foot. The front of the foot drops down and I have no control over it. I am unable to get any help. — Mrs. J. K.

This is a nerve disorder resulting in paralysis or a wasting of the muscles of the lower leg. It can be hereditary or the result of poisoning — by lead or alcohol, especially.

Often, physical therapy — massage and exercise — can improve things somewhat. Usually special braces are needed to support the foot. Males are more often affected by this than females.

In some cases there may be a protrusion of a spinal disc involved, and it may be possible to treat that surgically. I suggest you consult a neurologist to determine any treatable cause.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For many years I've been told I have a chronic bladder infection, and I have taken antibiotics for this often. I went to an allergy specialist and she told me the same thing — a chronic infection. Sometimes the doctor has it under control, but it reappears. I feel part of it is a food allergy.

Can you give me an explanation? — J. B.

Your suspicion of an allergy as a partial cause of your bladder problem could be correct, and you should continue your search, particularly for an offending food.

You could also have a coexisting chronic infection, for which the antibiotic would be effective. And if antibiotic therapy ends your bladder symptoms, you would have to suspect it was an infection rather than an allergy. An antibiotic would have no effect on an allergy.

A search for the site of infection should be initiated.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Proper nutrition is important in supplying the body with calcium and other minerals needed for bone growth and repair.

Bone minerals are constantly being torn down and rebuilt through the blood flow between the skeleton and the rest of the body. The Nebraska Medical Association reports that most of the calcium in the body is found in the bones, but calcium is also needed for the contraction of muscles, beating of the heart and blood clotting.

When the heart and other parts of the body needing calcium cannot get the amount needed, your body takes calcium from the bones.

Sentence Hangs Over His Head

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

What is the death penalty?

"It's a long, drawn-out process ... something you have to live with 24 hours a day."

So said Richard Holtan, 41, one of five men sentenced to die in Nebraska's electric chair, in an interview.

Three of the other five declined to be interviewed and the fifth, Wesley Peery, 51, of Lincoln, was still being processed into the Nebraska Penal Complex and was not available.

The U.S. Supreme Court outlawed all death penalty laws in 1972 as discriminatory. Nebraska and 34 other states re-enacted capital punishment laws and on July 2 the court handed down a second decision, upholding capital punishment in concept.

'Wholesale Murder'

From a practical standpoint, Holtan said, "You are talking about wholesale murder," in view of the more than 600 persons on death rows across the United States.

The key decision made by the court was that death was not cruel and unusual punishment.

"Certainly it is. There are so many aspects that are cruel ... and I'm talking now about from the sentencing on," Holtan said.

In the early days, he said, "it was done almost immediately" and was reserved strictly for premeditated murder. Today, he said appeals make it anything but immediate and a death that is not premeditated can result in a death sentence.

Pleaded No Contest

Holtan pleaded no contest, technically different from a guilty plea, to committing a murder while in the commission of a robbery. He was accused of shooting a man in an Omaha bar two years ago.

A major argument for the death penalty is that it is a deterrent.

"It is absolutely not a deterrent," Holtan said. "I've known a lot of cons and they didn't think about the end result being murder. A situation developed and it happened."

He also said he disputed a recent news story in which a decision was allegedly made to kill a person in Iowa because it, unlike Nebraska, did not have the death penalty.

Holtan, a veteran of 20 years in various penal institutions, was asked if he thought there are any cases where the death penalty is justified.

"That possibility exists," he said.

Holtan said he did not expect the death penalty when he pleaded no contest.

"But I knew when I gave myself up in Hawaii it was going to be a long trip."

Because the appeal process has only begun in Holtan's case, he was asked if there is any hope.

"There is and there isn't."

He said he wasn't going to let the situation "overwhelm" him. His ability to handle his sentence got him out of the state prison's adjustment, or isolation, center and into a job in the dental clinic. He said he spends a lot of his free time reading and plays softball.

End 'Inevitable'

Holtan said he realizes in the back of his mind there is the "inevitable" to accept.

"I haven't quite done that yet. But I am having trouble projecting beyond ... beyond anything like say six months. All you can really do is live for the moment. After all, even though the inevitable is there, who can really see the end?"

"Yet, I have a feeling ... a feeling that I still have something else to give."

But he said what he had to give might be limited because of time and said that was one reason he agreed to be interviewed. He said he hoped what he had to say would show those on the outside that convicts are human beings and ways would be found to help the criminal become a useful citizen.

Increases Hike Fund

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — Because of unexpected increases in federal and state funding, Iowa has $88 million more to spend for highways in fiscal 1977 than expected, Iowa Department of Transportation Commission members were told by DOT staff members.

Bicyclist Heading Across Continent

By JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writer

If you thought you were hot Sunday sitting out in your back yard, consider Lowell White, a California resident who rode his bicycle from Grand Island to Lincoln.

White made the 92-mile trip in nine hours on his 10-speed bike. But the trip was neither unusual nor taxing for him; White is in the midst of a cross-country bicycle trek from Los Angeles to New York.

This is the second such trip for White, who travels to various Boys' Clubs across the country to work with youth and teach bicycle fitness and safety. In September of 1975, he made the reverse trip in 2½ months.

He said he averages 95 miles a day, and the most he's ever traveled in a day is 150 miles. ("That was with a good tail wind.")

White, a physical education major at California State University in Northridge, said the trips have taught him a lot about himself.

"I've gotten to know my strengths and my weaknesses," he said. "Life is my school and each day is like a new lesson."

He said he enjoys meeting people, and the trip has given him plenty of opportunities for that. He's stayed in the homes of mayors and city officials in small towns across the country, and has even stayed in jails when there was no place else for him to sleep.

White, 34, has a wife and two young daughters. He said he misses them, and they miss him, but his wife understands that it's something he has to do to work with youngsters and raise money for Boys' Clubs. White's appearance in an area with a Boys' Club often brings donations for the local group.

"They're kind of like my cheering section," White said. "Whenever I'm down, or tired, I call home and they give me a lift."

White has a change of clothes, a sweat suit, a couple books, some identification and some press clippings in a small back pack. He also carries a spare inner tube and bicycle tools in a separate bag. One and a half trips across the country have worn out 11 tires, he said.

White said he stops to eat about four times a day, usually eats organic food and fresh fruit and snacks constantly on honey, dates and raisins.

After a brief stop in Lincoln, White left for Omaha, where he will spend several days to rest, talk to youngsters at the Omaha Boys' Club and do some work on his bike. Then he plans to be off for New York, by way of Montreal for a brief stop at the Olympics.

Youngsters Turn Out For Show

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Some strange animals were seen singing and dancing around Zooville Square early Tuesday morning, much to the delight of a hundred-plus little people with parents in tow

These were no ordinary animals The two-legged, costumed creatures rnde up the cast of 'The Ballad of Fangless McRattle" in its opening performance at the Children s Zoo

It is a musical with songs that bring out the spontaneous clapping and toe-tapping of onlookers Even babies in strollers bounced to the beat of "Dang the Fangs '

The snappy choreography of Karen McWilliams and the pace of the performers, under the direction of David Meisenholder, were aptly geared to the fickle attention spans of wee ones

The story by June Barbour with music by John Balamos tells how Fangless McRattle (Patti Monte) a hognose snake with a desperate desire to grow fangs gains confidence in herself while learning the importance of friends She surprises herself by rescuing Amy the Otter (Mary Beth Seewald) from Porcupine Pete (Nick Jones) who intends to sell her hide for a fur coat

It s a musical with a moral that even the young audience couldn't miss

At first "Fangless didn t think about her friends, but afterwards (the rescue) she didn't care about her fangs It was like she learned a lesson," says Mia Duchek, 10

'It s better to have friends than want something " agrees Michael Pallesen, 10 His brother Edward, 7, adds "It's better to care about people than fangs '

The morality of the characters sometimes confused the youngsters

Edward liked Porcupine Pete, but agreed that he was both good and bad "He was bad because he liked to cut off fur and trade it and he was good because he got put under a spell

Mia couldn't decide about Dr Fabulous Fox (Dan Twarling), a charlatan medicine man The "doctor" was using Amy the Otter to advertise his hair-growing potions, but at least he "didn t want to trade her in" like Porcupine Pete — a lesson in relative evils

Porcupine Pete was definitely the bad guy in Edward's eyes "He was trying to bribe Amy into getting killed." But the attraction of the 30,000 quills on Pete's back somewhat countered his evil ways

Lily LaLoon the Old Raccoon (Melissa Baer) seemed less threatening in her dishonesty

The specta-sound technique which had the characters synchronize their lips with the pre-taped broadcast sound gave the youngsters no trouble in hearing dialogue and lyrics

' I was surprised they mouthed it,' says Mia

Mia liked when Fangless made her hissing sound and tried to scare people When some of Fangless' terrorizing tactics sent two youngsters scurrying away, Edward was amused "That was probably planned," his older brother wisely suggested

The magic tricks of Dr Fox had Edward second-guessing the disappearing wand act, but puzzling how white gloves turned into flowers "I knew it was a trick but I don't know how ' he confesses

Would Jeff Kooser, 9 be tricked into buying one of Dr Fox' fabulous potions? — "No way!"

The weasel twins (Dan Reinehr and Craig Sovey) appealed to this youngster because they "were so sneaky in doing things '

Paul Tisdale, 8, was taken with a ground squirrel that momentarily stole the show as it scurried across the square under the actors' feet

No criticisms of the fast-paced performance could the young reviewers find

But if Paul had his druthers, he'd "change the hotness," and Edward added ' If I was Father Nature, that's what I'd do "

Temperatures were in the 90s during the performance

The delightful show, sponsored by State Federal Savings & Loan, will be staged at 10 30 a m Tuesdays and Thursdays through Aug 12

Milk Program's Future Is Uncertain

The City-County Health Department's milk sanitation program is tentatively funded for the 1975-76 fiscal year, but it is "still not certain whether the department will continue to administer the program, according to George Preece, Health Board president.

The Health Board tabled Tuesday night a decision on the milk program until August. Meanwhile, the City-County Common will review the matter.

Dr Ed Lyman, Health Department, director, has said that the program costs about $100,000, of which $70,000 comes from the city.

The common could vote to turn the program over to the state.

Preece, Vice-President Dr. J. W. Upright, and Secretary Jan Gauger were elected re-elected Tuesday to serve for the next six months.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, July 14, 1976

Scorpio can be forceful, dynamic. Sagittarius can be spiritual, talented and pretensious. The two — Scorpio and Sagittarius — might find that questions of money crate friction between them. The forthrightness of Scorpio might not blend well with the sensitive pride of Sagittarius. Favorite Scorpio persons: Katharaine Hepburn and Theodore Roosevelt. Sagittarian who makes me laugh: John Davidson. Sagittarian who makes me listen: Maria Callas. The two signs — Sagittarius and Scopio — provide us with stimulating insights — and controversy. What do you say?

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What was hidden, confined, kept under cover is due to erupt. Know it and prepare; refuse to be caught off guard. Finish project. Don't hang on to losing situation. One who counsels spending more on what has been a disappointment . . . could have ulterior motive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Promise may not be broken, but situation no longer is what you anticipated. You have to revise, review and take second look at one who seemed so positive. Obtain valid hint from Aries message. Set up your own safeguards.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get what has been "missing." You feel more secure as result. Aquarius, Cancer persons could be featured. Emphasis on status quo, routine, home base, occupation. Plenty of action in these areas — they're not likely to remain the same!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stress versatility. Expand activities. Socialize. Make contacts. One at a distance could misquote you. Know it and take appropriate measures. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. A relative is energetic and in mood to debate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be conservative in financial dealings. Don't promise more than is practical. Read small print. Check for hidden clauses. Count your change. Emphasis on removal of money roadblock. Aquarius, Scorpio figure prominently. You get glimmer of truth — and that is healthy!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be analytical. Don't be satisfied merely that something occurred — find out why it happened. Go slow enough to be thorough. Member of opposite sex has some requests. They may be inconvenient to carry out, but they are legitimate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Moderate pace is most constructive. Diplomacy is better than attempted force. There are hidden matters involved, perhaps traps. Know it and act accordingly. Family situation is clarified. You're more contented as result.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get view that has "backstage" flavor. The obvious may be deceptive. Inner workings are more likely to provide true picture. Lover's quarrel should not be blown up out of proportion. Quick changes are indicated. Be logical as well as impulsive. Don't be stampeded into judgment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on construction, structure, strength, solidity. Means don't rely on house of cards. Meaning should become increasingly clear. Be responsible; organize data. Bring priorities into focus. Capricorn, Cancer could figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hold off on trips, confrontations with neighbors, relatives. Key now is to let go of past; be ready for plunge into future. Being sentimental about a losing project could be adolescent. Reach beyond previous limitations. Libra, Aries individuals could be part of scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New approach, added independence indicated. Leo is very much in picture. Money, costs, reimbursements are to be considered. You locate "lost article." You express in creative manner. Member of opposite sex is attracted, makes no secret of it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lunar cycle is such that you get publicity, more attention — and your judgment, intuition are more apt to be on target. Digestive system, a problem in past, is under control. You feel stronger, more positive. Aquarius, Cancer and Capricorn figure prominently.

IF JULY 14TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have plenty of curiosity, you can write, speak, sell. You are sensitive, temperamental and you do all the "wrong" things (at times) where nutrition is concerned. You enjoy "threats" and have a tendency to indulge yourself. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. September could be an outstanding month this year. You'll come back, you will overcome emotional setback, a hangover of last year.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, July 14, 1976

Scorpio can be forceful, dynamic. Sagittarius can be spiritual, talented and pretensious. The two — Scorpio and Sagittarius — might find that questions of money create friction between them. The forthrightness of Scorpio might not blend well with the sensitive pride of Sagittarius. Favorite Scorpio persons: Katharaine Hepburn and Theodore Roosevelt. Sagittarian who makes me laugh: John Davidson. Sagittarian who makes me listen: Maria Callas. The two signs — Sagittarius and Scopio — provide us with stimulating insights — and controversy. What do you say?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What was hidden, confined, kept under cover is due to erupt. Know it and prepare; refuse to be caught off guard. Finish project. Don't hang on to losing situation. One who counsels spending more on what has been a disappointment . . . could have ulterior motive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Promise may not be broken, but situation no longer is what you anticipated. You have to revise, review and take second look at one who seemed so positive. Obtain valid hint from Aries message. Set up your own safeguards.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get what has been "missing." You feel more secure as result. Aquarius, Cancer persons could be featured. Emphasis on status quo, routine, home base, occupation. Plenty of action in these areas — they're not likely to remain the same!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stress versatility. Expand activities. Socialize. Make contacts. One at a distance could misquote you. Know it and take appropriate measures. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. A relative is energetic and in mood to debate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be conservative in financial dealings. Don't promise more than is practical. Read small print. Check for hidden clauses. Count your change. Emphasis on removal of money roadblock. Aquarius, Scorpio figure prominently. You get glimmer of truth — and that is healthy!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be analytical. Don't be satisfied merely that something occurred — find out why it happened. Go slow enough to be thorough. Member of opposite sex has some requests. They may be inconvenient to carry out, but they are legitimate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Moderate pace is most constructive. Diplomacy is better than attempted force. There are hidden matters involved, perhaps traps. Know it and act accordingly. Family situation is clarified. You're more contented as result.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get view that has "backstage" flavor. The obvious may be deceptive. Inner workings are more likely to provide true picture. Lover's quarrel should not be blown up out of proportion. Quick changes are indicated. Be logical as well as impulsive. Don't be stampeded into judgment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on construction, structure, strength, solidity. Means don't rely on house of cards. Meaning should become increasingly clear. Be responsible; organize data. Bring priorities into focus. Capricorn, Cancer could figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hold off on trips, confrontations with neighbors, relatives. Key now is to let go of past; be ready for plunge into future. Being sentimental about a losing project could be adolescent. Reach beyond previous limitations. Libra, Aries individuals could be part of scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New approach, added independence indicated. Leo is very much in picture. Money, costs, reimbursements are to be considered. You locate "lost article." You express in creative manner. Member of opposite sex is attracted, makes no secret of it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lunar cycle is such that you get publicity, more attention — and your judgment, intuition are more apt to be on target. Digestive system, a problem in past, is under control. You feel stronger, more positive. Aquarius, Cancer and Capricorn figure prominently.

IF JULY 14TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have plenty of curiosity, you can write, speak, sell. You are sensitive, temperamental and you do all the "wrong" things (at times) where nutrition is concerned. You enjoy "threats" and have a tendency to indulge yourself. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. September could be an outstanding month this year. You'll come back, you will overcome emotional setback, a hangover of last year.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
